Israel Hunts Assassins of Bernadotte; 200 Jailed

Stern Gang Chiefs Believed Arrested; Jews Fear Arabs May Resume War

Tel Aviv, Israel, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Israeli government announced tonight that its intensive manhunt for the assassins of Count Folke Bernadotte has resulted in the arrest of "some of the supposed leaders of the Stern Gang."

The government has charged the Sternists, a Jewish extremist group, with the slaying of the United Nations mediator and his French aide, Col. Andre Serot, in the Jewish part of Jerusalem yesterday.

Israeli authorities began moving Jewish troops into position in the fear that the shooting down of Bernadotte and Serot might be followed by a full scale war with the Arabs.

Jerusalem Under Curfew

The Israeli announcement said more than 200 arrests have been made to try to find the killers. Jerusalem's 90,000 Jewish residents have been placed under virtual house arrest by a curfew order.

A spokesman said the Israeli army has invited members of the U. N. staff who witnessed the assassinations to view a parade of suspects Sunday.

Jews were called upon to rise and track down the "traitors in our midst" and the "criminal gang responsible" for the slayings. All roads into Jerusalem were closed. No departures were allowed from Israel's airfields and harbors in order to prevent suspects from slipping out of the country.

Meanwhile, high United Nations officials in Haifa disclosed that a recommendation may be sent to the Security Council in Paris calling for the creation of a 6000-man international army, to compel Jews and Arabs to accept the authority of the U. N. over the Holy City.

Stern, Irgun Deny Deed

The Government said none of those arrested was a member of the Jewish army.

There were no outbreaks and Stern leaders were noticeably absent from their usual haunts in offices and cafes.

Notes signed by the "Fatherland Front" were slipped under the doors of consulates in Jerusalem last night saying "we killed Bernadotte because he was working for the British." The organization has been unknown heretofore.

Leaders of both the Stern and Irgun bands in Jersualem vigorously denied responsibility for the killings.

The action of the Israel army in moving into position presumably

'Birthplace' Cabin In Lincoln Shrine Declared a Hoax

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The log cabin now enshrined at Hodgenville, Ky., as the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln is a hoax, a Lincoln historian charged today.

Roy Hays, Grosse Point, Mich., said the cabin isn't even wholly reconstructed from the original "hoax cabin."

He said some of the logs in the cabin, now preserved at the Abraham Lincoln National Historical Park, came from another hoax—the alleged birthplace cabin of Jefferson Davis, Confederate Civil War president.

Hays quoted a letter written in 1919 by Lincoln's son, Robert Todd Lincoln, who said:

"The structure now enshrined in a great marble building in Kentuck is a fraud when represented as the actual home."

Hays said the National Park Service "has never deceived the people about its authenticity, but neither has it told the whole truth."

U. S. Suspending 50 Workers; Jury to Hear Loyalty Charges

By Jerry Kluttz
Copyright, 1948, by The Washington Post

The Administration is engaged in an unprecedented mass crackdown on Federal workers it has reason to believe are disloyal, The Washington Post learned last night.

About 50 suspected employes in a score of departments and agencies either have been or will be suspended from their jobs for loyalty reasons, a top Administration official has revealed to this reporter.

The suspensions were personally ordered by high-ranking Justice Department officials. The President's loyalty program permits employes to be suspended in serious disloyalty cases where the Nation's security is endangered.

The Justice officials were quoted as saying they were prepared to bring criminal charges against most of the 50 employes on the ground of either perjury or fraud in concealing their membership in the Communist Party. At least three special grand juries—perhaps one in this city—will be convened to hear the cases, which are being prepared by Justice's criminal division, it was said.

The officials also are reported to have hinted to agency operators that a definite link had been established between several of the suspended employes in different parts of the country. If true, it could mean exposure of a spy ring.

Nevertheless, the blunt orders to suspend are known to have been followed most reluctantly by several department and agency officials who suspect partisan politics were an influencing factor.

True or not, more than one official has suggested the suspensions and grand jury actions are being timed to help President Truman's reelection campaign. On the other hand, the suspicious agree that some of the employes should be prosecuted.

This is the story behind the crackdown as told to this reporter:

About three weeks ago Attorney

Murder Order Issued for Man In Car Enigma

Routine, Anne Arundel Chief Says; Search for Missing Couple Vain

Glen Burnie, Md., Sept. 18 (AP).—A 25-year-old postoffice worker and his date were still missing tonight, and police said his blood-stained automobile failed to provide any positive clues as to their fate or whereabouts.

The car was found early today on a lonely back road about four miles from here.

Anne Arundel County Police Chief John H. Souers issued a "wanted for murder" order for the missing man, John H. Mahlan.

He was last seen with his date, 18-year-old Mary C. Kline, also of Glen Burnie, when he picked her up last night for a ride.

Chief Souers described the pick-up order as "routine." He said it was sent out because Mahlan was the last person known to have seen Mary Kline.

More than 300 volunteer searchers unsuccessfully scoured the woods and fields near where the car was found. The search was called off about 6:30 p. m. after a severe electrical storm struck the area.

Chief Souers said the search would be resumed at 8:30 a. m. Sunday. The assumption among townspeople was that possibly a thousand or so more volunteers would join in the hunt.

Police found the automobile near Old Annapolis rd. and Lipin's Corners, after parents of the couple reported them missing this morning.

It was parked at the end of a short side road, near a bean patch. A clump of trees hid it from the main road.

Police said a bullet apparently had been fired through the right front door window from the out-

Three Envoys Go to Kremlin For 11th Time

Nothing Announced On Talk or Possibility Of Another Meeting

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Western envoys met today with Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, possibly to receive final Russian word on proposals for settling the Berlin crisis.

The usual secrecy surrounded the session—the eleventh in the Kremlin on East-West differences in the past 51 days and the second this week.

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith told newsmen after today's talks:

"The three Western envoys had a delightful 2-hour and 30-minute talk with Mr. Molotov. I have no comment."

Smith said he stayed behind at the Kremlin for a five-minute talk with Molotov. He said it was on a "purely Soviet-American matter" but he would not divulge its nature.

He would not say whether the meetings were at an end or would be continued.

Special British Envoy Frank Roberts and French Ambassador Yves Chataigneau met with Smith in the U. S. Embassy after the meeting. Then they filed reports to their home governments—the usual procedure.

A meeting last Tuesday was the first with Molotov since August 30 when the four negotiators reached agreement in principle on establishing a Soviet mark as the only currency for Berlin.

Details were passed on to the four military governors in Berlin. The governors conferred seven times, then reported to their governments without reaching any agreement.

Red-Led Mob Fights 20,000 De Gaullists

1 Dead, 17 Injured; Jeeps Set Afire; Troops Called To Stop Battle

Grenoble, France, Sept. 18 (AP).—One man was shot to death and 17 were injured in a melee of fists, clubs and bullets when opponents of Gen. Charles de Gaulle tried to break up a political rally he addressed today.

Troops were called and moved in to break up the battle, which swirled about a monument to France's famed soldiers, the Blue Devils.

One of the injured was in critical condition. Eleven of the others required hospitalization. Several jeeps belonging to De Gaulle's party were burned during the fight.

Thousands Battle

The major battle in the center of the city involved some 20,000 adherents to De Gaulle's party, the Rally of the French People (RPF), and several thousand of his rivals, who were reported to have been led by Communists.

The battle began in the city's suburbs and was resumed at the moment after De Gaulle had ended his speech and moved on toward Chambery.

The general's opponents jeered as his car passed through the suburb, and scattered nails in the highway to slow the party down. At one point, when De Gaulle stopped to place a wreath on a memorial to Nazi victims, his opponents tried to drown out his remarks with boos.

Mayor Hit by Blackjack

In the suburb of Fontaine the Communist mayor was hit by a blackjack in the battle.

In the main battle, after De Gaulle's speech, several of the troops called to restore order were injured.

At Chambery, De Gaulle was to conclude the campaign he began September 10 to convince the French people they need new elections.

Queuille to Demand Vote of Confidence

Paris, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Premier Henri Queuille was authorized by the cabinet today to call for an Assembly vote of confidence on his drastic tax and economic reform plan.

By forcing a showdown vote, Queuille reportedly hopes to get fringe elements of his coalition parties to approve his economic program.

In a plea for Assembly approval, Queuille said: "Failure to pass this bill will mean misery for France's little man, ruin for many and perhaps the end of this regime."

Queuille said 135,000 civil servants already had been dismissed. A decree tomorrow will fire 10 per cent of the employes in the nationalized electricity industry, he said.

Wall St. Gluttons Back GOP, Truman Tells Iowa Farmers; Dewey Urges Record Crops

Iowa Gives Ear . . .

'Cold and Cunning' Men Putting Up Fabulous Sums, President Claims

(Text on Page 6)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Dexter, Iowa, Sept. 18.—President Truman warned a crowd of 75,000 today that Wall street "gluttons of privilege" were spending "fabulous sums of money" to elect his Republican opponent, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

The Iowa farmers, many of them well-to-do capitalists themselves, did not seem to share Mr. Truman's indignation over Wall Street. Not a single handclap or cheer was heard as he tore into the "cold" and "cunning" men who operate from there.

The Chief Executive, an old dirt farmer himself, spoke amid fields of golden corn, where experts from 11 States were competing in the National Plowing Match.

No Mules Around

Mr. Truman watched the master plowmen, astride tractors, turning up the rich Iowa soil, but took no part himself. He said later he might have tried his hand, but there were no mules around.

Somebody pointed to percherons, each weighing about 2500 pounds, and suggested he might hitch these to a plow. The President, however, confessed that he was too old to handle them.

Mr. Trumna made 14 talks in all today, and looked nearly as weary as the reporters who were covering him. He began the oratorical marathon at 5:45 this morning with a platform appearance at Rock Island, Ill.

Crowd Is Prosperous One

It was a prosperous-looking assemblage that turned out in Dexter. Some 50 or 60 of the farmers arrived in their own planes. Many in the crowd, it was said, paid income taxes of $15,000 or $25,000 a year.

Although he failed to fetch them with his attack on Wall Street, Mr. Truman was given a friendly reception in Iowa. A sky-writing plane wrote "Welcome" up above, bands tooted the "Missouri Waltz," and everywhere there were waving arms and smiling faces.

In Des Moines, where the President went from here, a crowd of 50,000 turned out to greet him, and this on a Saturday half-holiday.

The people who heard him here in Dexter liked some of Mr. Truman's sallies. They laughed when

93 Farm Editors Trade Barnyard Notes as Guests at Governor's Place

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Pawling, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today warmed up for his Western swing by trading barnyard and farm notes with agriculture editors from all over the United States.

He shook hands and chatted individually with 93 farm news and radio editors, ate a picnic lunch with them in Pawling's Grange Hall, and then led an inspection tour of his 300-acre dairy farm.

Between times, they all took their hair down on farm problems at a shirtsleeved "bull" session. Their informal verdict: What the farmers really want are fewer Government controls and subsidy payments and more technical help from the Soil Conservation Service.

Starts Trip Sunday

Dewey was plainly having the time of his life demonstrating to the "experts" that in addition to racket-busting and running a big State he knows a thing or two about practical farming.

This was his last day as a "farmer" in many weeks. Late Sunday the most confident Republican bandwagon in recent history, scared only of its own assurance, will roll west out of Albany on a 17-car train.

Every precision line of the campaign has been rehearsed and the theme is still this: "Steady, steady—don't overreach nor yet stub your toe."

The idea on this two-week, 8500-mile trip and the others to follow is to build confidence in the competence of the Republican candidate by running "for Dewey" rather than "against Truman."

Brashness Is Out

The cautious urge to coast to victory will be tempered by enough free-wheeling imagination to keep interest high, but without any needless alley-flighting on the way. Brashness is in quarantine for the tour.

At least that is what the Dewey "brain trust" is advising. They aim to build faith in their man to a peak that come war or peace the country will still turn to him.

Today's Pawling "outing" with farm editors followed Dewey's flat Friday declaration for a price support program established in the compromise Hope-Aiken bill.

Representative Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) and Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), joint authors of the law, joined the Pawling farm picnic today.

In separate talks with newsmen, Aiken and Hope agreed Congress isn't likely to "monkey" with the parity formulas next

Politicians 'Playing to Lose' Frost Campaign in Virginia

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Richmond, Sept. 18.—You find two kinds of politics in Virginia this season.

Some Virginians are playing politics to win. Others appear to be playing politics to lose.

It's the second kind that muddles things, but not enough to conceal these signs:

1. State Democratic organization leaders, individually silent for the most part about their aims, have been fighting President Truman's election hopes by strict inaction.

2. Pro-Truman Democrats may be expected to move shortly into some active campaigning, aimed both at keeping Virginia in the national Democratic column in November, and at eventually making some anti-Truman political heads roll in the State.

3. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey has a solid chance to carry the State for the GOP, based both on past performance and promise of a hard-hitting campaign in the State. Herbert Hoover carried it in 1928.

4. Dixiecrats are getting organized to take as many votes as they can from Truman.

Playing to lose has been the keynote of the approach made so far by the dominant Democrat organization in Virginia to the little matter of the presidential elections.

In Richmond, the capital and political center of Virginia, you see no Truman placards, no Truman banners, no Truman pictures, no Truman buttons. The same goes for Barkley.

In fact, there is not yet a Truman-Barkley campaign headquarters there.

There are two Richmond offices

Gold Bay, Alaska, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The B-29 called "Hi Butch," one of the 63 that converged on the United States today, made a feather-touch landing with one engine out, another afire and its bomb-bay doors hanging loose and dripping high-octane gasoline. Fifteen of us were aboard.

For 30 harrowing minutes, at 20,000 feet over the wintry North Pacific, "Hi Butch" was the scene of frenzied activity.

In the open bomb-bay, two crewmen worked feverishly along the ice-coated sides to chop away a loose gas tank. At any time a spark from their ax could have touched off the gas.

The Air Force wrote its own "happy birthday" across much of the world yesterday, and underscored it with speed and transport records.

It was a big and costly birthday party that sent the United States Air Force into its second year as a coequal department with the Army and Navy.

Thousand of warplanes flew in dozens of localized shows tied together with a mighty criss-cross of bomber tracks from eight major overseas bases to 25 cities at home.

In New York, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg announced a new world speed record of 670.981 miles an

Nazi Surgeon's Prosecutor Will Brave Operation

Frankfurt, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—Behind the barbed-wire fence of the Darmstadt interment camp on Monday, a German will risk death to challenge the wartime medical experiments of a Nazi S. S. (Elite Guard) doctor by submitting to the same operation performed on hundreds of concentration camp inmates, the Offenbach Post reported tonight.

Werner Hammel, chief de-Nazification prosecutor at Darmstadt, will submit to an operation on his liver by Dr. Robert Neumann, formerly of the Waffen S. S. Dr. Neumann's accusers said most of his operations resulted in death. He is facing a de-Nazification tribunal at Darmstadt. Hammel is his chief prosecutor.

Dr. Neumann will make an incision of the peritoneum to extract a slice of Hammel's liver Monday.

"I am willing to take a chance with Neumann," Hammel said. "I have a liver ailment that needs a drastic cure. Besides as a public official I must know whether this particular operation is a medical crime or not," he said.

Shri Rajendrasinhji, Hyderabad Victor, Recalled Here for Suave Manners, Curries

In India, the fame of Lieut. Gen. Mahara Shri Rajendra sinhji will endure as the conqueror of fabulous Hyajerabad, a whirlwind accomplishment in less than a week of fighting.

In Washington, however, the fame of "Ra"—as he was known by American friends—rests on his kitchen accomplishments. During two visits to this country, the suave-mannered maharaj demonstrated superb skill as a curry cook.

LIEUT. GEN. MAHARAJ SHIRI RAJENDRASINHJI
They called him "Rj"

The English-educated Indian noble is also remembered for having introduced a novel hot-weather drink: ice cold buttermilk with grated onion and thyme.

In turn, the affable "Raj" adopted that quaint American custom practiced south of the Mason-Dixon line: drinking his bourbon with "branch water."

Lords of Nawanagar

"Raj" is a member of a noble Indian family which for hundreds of years has run the rice-growing, commerce-minded state of Nawanagar, which sticks out like an ear on India's west coast just north of Bombay. His cousin, Jam Sahib, is the ruling maharaja, and incidentally, one of the Indian Union's delegates to the United Nations.

(A maharaja, the Indian Embassy explains, is a ruler of a princely state. "Maharaj" is a title assumed by kin of the maharaja.)

General Rejendrasinhji's family has been sending its sons to English schools for several generations. Two of "Raj's" cousins, Ranjitsinhji (now dead) and Duleepsinhji, won acclaim as crack cricketers.

"Raj" attended Eton, and then went on to Sandhurst, the British West Point. He was commissioned in 1921 in Britain's Indian Army.

Fought Desert Fox

He fought against Rommel in Africa early in World War II. As a squadron commander of the Second Royal Lancers, "Raj" led his entrapped men in a direct charge against German tanks and guns for a break-through escape. For this action, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order, first Indian soldier to win that decoration in the war.

"Raj" was sent to this country on an official mission in 1943. The 40-year-old dark-haired, dark-eyed, fair-skinned officer, broad shouldered and then slim waisted—he has since expanded around the middle—charmed Washington with his gracious manners.

At the suggestion of a Texas patriot, he made an extensive tour of the Lone Star State, where at times he substituted a 10-gallon Stetson for his 10-yards-of-silk turban. He returned from the trip with a noticeable "you-all" accent.

Second Highest in Army

The maharaj was sent to Washington again in 1945, this time as military attache, but only for a year. He returned to assume increasingly important military commands, and today is commander in the south, second highest senior officer in the Indian Union army.

Besides military prowess and culinary skill, General Rajendrasinhji has some reputation here as a tongue-in-cheek wit. Once, a young woman asked the maharaj how many wives he had. "Forty," replied the Indian with his characteristic twinkle.

"Forty!" gasped the young lady. "How can you possibly get along with so many women?

"My dear," replied "Raj," "it's simple enough. You see, none of my wives is American."

U. N. Is Urged To Protect Peacemakers

Paris, Sept. 18 (AP).—Secretary-General Trygve Lie today demanded that the United Nations take stern measures to protect the lives of its peacemakers such as Count Folke Bernadotte.

Lie angrily told the Security Council that the assassination of the mediator was "a direct act of attempted interference with the efforts of the U. N. to settle the Palestine question.

Members of the 11-nation council listened gravely as one delegate after another expressed horror and indignation over the slaying of Bernadotte and his aide, French Col. Andre Serot.

One delegate, Dr. Jose Arce of Argentina, openly accused the newly formed government of Israel of apparently failing to prevent the attack at a time when such an incident was likely to destroy the U. N.'s work for Palestine peace.

"How can the new nation of Israel be regarded as peace-loving when murders of this sort occur within its borders," Arce asked.

Blames Big Powers

Off the floor, Arce said the U. N. needs an army of 10,000 men to keep order in the Holy Land. He blamed the big powers for the current turmoil, declaring:

"This murder, done in the worst way, is in reality the fault of the big powers. Their inability to agree on creation of armed force has resulted in the tragic death of a peace-loving gentleman from a peace-loving country."

Lie told the council that Count Bernadotte and Colonel Serot were the seventh and eighth U. N. representatives killed in line of duty during hostilities in the Middle East.

"Their murders came as a climax to a series of grave incidents which have reflected an unprecedented and intolerable lack of respect for the dignity and authority of the United Nations," he added. "The count's slaying demands an answer to the question of what shall be done in the future to protect those who serve the United Nations."

The Council scheduled a meeting early next week for double-barrelled U.N. action on Palestine.

The Council will receive Bernadotte's 35,000-word report on his mediation efforts. The Palestine question also was placed on the agenda of the Assembly.

Shertok Pledges Action

Lie received a cable from Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok promising "most vigorous and energetic measures" against the slayers.

Aubrey S. Eban, Israel's representative to the council, told the Associated Press his government is "now conducting a vast purge" of Jewish terrorist leaders. He joined in condemning the killings.

Khaled Bey Azm, Syrian minister to France, said "September 17, 1948, should mark the turning point in restoration of a just peace and repression of terrorism in Palestine."

Sir Alexander Cadogan of Britain, September president of the Council, expressed horror at "this senseless and disastrous crime."

United States Delegate Philip K. Jessup said Bernadotte's sacrifice had not been in vain and the U. N. activities in Palestine should be intensified.

Burial Expenses Paid

Russia's Jacob A. Malik renewed the Soviet appeal for carrying out the plan to partition Palestine.

Council members and spectators stood in silence at the close of the meeting in solemn respect to the memory of the Swedish count and his French companion. The Council unanimously adopted a resolution ordering the blue and white U. N. flag kept at half staff for three days and authorizing Lie to pay all burial expenses of the two victims.

Israel Pledges Faith In Truce Observers

Lake Success, Sept. 18 (NYHT.).—Israeli representatives pledged faith today in the honesty and sincerity of United Nations truce observers and gave assurances that every effort was being made to root out the assassin of Mediator Count Folke Bernadotte.

United Nations headquarters received scores of messages and reports from all sides in the struggle to prop up the tottering Palestine truce, Dr. Ralph J. # 10 Air Show Viewers Die

Manston, England, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Mosquito bomber, plunging out of control, killed 10 persons and injured 14 in a crowd watching a Battle of Britain commemorative air show today. This was one of three fatal aerial accidents of the day in which five RAF airmen died.

The two-engined plane, stunting over the Manston RAF Station plummeted from 800 feet, swept through a line of automobiles and exploded in view of 15,000 spectators.

Burning wreckage was scattered over private cars and a 32-passenger bus, setting them on fire and scorching some of the occupants beyond recognition.

Killed on the spot were the plane's pilot and navigator and seven other persons, including a 13-year-old boy who had been watching the flight from a road. One man died later in a hospital.

Slayers Fired From 5 Feet, Begley Says

Haifa, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—Frank S. Begley, U. N. Security officer, who drove the sedan in which the assassination of Count Bernadotte occurred, today gave details of the slaying.

"It was a cold, vicious and calculated job," he said. "Bernadotte was the guy they wanted and he was helpless. He was no more than 5 feet away when they opened up on him."

Begley said Bernadotte was in the third and last car of the U. N. convoy which drove from the Red Cross zone at Government House into the Jewish suburb of Katamon.

"A brown-painted Israeli-type jeep blocked the road," he added. "Four soldiers in Israeli-type uniform approached us when we halted. There were two on each side—two with tommy guns, one with a Sten gun and one with a revolver. When I opened the door and tried to get out, one fired past my head into the back seat. Two others on the far side pumped bullets into the open back window They were no more than 5 feet from Bernadotte.

"They were only after Bernadotte. They didn't bother the front cars except to put bursts into the tires so they wouldn't be able to chase. There were about 15 people around when the shooting started."

General Lundstroem, who rode in the rear seat with Count Bernadotte and Colonel Serot, but miraculously escaped injury, picked up the story from this point in his official report.

"Serot fell in the seat toward me and I saw immediately he was dead. Bernadotte bent forward and I thought at the time he was trying to get cover. I asked him, 'Are you wounded?' He nodded and fell back. I helped him lie down in the car and I now understood he was severely wounded as there was considerable amount of blood on his clothes mainly around the heart." General Lundstroem then told how the car rushed to Hadassah Hospital atop Mount Scopus, where doctors began examinations a few minutes later. Count Bernadotte died in the hospital, a bullet through his heart.

General Lundstroem said the suggestion was made to Bernadotte that it was safer to proceed from Government House to the Jewish zone by a devious route instead of through Katamon. The mediator answered: "I would not do that. I have taken the same risks as my observers. I think, moreover, no one has the right to refuse me permission from crossing the lines."

Begley said the doctor who performed the autopsy on Bernadotte told him the mediator's heart was split by one bullet and no medical aid could have saved him.

Scot's Hope Falters for Red Family

London, Sept. 16 (U.P.).—Charles Aish is close to 50. He's pretty nearly convinced that he's lost his Russian home, his Russian wife, and his three daughters, but he hasn't given up hope yet.

Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, printed a letter Friday supposed to have been written by his wife, Maria, in which she rejected his entreaties to come to Britain with their family.

Aish doesn't believe she wrote it. Only a month ago, in a personal letter to him, she pledged affectionately to stick by him whatever happened.

Scotsman In Russia

He was born in White Russia, the son of a Scotsman who settled there as a farmer. Aish grew up in Russia and took over his father's farm.

When the new Soviet government ordered his farm collectivized with all the others in the area, Aish protested through the British embassy in Moscow. The Russians let him keep his tiny farm in the sea of collectivized agriculture.

Helped by his wife whom he married in Leningrad in 1934, he made his farm successful. Soviet officials let him alone.

The German invaders swept over his farm in 1941. He was interned in Germany and his wife and children were left in Russia. Allied troops liberated the farmer and he was repatriated to Scotland, because, he said, he had had a bellyful of Russia.

Delayed Reunion

Aish wrote to his wife to ask her to join him in Glasgow. Her letters said she loved him, but she did not want to leave her fatherland. With other British husbands he was told their Russian wives could not come to England. The Foreign Office interceded in their behalf, but without success.

A Foreign Office spokesman said today Aish could go to Russia if he wanted to. His wife's alleged letter, in Izvestia, had said somewhat belligerently that if he really wanted a reunion he could join her.

Aish said he would await the outcome of the Chilean proposal before the United Nations in Paris demanding that Russain wives be allowed to join their western husbands.

Japanese Flood Toll Now Placed at 858

Tokyo, Sept. 18.—Japanese officials reported 858 dead and 700 missing today in the wake of typhoon-born floods in central and northern Honshu. Japanese casualty figures generally are exaggerated. Propertly damage ran into millions of yen.

Tarue Reported Trapped

Manila, Philippines, Sept. 18 (U.P.). Hukbalahap Chief Luis Taruc and 150 of his armed peasant rebel followers were reported trapped on an island in the Candaba swamps today.

Reds Charge U. S. Maltreated Crippled Girl Yielded Them

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Russian Communist Party newspaper Pravda charged today that American authorities in Berlin had half-starved a crippled Soviet girl and used her "in their usual anti-Soviet provocations."

The girl, Helena Korolenko, 19, was released from an American sector hospital last week so she could return to the Soviet zone. She is a Soviet citizen and an infantile paralysis victim.

Pravda's Berlin dispatch, broadcast by Moscow radio, said that the girl had been "extremely emaciated through long and systematic underfeeding" when she entered the hospital.

Now, the dispatch said, she has "noticeably brightened and become more lively. By the efforts of the Soviet people the child has been torn from the hands of provocateurs and returned where she belongs."

The girl had become the center of a minor United States-Soviet dispute recently. The Russians charged the Americans with holding her against her will. United States hospital authorities, in turn, said she was happy where she was.

5 Nations Call Defense Talk

London, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The permanent commission of Europe's Western Union today announced that defense ministers of the five member nations will meet September 27 in Paris.

The announcement said the ministers probably would be accompanied by subordinate military chiefs. The meeting was described as a routine session "within the framework of the Brussels Treaty."

Observers here attached special significance to the meeting because of the strained situation created in western Europe by the Berlin crisis, and because of the United Nations General Assembly meeting, which opens September 21 in the French capital.

Frankfurt, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—A partially completed monument erected at Torgau on the Elbe River to commemorate the first wartime meeting of American and Russian troops on April 24, 1945, is now being dismantled by order of the Soviet military government, according to refugees newly arrived from the Russian zone.

The work on the monument came to a stop last summer. Now all trace of the Soviet memorial to American-Russian wartime collaboration is rapidly being erased.

India Appoints Military Chief In Hyderabad

New Delhi, Sept. 18 (AP).—India cracked down today on Hyderabad by appointing a military governor for the conquered princely state.

Hyderabad troops surrendered unconditionally and a triumphant Indian armored column marched into Secunderabad, military garrison for the capital of Hyderabad.

A 7 p. m. to 6 a. m. curfew was clamped on Hyderabad City, the capital.

Orders were issued for the arrest of Qazim Razvi, the fiery Moslem leader who had vowed holy war if India dared put foot on the "holy Islamic soil of Hyderabad."

Reliable sources said India would order dissolution of the Rakazars, the private army of Razvi. Whereabouts of Razvi was not known.

Prime Minister Jawaharal Nehru tonight congratulated all India, including Hyderabad, for restraint and discipline and said, "Let there be no talk of communal and other false doctrines and ignoble urges giving rise to that antagonism."

Nehru shed no light on the future status of the Nizam, ruler of Hyderabad.

The new military governor is Maj. Gen. J. N. Chaudhury, whose First Armored Division drove 138 miles into Hyderabad in five days.

The Hyderabad army surrendered unconditionally in a simple ceremony near Secunderabad.

The Indian column entered Secunderabad following the surrender, and was greeted by almost the entire population, which lined the streets, shouted slogans and waved Indian flags.

The invasion was the climax to steadfast opposition by the Nizam to Indian demands that Hyderabad join the dominion. Yesterday the Nizam bowed to the superior Indian forces and issued a cease-fire order.

The Franco-American treaty on Marshall Plan aid calls specifically for a balanced budget, and the French believe that if this is not met, the United States will not agree to release funds realized by the sale of donated American products.

Meanwhile, the Council of the Republic (Senate) reversed the assembly's recent decision to postpone the October departmental elections. The move was considered favorable to Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Bomb Injures Burma Leader Fighting Reds

Rangoon, Burma, Sept. 18 (AP).—Brig. U. Tin Tut, a leader in the fight against Burma's Communist-led rebellion, was near death in a hospital today from wounds inflicted by a would-be assassin who booby-trapped his car.

Gen. Tut

Tin Tut, who resigned as foreign minister to become inspector-general of the Burmese auxiliary force, was reported in a "most grave" condition. Hospital authorities said he was unconscious.

The assassination attempt took place last night near the offices of the Times, which is edited by Daw Khin Nyunt, daughter of Tin Tut.

A bomb, placed between the exhaust pine and floor board of the car, exploded when the engine was started, officials said. Two bodyguards also were injured.

Tin Tut was due to go to London shortly to become Burmese ambassador to Britain.

The attempt on Tin Tut's life recalled the assassination in July, 1947, of Gen. U Aung San and six other Burmese cabinet members.

Since then Burma has been gripped by a rebellion which has developed into a three-fold affair: uprising led by the Red Flag (Trotskyist) Communists, the White Flag (Stalinist) Communists, and the White Band PVO's, the former private army of Aung Sang.

All want to oust Premier Thakin Nu, but have nothing else in common.

A government communique said some rebels were cutting the heads off their dead and carrying them off in order to avoid identification.

was occasioned by fears the Arabs would take advantage of the chaotic situation created by Bernadotte's death.

Only two days ago Foreign Minister Moshe Shertok and the chief of Israel's army operations said the Arabs were massing "under the eyes of the U. N. observers" and that an imminent end to the two-months truce was threatened.

Correspondents and U. N. observers who visited the northern, central and southern sectors said today tension was high all along the front.

Other reports said the massing of Arab troops and equipment was visible in many places, and that a single shot might ignite the whole line from the Syrian border to the Negeb desert.

A government statement today declared it regarded the assassinations as an appalling outrage and an attack on the authority of the U. N. and the sovereignty of Israel.

"The government of Israel is outraged by the appalling crime committed yesterday in Jerusalem, when U. N. mediator Count Bernadotte and his assistant, Colonel Serot, were assasssinated within the area under control and defense of the state of Israel," said the statement.

"This murder is an attack on the authority of the U. N. and a calculated assault on the sovereignty of the State of Israel. It is an act of treachery against the Israeli defense army. It is a desecration of the Holy City of Jerusalem.

"The government of Israel will use all force at its command to suppress this insane attempt by gunmen to wreck Israel's relations with the U. N.

"The perpetrators of this crime are traitors to the people and the enemies of its liberty. The government is mobilizing the entire force of the state to track down the murderers and their accomplices and bring them to justice. It will uproot the criminal gang responsible for the outrage."

The government statement was made after Ralph Bunche, American acting mediator since Bernadotte's death, telegraphed Shertok that the assassination was a "breach of the truce of the utmost gravity." Bunche said Israel's government "must assume full responsibility" for it.

He said Shertok's "prejudicial and unfounded statements" at a news conference Wednesday when he attacked the mediator's efforts, "are not the kind of statements which would be calculated to discourage reprehensible acts of this kind."

Bunche called the death of Bernadotte "cold-blooded murder," and an "unspeakable violation of elementary morality."

A lone Marine driving an ambulance took the bodies of Bernadotte and Serot to Haifa today where an honor caravan of 20 United Nations automobiles met them at the outskirts.

Sternist Membership Eslimated to Be 900

The Stern Gang has an estimated mmbership of only 900. Formerly "Fighters for the Freedom of Israel," the group is believed to have several thousand sympathizers. The Sternists follow a leftist political line and opposed the partition of Palestine from the beginning.

Along with Irgun Zvai Leumi, another militant Jewish underground organization, the Sternists harassed British troops while Britain held the mandate. The Sternists are not connected politically with the Irgunists, whose political doctrines are right-of-center.

Abraham Stern, founder of the organization, broke away from the Irgun organization with his followers in 1940, principally because the Irgunists always telephoned a warning before a bombing attack. Stern died in 1942. Since then, the commander reportedly has been Nathan Friedman Yellin, a Polish Jew who escaped from the Latrun internment camp.

All Marks Beaten By Berlin Airlift

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Sept. 18 (NYHT).—American planes, in an all-out effort on Air Force day, smashed every previous tonnage and flight record today to bring in 5572 tons of coal as a gift to Berlin families.

The record number of flights—651 in the 24-hour period which ended at noon—was established despite high winds and generally stormy weather. It was not only a dramatic gesture, but politically astute.

Every west sector family having at least two children under 10 years of age will receive 100 pounds of the coal.

Altogether American and British planes brought in approximately 7500 tons, only 1000 tons short of the goal of 8500 tons foreseen by military leaders when more planes are available.

Today's American figure far surpassed the previous record of the United States Air Force of 3981 tons set on September 14 and the India to China "hump" lift record by 245.7 tons.

The effort today caught the imagination of the Berliners, thousands of whom flocked to Tempelhof and Gatow airfields. The display of air might dramatized as no propaganda could the contrast between the western Allies, who, despite all obstacles, have hurdled the Soviet blockade to bring in minimum supplies, and the Russians, who despite free road and rail access to the city, have failed to fulfill their promises of plentiful supplies for their sector.

Meanwhile, in the city which has taken the failure of the Moscow talks as a foregone conclusion, industrialists, trade unionists and city officials announced their plan for a long winter siege. In a series of meetings in the past few weeks these leaders have worked out a "blockade program of west Berlin industry," it was announced.

The program calls for a 40-hour week for all but small concerns and contains a list of raw materials and credits urgently needed from Bizonia.

Clear evidence why the talks in Moscow were unable to produce a settlement was given today by the Communist economic committee. It demanded among other things that not only all of Berlin should be included in the Soviet zone, but that products of various industries in west Berlin should become available as reparations.

The committee said nationalization in west Berlin should be increased by 180 per cent and confiscation would be without payment to owners.

Since the committee echoes the Kremlin policy, it can be said with assurance that the renewed demands for taking the entire city into the Soviet zone are related to the apparent stalemate in four-power talks, in which the Russians have reportedaly sought the same things, either directly or indirectly.

Reds Order Review Of Germans' Penalties

He suggested that the prosecutor had failed to recognize that "fascist provocations" probably led to the demonstration.

The sentences caused a wave of anti-Soviet feeling here.

Post Reporter Tells How Drone Landed

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Down she came from 1500 feet, dropping 600 feet a minute, hitting 140 miles an hour with her nose pointed at the runway—puppet plane and hard earth rushing at each other.

That's the way it looked to seven thoughtful men who had just sweated out two unsuccessful blind landings in a "drone" Flying Fortress at Bolling Field yesterday.

"Request you make a manual landing" came in the calm, even radio voice of the ground control approach operator at the field.

The seven thoughtful men had feared a "crackup" until then.

Before all this, the operator had picked up the drone, "Baby Three," at 12:10 p. m. 775 miles and 4½ hours out of the Air Forces proving ground at Eglin Field, Fla.

From the zigzag takeoff to Washington the drone had smoothly covered the miles without a hand touching controls.

Hovering immediately behind all the way was "the mother," another B-17 bomber.

A little before 1 p. m. Bolling's GCA operator took over, to bring "Baby' heading for home while thousands of Air Force Day spectators watched.

No hands were on the controls a the drone's wheels smashed into the asphalt strip and bounced high in the air. In a split second the drone's pilot, with trained responses, took over. He "gave it the power," and the ship's nose headed into the sky for another try.

To those aboard, three of them n wsmen "along for the ride," the pilot acquired a halo then.

Half an hour later a second try was made. Same pattern, same proposition.

Through the earphones came the voice, impersonal, commanding: "Steer right to a heading of 125 degrees. Over." Then it was, "You are now on the final approach. You are 9 miles to touchdown."

As the strip began to line up with the nose of the drone, the earphones squawked: ". . . 4 miles from touchdown now . . . you're a little to the right of the runway . . . you're correcting too slowly."

Then, in the second blind try, the voice said, "Set her down."

But the plane had lost speed and was still too far off the ground. Some 500 feet overhead the mother plane, far enough to the right to have a perspective, and always in radio contact with the GCA signals, saw the drone was too far off the ground for safety. By radio television she picked up her four-motored chick and carried her back into the sky again.

Fifteen long minutes and seven prayers later the voice said, "Request you make a manual landing."

Mopping the sweat off his brow, Capt. H. L. Spencer, 26, Silver Star winner over Germany in World War II, brought the drone down easily.

Spencer blamed overheating of the television equipment for the fading. He said he would have gone in blind a third time had GCA said so.

The newsmen were more than willing to take his word for it.

B-29 Afire, Lands Safely

L. Wolfe of Stockham, Nebr., faced the alternative of ditching his plane in the freezing waters or trying to land at Cold Bay with the open and bomb-bay doors constituting an A-1 fire hazard.

Fifteen minutes is the estimated maximum time a human can live in the icy North Pacific waters at this time of year.

I was scared and useless, as was Photographer Richard Ferguson, who just before the take-off Friday joined us for the nonstop flight from Misawa, Japan, to Minneapolis.

This was to have been the longest flight—5666 miles over the top of the world—of any of the superbombers that were flying in to "bomb" American cities.

The temperature was 10 below when Engineer Sergt. Robert Y. Jones, Monrovia, N. Y., clambered into the bay and worked his way to the free tank with only empty space beneath him at one side.

He was followed by Gunner Christopher Pollock, Annapolis, Md., armed with an ax and screwdriver. Each was weighted down with a Mae West parachute and a one-man dinghy pack. They wrestled and tugged and chopped at the tank, trying to cut it loose so the bomb-bay doors could be closed.

Then, as the landfall neared, Wolfe ordered them out of the bay and brought the ship down, light as a feather, on the Cold Bay strip, and everybody abandoned ship—fast.

One-Way Windows A Perfect Shield For Bath Peekers

Maesteg, England, Sept. 18 (AP).—Town Councilor Richard Mordecai blushed a bit, said a blunder had been made, and then presented the bare facts.

The urban council wanted to be modern in building 60 bungalows for the townfolk. So it used that new-fangled glass in the bathrooms, the one-way kind, made so that one can see out of a room without being seen from the outside.

The carpenters got it wrong side out.

Tenants, he reported, have complained to me of the embarrassment of being seen in their bathrooms by passersby."

The windows are being changed.

Show Staged By Air Force

hour made with a fully armed jet fighter, the North American F-86, three days earlier.

Record Berlin Cargo

In Berlin, Air Force planes laid down the greatest volume of cargo ever hauled by plane. It was not just a show over the airway to land-locked Berlin, but a full demonstration of the capacity for beating the Russian land blockade of Berlin.

American planes carried 5572 tons of coal to Berlin in 651 flights. British planes made an additional 244 flights.

While planes of every type flew from every active airbase at home and overseas, more than 40 officials from brigadier general to Secretary of the Air Force spread the Air Force message in formal speeches.

It was a generally safe celebration despite the vast scope of operations.

A medium bomber made an emergency landing at Kansas City, Mo., but its seven occupants walked out before the plane burned.

Bombers Reach Goals

By midafternoon, only four of the more than 50 B-29 bombers making flights of 4000 to 5200 miles nonstop in simulated raids on American cities had reported stopping short of their goal. All made safe landings at airbases.

Many of the bombers flew indirect courses, going 1000 or more miles off course to increase the length of the flight.

First of the B29's to land were two that hit Pittsburgh almost on the minute assigned. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commanding general of the Air Material Command, greeted the crews. They had flown nonstop from Iceland by way of Florida.

Other B-29's, flying in pairs and threes, came from bases in Alaska, Hawaii, Japan, Bermuda, the Azores, Iceland, Labrador and Germany.

Home Demonstration

A strictly home demonstration of size and range was given by half a dozen B-36 bombers, 150-ton behemoths which left Fort Worth, Tex., for individual jaunts over scores of cities.

Gen. Dougles MacArthur sent his good wishes in a message from Tokyo.

Even Moscow knew it was Air Force Day. The acting United States air attache entertained about 150 guests at dinner.

125,000 Watch Bolling Base Air Force Show

spot on the globe—two B-29s landed at Bolling Field at noon after flying 4219 miles from near Munich, Germany, in exactly 24 hours, including two minutes for buzzing the field here before landing.

"That's the way we planned it at Tucson, Ariz., 10 days ago," smiled Lieut. Col. Michael N. W. McCoy, 42, of Pomona, Calif., commanding the flight, and pilot of one of the ships. "The trip was uneventful."

Perhaps the most striking example of the strides made in military aviation in the past few years was an exhibition of speed flying which saw America's fastest fighter plane of World War II, the Mustang P-51 now modernized as the F-51, overtaken and left behind, right over the field, by a flight of the newer F-80 Shooting Star jets.

But the Mustangs proved their greater maneuverability in breath-stopping exhibitions of loops, Immelman rolls and eight-point slow rolls in which they make one-eighth of a roll at a time, stop, then start another eighth of a roll.

Bolling first-aid stations treated about a score of fainting cases and one little girl who couldn't tell how she burned her hand.

Spectators inspecting exhibits at the rate of 600 an hour included many from the embassies and legations and high Government offices.

Unscheduled was a demonstration of sky-writing by striking pilots of the Airline Pilots Association writing "STRIKE" in the sky high over the field.

The fact one of its engines wasn't working didn't detract from interest in the world's biggest bomber, Consolidated's B-36, as it buzzed the field and circled over the city.

A new commercial plane, the twin-engine Martin 2-0-2, purposely feathered a prop to show its power and versatility, even right after takeoff and just before landing. It demonstrated a rate of climb twice that of older, similar-type transports.

Loudspeakers on the field gave the crowd a running description as B-25 bombers staged a mock attack on the air base. They were fought off by simulated fire from Air National Guard antiaircraft batteries, and were followed by an "invasion" by paratroopers of the Eighty-second Airborne Division.

The three-man standby crew of the B-17 drone that cracked up at 4:13 p. m. when its right landing gear failed as it was coming in on the runway was uninjured. They are Capt. Horace L. Spencer, pilot; First Lieut. Leno Fezzato, copilot, and Staff Sergt. Paul R. Kohler, aerial engineer, all of the First Experimental Guided Missiles Group, Eglin Air Force Base, Valparaiso, Fla.

All branches of the Air Force demonstrated their specialties in the air, on the ground or in hangars where long lines of visitors showed an interest in the Nation's air arm. There were more than three times the visitors this year as last when only 35,000 persons attended observance at Bolling.

Brig. Gen. B. M. Hovey, commanding Bolling, had 450 noncommissioned men and officers assisting the visitors as guides, and Wacs and military police were everywhere in evidence.

Among other events were demonstrations of buzz bombs, a radio controlled jeep, new turbo-jet engine, Newark Civil Air Patrol drill with the Air Force Band, glider pick-up and towing, dropping of a 30-foot all-metal rescue boat into the Potomac from a B-29, Air National Guard and Air Reserve formation flying, and fighting a plane fire with the newest chemicals.

The smaller crowd at less accessible Andrews base, where the only jet planes in this area are stationed, got a closer inspection of the 600-mile-an-hour-plus planes, the F-80 and the F-84 Thunderjet, front-line fighters of today's Air Force, in mass formation and other types of flying.

Andrews also displayed the newest liaison plane, the L-13, the B-50 Superfortress, successor to the B-29; a helicopter, the F-82 Twin Mustang, the C-82 Cargomaster, called the "Flying Boxcar;" the F-37 Thunderbolts of the District National Gaurd; the T-6s and T-11s of the 443d Air Reserve unit, and others, with demonstrations of dive-bombing and aerobatics, movies and inspection of base facilities.

Picket Threat Gets Wallace 40 Guards

Boston, Sept. 18 (U.P.)—Presidential Candidate Henry A. Wallace charged tonight that the Republicans and Democrats are leading the United States "not only to war and depression but to totalitarianism."

In a speech prepared for a paid admission, police-guarded political rally at Boston Garden, Wallace said that "only the program of the Progressive Party can save our country from disaster."

Forty Boston policemen, briefed to control any egg-throwing outburst such as marked Wallace's recent Southern tour, were assigned to patrol the garden. The force was expanded from 30 when the Socialist Party of Massachusetts announced it would picket the rally.

Wallace specifically called for the defeat at the November polls of Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), who headed the select congressional committee which toured Europe to lay the groundwork for the European recovery program. Herter, he said, is "one of the leading authors of bipartisan reaction."

Farm Editors Visit Dewey

session after Dewey's unequivocal statement. Aiken said the Government wouldn't suffer any "loss" because of the program "except possibly on eggs." Hope said it would be a good thing for the Government to "stockpile" some surplus grain and cotton.

Urges Big Production

Opening his round-table discussion with the farm editors, Dewey invited his guests to "bring your suspenders out in the open."

He told them the American farmer, despite the war's drain on his soil and machinery, has got to go right on producing as never before, to make up for farm production "lost behind the iron curtain."

"That program can and will and must continue until the people of Europe can get their own production up," he told the editors.

To maintain the production pace, he said farmers have got to have price support: "A farmer has to know whether he'll break even or not."

The country's biggest problem, he said, is to learn how to translate all the grain not needed for breadstuffs or shipment abroad into larger livestock, poultry and other food supplies. Another No. 1 problem, he said, is to find a way to mechanize all "family size" farms.

"The Government ought to get on the constructive side," he said. "It ought to encourage the skills of the farmer instead of thinking in terms of controls."

12-State Tour

He said the farmer doesn't like being ordered around and besides, "where you put in the hands of a few men the power to regulate the economics of an industry, you practically destroy it."

Leaving Albany at 4:15 p. m. (EDT) Sunday, Governor Dewey will make a preliminary speech at Rock Island, Ill., Monday before his major opening in Des Moines, Monday night.

He will speak in 11 other States before he returns to Albany October 3. They are Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Missouri.

In seven of the States Dewey is running scared—scared of his Senate margin. In the Senate-race States he will campaign in his Oregon-unveiled "free-style."

Some 98 news and camerman will be aboard. For them Paul Lockwood, the Governor's secretary, has stripped down a club car, fitted it up as a workroom, as he did in 1944.

Governor and Mrs. Dewey will use the same private car they did in '44—The David Livingstone. There is only one other like it, The Roald Amundsen, which the Government bought for the President's use. Lockwood will ride in the Governor's car.

"Squirrel Cage" Staff

The usual staff car, dubbed "the squirrel cage" in the '40 and '44 campaigns, will be hooked on. Working there will be Elliot V. Bell, Dewey's top adviser, and his staff. Also in the "squirrel cage" will be Edwin F. Jaeckle, upstate Dewey leader; Stanley High and Stuart Beach, writers, and Arthur Barnett and Robert Ray, researchers. James C. Hagerty, Dewey's executive assistant, and Herbert C. Campbell, press aide, will ride with the reporters.

Three telephones, ready for quick hookups at all stops, will be aboard for Dewey's staff use. A teletype machine, for two-way communication with Republican headquarters in Washington and a possible tie-in with John Foster Dulles in Paris, has been installed. Except for two diners, the entire train will be "ice" cooled.

Five New York State troopers and one New York City detective have been assigned to the train. One of the troopers will be on duty in the Governor's car at all times.

Three Broadcasts Scheduled for Dewey

By the United Press

Republican headquarters last night announced broadcasting arrangements for speeches of presidential nominee Thomas E. Dewey.

The Denver speech Tuesday will be carried on CBS from 11:30 to 12 p. m. (EDT).

The Seattle speech September 24, will be on the Mutual network from 12:30 to 12:55 a. m. (EDT).

The Salt Lake City speech September 30, will be on NBC from 10:30 to 11 p. m. (EDT).

Inauguration Reservations Flood Hotels

With a possible change of administrations in view for the first time in 16 years, out-of-towners are flooding hotels here with reservations for the January 20 inauguration period.

The Washington and Raleigh Hotels, along the parade line of march, have stopped accepting reservations while the Willard reported it was "nearly full."

The Washington will have vacancies after the election, however, an official said, as many reservations have been made on an "if" basis—if Truman or if Dewey—and some will be cancelled.

The Mayflower has had more requests than can be filled and the Statler has stopped taking reservations. The Carlton is filled and the Roosevelt is sold out.

New Course Planned

American University will conduct a graduate evening seminar in public relations problems this fall, according to Prof. Willett Kempton, director of public relations studies.

The course, in the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs, is the first graduate course to be given in public relations by the school, Professor Kempton said.

South Advised to Change Views on Racial Issue

Atlanta, Sept. 18 (AP).—An influential group of Southerners today told the South the time has come to change its ways, but fast.

The group—the executive committee of the Southern Regional Council—also charged the region's politicians with "grossly" misrepresenting proposed civil rights legislation.

It told the South that States' rights means States' responsibilities and the rest of the Nation was unconvinced that Southern States have exhibited any.

Across the long list of accusations that the South has mistreated Negroes, the committee wrote "guilty."

It told the South to cool its hot head a bit and it told the rest of the Nation to withhold its blanket condemnation as productive of little good.

And it told both that "jobs and farms and schools and health—these are the underpinning of civil rights. In all these basic needs the South is below the level of the rest of the country, and in the South the Negro is below the white.

It is clear that without a conscious and costly national effort general conditions in many parts of the South will remain backward for years to come. We cannot afford the luxury of waiting for slow, unaided growth."

The Southern Regional Council is a non-political, non-profit organization made up of Southern educators, civic leaders, newspapermen, professional men and church leaders of both the white and Negro races.

Barkley Asserts GOP Speeches on Record Bring Additional Votes to Democrat Party

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 18.—Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) declared here tonight that "the more Republican speeches are made to tell the truth about the GOP record," the more Democratic votes we'll get in Maryland."

Barkley was welcomed to a dinner in his honor by Gov. William Preston Lane of Maryland, who introduced the Kentuckian as "the next Vice President of the United States."

It was Barkley's first campaign appearance in Maryland. Although his speech was billed as a non-political one, he said twice that he was skirting the edges of politics.

Barkley strongly defended the agricultural program of the Democratic Administration. He said: "It has become necessary now that we organize agriculture on a Nation-wide basis."

He said this country early in the ... found that one-third of its soil had washed down the rivers.

"We have found it necessary to inaugurate a national soil-conservation program to retain what we have and to reclaim what was lost. It cannot be done by the individual farmer, it cannot be done by a county, or even by a State. No State has power to deal with flood control, which is intimately related to soil conservation.

"Consequently the Federal Government has acted so that we may not hand down to our children a soil that is barren and unproductive."

"That is an economic problem with which all our people are concerned," he declared. "I am happy to say it was the Democratic Administration in Washington—if I may skirt the edges of politics—which has inaugurated an active soil conservation and agricultural improvement program which has been instrumental in raising the income of American farmers from five billion to more than 30 billion dollars a year."

Barkley cautioned his listeners, including many agricultural leaders of St. Marys County, that present high farm prices could not be expected to continue indefinitely. He said that when European nations return to full agricultural production, America's foreign markets for farm products will decline. At that point, Barkley said, other uses must be found for farm products.

As an example of new uses for farm products, Barkley said he had learned recently that you can make four pairs of nylon hose from a bushel basket of corn cobs.

The Senator said the discovery of these new ways of using farm materials means research must be conducted on a national scale by the Federal Government.

The dinner was given at the Leonardtown Wharf Club by the St. Marys County Fair Association.

Afterward, Barkley was driven to St. Mary's Female Seminary at St. Marys City, site of the first settlement in Maryland. He was invited there to crown the queen of the County Fair, Miss Kitty Bailey of River Springs, Md.

Her title, "Queen of Tolerance," was given in recognition of the fact that next year will be the 300th anniversary of the Maryland Legislature's Edict of Tolerance, noted as the first legislative pronouncement for religious freedom.

As many as 300 persons watched or participated in games and field events staged during the afternoon. A well-attended dance last night concluded the affair

W. Va. Voters in D. C. Must Re-Register

A call for West Virginians who live in Washington to re-register before October 2 in order to vote in the November election has been issued by Mrs. Casey M. Jones, executive secretary of the West Virginiao Republican Absentee Voters' Bureau.

The West Virginia bureau is operated in connection with the absentee voters' bureau established by the Republican State Committee of the District of Columbia at 1430 K st. nw.

Names must be submitted to the county clerks and checked for eligibility, she said. Certification notice then will be sent to the voter in Washington and the actual registration form must be filled out, notarized and returned to the clerk of the County Court by October 2.

The West Virginia voters bureau and the Republican absentee voters bureau are open from 8:30 a. m. to 9 p. m. every day but Saturday

Deputy Chief Of Staff Hails National Guard

General J. Lawton Collins, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army, paid tribute to the air and ground elements of the National Guard last night at the District Guard's dance at the Armory.

General Collins' remarks, broadcast over a national hookup as a feature of Columbia Broadcasting System's weekly National Guard program, highlighted the dance held to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Guard's entry into active service in World War II.

Terming the present National Guard "the finest as well as the largest in history," he said two-thirds of the fighter planes available for the air defense of the United States are in the squadrons of the new National Guard.

The ground units of the Guard are supplying much added strength to the defense structure, General Collins said, and during the past year have increased their strength beyond any prewar level.

Because the members of the Guard "realized their present responsibilities for the security of the Nation," General Collins said, "we are better prepared to assert our constant desire to live in freedom and peace."

50,393 Signed For D. C. Draft

Washington draft centers closed their doors last night after registering 50,393 men in age group 18 through 25 for the peacetime draft.

The total, which does not include the men who registered in police and fire stations and other points yesterday, is expected to reach at least 53,000. Now, the only registrations under the new draft law will be youths reaching the age of 18, who must sign up at local Selective Service headquarters, 1901 D st. nw.

The 1158 volunteer registrars move dsmoothly through the three-week chore, officials said. District Selective Service Director William E. Leahy, in praising their work, said: "Without the efforts and extreme cooperation of volunteers in all registration places, we would have been sorely pressed to accomplish our task."

This week the District's 15 draft boards will continue the classification of men who will answer the first Selective Service call in November. Questionnaires on which the classification is based have been sent to 4232 single, non-veterans. Deputy Director Frank D. Norton said he estimated another 4000 registrants to be in this group.

Norton said some 30 physicians to staff the draft boards will be named this week and a transfer board to handle men who previously registered out of the city, is being planned.

Truman Flays G. O. P., 80th Congress in First Corn Belt Address

Farmers Prosper Under Democrats Alone, He Asserts

Dexter, Iowa, Sept. 18 (AP).—Following is the text of President Truman's address today:

I AM glad to be here. It does my heart good to see the grain fields of the Nation again. They are a wonderful sight. The record-breaking harvests you have been getting in recent years have been a blessing. Millions of people have been saved from starvation by the food you have produced. The whole world has reason to be everlastingly grateful to the farmers of the United States.

In a very real sense, the abundant harvests of this country are helping to save the world from communism. Communism thrives on human misery. And the crops you are producing are driving back the tide of misery in many lands. Your farms are a vital element in America's foreign policy.

And while I am on that subject—I know that the war talk which is prevalent today is causing all of you deep concern. It is plain enough that we are facing a very disturbing international situation. I should like every American to realize that this country is making every possible effort to preserve the peace.

In this critical situation, my motto has been: "Keep your temper, and stand firm." We have kept our tempers. We have stood firm. And we have been reasonable and straightforward at all times.

IT IS the policy of this Government to continue working for peace with every instrument at our command. At the same time we have been rapidly building up our strength. The peace of the world and the prestige of the United States require that the Nation be strong and vigilant.

But that is not the main point I wish to cover today. In addition to the issue of peace, there is another important reason why this is a critical period for America. I am talking about our economic future—your economic future.

Will this Nation succeed in keeping its prosperity? Will it preserve its high standards of living next year, and the year after, and the year after that?

I know of only one way to get assured prosperity. That is by cooperation among agriculture, labor and business, large and small.

When these groups work together in a common cause, this country can achieve miracles. We saw that during the war. We saw it before the war. By common effort, in the last 15 years, every group in the Nation steadily increased its income. Our people rose from despair to the highest living standard in our history.

So long as the farmer, the worker and the businessman pull together in the national interest, this country has everything to hope for.

BUT it is terribly dangerous to let any one group get too much power in the Government. We cannot afford to let one group shape the Nation's policies in its own interest, at the expense of the others.

That is what happened in the 1920s, under the big business rule of the Republicans. Those were the days when big corporations had things their own way. The policies that Wall Street big business wanted were the policies that the Republicans adopted. Agriculture, labor, and small business played second fiddle, while big business called the tune.

Those were the days of Republican high tariffs—tariffs that penalized the American farmer by making him pay high prices for manufactured goods, while he was receiving low prices for his crops.

You remember the results of that Wall Street Republican policy. You remember the big boom and the great crash of 1929. You remember that in 1932 the position of the farmer had become so desperate that there was actual violence in many farming communities. You remember that insurance companies and banks took over much of the land of small, independent farmers.

That was a painful lesson. It should not be forgotten for a moment. Since then the farmer has come a long way. The agricultural program of the Democratic Administration in 16 years has enabled farmers to attain decent standards of living. Interest rates on farm credit have been sharply brought down. Farm mortgage indebtedness has been reduced by more than 50 per cent. Farm mortgage foreclosures have almost disappeared.

All this was done under and by Democratic Administrations.

TODAY the world needs more food than ever before. There is every reason for the American farmer to expect a long period of good prices—if he continues to get a fair deal. His great danger is that he may be voted out of a fair deal, and into a Republican deal.

The Wall Street reactionaries are not satisfied, regardless of what happens to the other fellow. They are gluttons of privilege.

These gluttons of privilege are now putting up fabulous sums of money to elect a Republican Administration.

Why do you think the yare doing it? For love of the Republican candidates? Or do you think it is because they expect a Republican Administration to carry out their will, as it did in the days of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover?

I think we know the answer. I think we know that Wall Street expects its money this year to elect a Republican Administration that will listen to the gluttons of privilege first, and the people not at all.

The Republican strategy is to divide the farmer and the industrial worker—to get them squabbling with each other—so that big business can grasp the balance of power and take the country over, lock, stock and barrel.

To achieve this end, they will stop at nothing. On the one hand, the Republicans are telling industrial workers that the high cost of food in the cities is due to this Government's farm price policy. On the other hand, the Republicans are telling the farmers that the high cost of manufactured goods on the farm is due to this Government's labor policy.

That's plain hokum. It's an old political trick. "If you can't convince them, confuse them." But this time it won't work.

The farmer and the worker know that their troubles have been coming from another source.

THEY remember one plain fact.

Never once during the great crises of the past 50 years have the Wall Street Republican administrations lifted a finger to help the farmer. Wait a minute—they did once. They gave you a farm board. That was their great contribution.

How well you must remember the depression of the 1930's. The Republicans gave you that greatest of all depressions—when hogs went down to three cents, and corn was so cheap you were burning it for fuel.

All through this century the American farmer and worker have been the victims of boom and bust cycles—with the accent on bust. And they have suffered alike in these misfortunes.

How many times do you have to be hit on the head before you find out what's hitting you? It's about time that the people of America realized what the Republicans have been doing to them.

Why is it that the farmer and the worker and the small businessman suffer under Republican Administrations and gain under Democratic Administrations?

I'll tell you why. It is a result of a basic difference in attitude between the Democratic and the Republican Parties.

The Democratic Party represents the people. It is pledged to work for agriculture. It is pledged to work for labor. It is pledged to work for the small businessman and the white-collar worker.

The Democratic attitude puts human rights and human welfare first.

But the attitude of the Republican gluttons of privilege is very different. The big-money Republican looks on agriculture and labor merely as expense in a business venture. He tries to push their share of the national income down as low as possible and increase his own profits. And he looks upon Government as a tool to accomplish that purpose.

THESE Republican gluttons of privilege are cold men. They are cunning men, and it is their constant aim to put the Government of the United States under the control of men like themselves. They want a return of the Wall Street economic dictatorship.

You have already had a sample of what a Republican Administration would mean to you. Two years ago, in the Congressional elections, many Americans decided that they would not bother to vote. Others thought they would like to have a change. And they brought into power a Republican Congress—the notorious "do nothing" Republican Eightieth Congress.

Let us look at the results of that change. This Republican Congress has already stuck a pitchfork in the farmer's back.

They have already done their best to keep price supports from working. Many growers have sold wheat this summer at less than the support price, because they could not find proper storage.

When the Democratic Administration had to face this problem in the past, the Government set up grain bins all over the wheat and corn belts to provide storage.

Now the farmers need such bins again. But when the Republican Congress rewrote the charter of the Commodity Credit Corporation this year, there were certain lobbyists in Washington representing the speculative grain trade.

These big-business lobbyists and speculators persuaded the Congress not to provide storage bins for the farmers. They tied the hands of the Administration. They are preventing us from setting up the storage bins that you will need in order to get the support price for your grain.

When farmers have to sell their wheat below the support price because they have no place to store it, they can thank this same Republican Congress—the Congress that gave the speculative grain trade a rake-off at your expense.

BUT the Republican reactionaries are not satisfied with that. Now they are attacking the whole structure of price supports for farm products.

This attack comes at a time when many farm prices are dropping and the price support program is of the greatest importance to the farmer.

The Democratic Party originated the farm support program. We built the price support plan out of hard experience. We built it for the benefit of the entire Nation—not only the farmer, but the consumer as well.

Republican spokesmen are now complaining that my Administration is trying to keep farm prices up. They have given themselves away. They have given you a plain hint of what they have in store for you if they come into power. They are obviously ready to let the bottom drop out of farm prices.

The purpose of price support is to prevent farm prices from falling to ruinously low levels. Every consumer should realize that these supports apply only when farm prices have dropped below parity.

The Government is not now supporting the price on major food items such as meats, dairy products and poultry.

The Government has just begun to support the price of wheat, which has dropped from around $3 a bushel to about $2.

This support price has nothing to do with the price the consumer is paying for his bread.

WHEN wheat prices were going up, the price of bread rose steadily. It went up from 10 cents a loaf to 11 cents—to 12 cents—to 13 cents—to 14 cents.

Now wheat prices have fallen a dollar a bushel. But the price of bread has not come down one cent.

There you have the policy of reactionary big business. Pay as little as you can to the farmer and charge the consumer all he can bear. That is a fair sample of what the Republican reaction has meant to you in the past two years—to you, and to every consumer, in cities and on farms alike.

When the Republicans claim that wheat price supports are to blame for the high price of bread, they are trying to stir up the city consumer against the farmer by downright dishonesty.

The truth of the matter is that by encouraging the record production of the last few years, the support program has actually kept consumer prices down.

Those who are wilfully trying to discredit the price support system don't want farmers to be prosperous. They believe in low prices for farmers, cheap wages for labor and high profits for big corporations.

These are the facts the people need to know. I am going to keep hammering away at the facts until the whole country rings with the truth about these gluttons of privilege.

The record of the Republican Eightieth Congress is one long attack on the welfare of the farmer.

UNDER the Democratic Administrations since 1933, the Government has sponsored the great soil conservation program that helped to lay the foundations for the present prosperity of the American farmer. But the Republican Eightieth Congress, under the false mask of economy, cut and threatened to kill the soil conservation program. You people here know best the importance of soil conservation to American agriculture. You know what the reactionary attack on soil conservation will cost the farmer if we let the Republicans have their own way.

At every point the Republican Eightieth Congress did what the speculative grain lobby wanted it to do.

They killed the international wheat agreement, which would have assured American wheat growers a large export market for five years at fair prices.

They stated a move to put a death-tax on farm cooperatives.

They ruled out the grain bins that help make the ever-normal granary effective.

They have invited a depression by refusing to curb inflation.

And now they are attacking the farm support program.

The Wall Street Republicans are not worrying about whether you like it or not. Their political wiseacres have assured them that the farmer has fallen back into his old habit of voting Republican, whatever happens. The Republicans are saying, "Don't worry about the farm vote. It's in the bag."

SO LONG as you had a good year once in a while, you would be satisfied. So they thought. So they think today.

You and I know they're making a big mistake. From what I have seen, the farmers of this country have their eyes open. You're not going to be fooled again by the slick propaganda of Wall Street.

In only two years, with only the Congress under their control, the Republicans were able to weaken your position gravely.

Well, imagine what would happen if they were to get both the Congress and the Presidency for four years. What they have taken away from you this far would be only an appetizer for the economic tapeworm of big business.

Your best protection is to elect a Democratic Congress and a President that will play fair with the farmer—an Administration that will reinforce soil conservation, provide adequate storage facilities for grain, encourage production, and help the farmer make enough on his crop to meet the cost of living, and have something left over.

I don't need to tell you how long it takes to get a good crop, and how big the dangers are. You can work a year, plowing and cultivating, and then at the last minute a sudden drought or flood can wipe you out. You all know how terrible these disasters of nature can be.

Now you are faced with the danger of another kind of disaster—a man-made disaster bearing the Republican trademark. For 16 years the Democrats have been working on a crop of prosperity for the farmer. We have been plowing, seeding, and cultivating the soil of the American economy in order to get the crop of prosperity that you have been enjoying for the past several years.

The question is: Are you going to let another Republican blight wipe out your prosperity?

I HAVE reminded you of the evils wrought by Republican administrations in recent times. But my purpose has not been merely to bring up the past. I am trying to point the way to a healthy future. The Democratic Party is looking forward. Not back. We are planning to aid the farmers of America meet their pressing problems and avoid catastrophe.

Today farmers are faced with the threat that markets will fail to keep up with their production. The reactionary Republican answer is to let prices crash to the bottom. But the Democratic Party has a constructive way of preventing such a collapse.

We are reaching out to develop world markets that will absorb production above America's own needs. Scientific research is discovering more and new uses for farm products. We know that the world can absorb the farmers' output, if the right conditions are created, and we are working to insure continued prosperity for American agriculture.

The Democratic Party is fighting the farmer's battle. We believe that farmers are entitled to share equally with other people in our national income. We believe that a prosperous and productive agriculture is essential to our national welfare.

But the Democratic Party does not stand in defense of the farmer alone. It stands for the people of the United States—the farmer, the industrial workers, and the white-collar worker.

Our intentions are made clear by our deeds. In this twentieth century, every great step forward has come during Democratic administrations of the national government. Every movement backward has come under Republican auspices, and it is the people who have paid dearly for these reactionary moves.

Too much is now at stake—here and throughout the world—to take the wrong path now.

THERE IS one way to stop the forces of reaction.

Get every vote out on election day, and make it count. You can't afford to waste your votes this year.

I'm not asking you just to vote for me. Vote for yourselves; Vote for your farms! Vote for the standard of living that you have won under a Democratic Administration!

Truman Assails Wall St.

he chided them for voting Republican in spite of the hard times they had experienced under the GOP.

"How many times do you have to be hit over the head before you find out what's hitting you?" he asked.

He drew laughter again when he said that the "do-nothing Republican Eightieth Congress already has stuck a pitchfork in the farmer's back."

Mr. Truman made his biggest hit of the day when he appeared before the Dexter throng a second time to make some nonpolitical remarks. He started by saying how he disliked making speeches, and this reminded him of a story.

"I heard a fellow tell the story about 40 years ago," the President said. "He said when he had to make a speech, he felt like the fellow who was at the funeral of his wife, and the undertaker asked him if he would ride down to the cemetery in the same car with his mother-in-law.

"He said, 'Well, I can do it, but it's just going to spoil the whole day for me.'"

The men and women and mothers-in-law in the crowd set up a roar of laughter.

After it was all over, Iowa political analysts expressed the opinion that the Chief Executive had no chance to capture Iowa's 10 electoral votes. The State went Democratic in the bad times of 1932 and 1936, but swung to Willkie in '40 and Dewey in '44.

These same analysts said, however, that former United States Senator Guy Gillette, a Democrat, might very well stage a comeback this year. He is running against the Republican incumbent, Senator George Wilson.

Mr. Truman arrived today in Iowa to find newspapers proclaiming that Governor Dewey, in a statement from Albany, had stolen some of his thunder by "firmly" backing the program of price supports for farm products.

He recalled the plight of the farmer during the Hoover administration, when violence broke out in bankrupt Iowa communities. He contrasted this with what has happened in the last 16 years under a Democratic Administration. Farm indebtedness, he said, had been reduced by 50 per cent and farm mortgage foreclosures have almost disappeared.

Today the world needs more food than ever before, Mr. Truman said, and there is every reason for the American farmer to expect a long period of good prices, if he continues to get a fair deal.

"His great danger is," the President continued, "that he may be voted out of a fair deal and into a Republican deal. The Wall Street reactionaries are not satisfied with being rich. They want to increase their power and their privileges, regardless of what happens to the other fellow. They are gluttons of privilege."

After saying that the gluttons were spending "fabulous sums" to elect Governor Dewey, the Chief Executive continued:

"The Republican strategy is to divide the farmer and the industrial worker—to get them squabbling with each other—so that big business can grasp the balance of power and take the country over, lock, stock and barrel."

He said the Republicans would stop at nothing, and he added:

"On the one hand, the Republicans are telling industrial workers that the high cost of food in the cities is due to this Government's farm price policy.

"On the other hand, the Republicans are telling farmers that the high cost of manufactured goods on the farm is due to this Government's labor policy.

"That's plain hokum. It's an old political trick. If you can't convince them, confuse them. But this time it won't work."

He said that the support price had nothing to do with the price the consumer is paying for his bread.

"When wheat prices were going up," he said, "the price of bread rose steadily. It went up from 10 cents a loaf to 11 cents—to 12 cents—to 13 cents—to 14 cents.

"Now wheat prices have fallen a dollar a bushel. But the price of bread has not come down 1 cent."

Mr. Truman said the record of the Eightieth Congress was one long attack on the welfare of the farmer.

He said the Republicans had killed the international wheat agreement, which would have assured American wheat growers a large export market for five years at fair prices; had started a move to put a death tax on farm cooperatives; ruled out the grain bins that help make the ever-normal granary effective; invited a depression by refusing to curb inflation, and now "are attacking the farm support program."

He asked his audience to disabuse the minds of Republican leaders that the farm vote "is in the bag."

"Get out there on election day," he said, "and vote for your future."

Before reboarding his special train at 4:20 p. m. at Des Moines for Kansas City, Mr. Truman shed his coat and lunched on fried chicken. Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret, sat with him at a table covered with a red-checked cloth.

After lunch the President drove over nearby farms and saw a demonstration of dam building. He did no plowing, though, because "there weren't any mules."

In a brief informal second speech, he told the crowd which followed him that he had enjoyed himself at Dexter and had looked for crooks and jumps in the furrows but had found only two. Reminiscing about his own days on the farm, he said plowing was easier now.

"I don't want to go back to those horse and buggy days," he declared, "although some of our Republican friends do."

Spy Hunters Told Code Was Insecure

By The Associated Press

Congressional spy hunters made public yesterday testimony of a former ambassador to Russia that President Roosevelt shared "the general impression" that the State Department secret code during the war was "not secure."

The testimony was given to a one-man subcommittee (Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) of the House Committee on Un-American Activities at Los Angeles Thursday by Admiral W. H. Standley retired. He was ambassador to Russia from February, 1942, until October, 1943.

Standley testified that President Roosevelt occasionally used the Navy code instead of the State Department code in sending messages to the Ambassador because he was concerned over leaks of information.

So he raised the issue with the State Department, Standley said, "and I cannot recall just how I received the information back to the effect that the President felt that he could not trust the State Department code."

He said it was "common knowledge at that time that there were leaks from the State Department" and that the codes "were insecure."

Self-described former Communists have testified to the committee that it was during this period that a well-organized Communist spy ring was operating in Washington.

Standley said he did not know whether State Department leaks were caused by "disloyal personnel" or by an insecure code. He was not asked whether the leaks continued after the switch to the Navy code.

Committee members arranged for a closed session here Monday to question Louise Bransten, 40-year-old New Yorker who has been identified in previous testimony as a social acquaintance of prominent Russians in this country.

Next Wednesday the committee will go to New York to question Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, Russian school teacher whose freedom leap last month from the Soviet consulate in New York led to recall of Soviet Consul General Jacob Lomakin. Mrs. Kasenkina is recovering at Roosevelt Hospital, where she will be questioned in the presence of reporters.

On Okinawa

Soviet Told U. S. Set Up 'Ghettos'

By The Associated Press

Russians have been told the United States threw thousands of Okinawans into "death camps" while converting the Pacific island into a vast military base.

That story was part of a broadcast from the Siberian city of Khabarovsk which was picked up last week by American monitors.

It was based on a dispatch by Boris Gorbatov, who said he visited the island in January, 1946, and found the natives herded into barbed wire "ghettos." One "terribly crowded" camp held 25,000 Okinawans, many diseased, he declared.

Distortion of Fact, Says Army

Gorbatov said when he asked American Army officers why the ill were not segregated and given medical treatment, he was told: "Oh, what you propose is too expensive. These aren't whites, these are only Okinawans."

"I visited the 'death factories' in Germany—now I saw a 'camp of death' in Okinawa," the broadcast continued. "Later I was told that there were several such villages in Okinawa. They too, are surrounded by barbed wire. It is forbidden to enter the camp, it is forbidden to leave it."

[An Army Department spokesman said yesterday the Russian report was a distortion of fact.

[He said that Okinawans had been employed by United States forces in "good" jobs since the capture of the island. Their villages, he explained, were made "out of bounds" to United States personnel and usually were fenced to enforce this rule.—Editor's note.]

Charges "Drunken Orgy"

The Russian correspondent said he visited the Philippines at about the same time, and found Manila crowded with American soldiers kept on hand to "preserve order" during an election campaign.

"In Manila, I did not see upon the streets a single sober American soldier," he reported. "The city groaned from their drunken orgy. The conquerors were having fun."

On the other hand, he declared, the Filipinos crowded around several Russians then in the city and gave them "enthusiastic ovations." Garbatov concluded:

"They knew it was the Soviet army which routed the Japanese, smashed Hitler, saved the world."

Virginians 'Play to Lose'

at work for the Republican candidates, Governor Dewey and Governor Earl Warren of California.

There's a headquarters for the States' Rights Party candidates, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi.

Both groups are ready to tell you Truman hasn't a chance in Virginia. Each is ready to tell you its side will win. Neither expects the Progressive Party of Henry A. Wallace to make much of a dent in the presidential balloting.

Only move now in sight to be made by the State Democratic organization is a meeting of the party's State Central Committee, set for September 25 in Richmond.

At the top political level, only Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), has voiced support of President Truman's campaign. He announced his support with the companion statement that he has been and would continue to be violently opposed to the Truman civil rights program.

One likely decision of the Democratic State Central Committee will be to work hard in the congressional races, and to keep hands off in the presidential races.

If that group makes no play for a Truman-Barkley campaign, anti-organization and pro-Truman Democrats may move independently to get into the fight. It would be done, probably, by setting up a State Truman-Barkley club, with affiliates through the States.

Virginia's top level organization Democrats as a group are clearly on record as anti-Truman. Gov. William Tuck, with encouragement from Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), rode in the vanguard of the bitter Southern countercharge against President Truman's civil rights program. Early this year the Governor called for the General Assembly to enact a new election law that might have been used to keep President Truman's name off the ballot. The law was watered down.

In 1944, Dewey polled 145,243 Virginia votes, to 242,276 for President Roosevelt. Fewer than 1000 votes were divided among three minor party presidential candidates. Take 50,000 votes away from Roosevelt's total in 1944, give them to Thurmond and leave the rest for Truman and the latter is still far ahead of Dewey's 1944 total.

Republican leaders said that if they can boost their 38 per cent share in the Virginia vote of 1944 to 44 per cent this year "it's in the bag for Dewey."

Dewey himself has said he would make a campaign speech in Virginia, according to Earle Lutz, executive director for the Republican campaign in Virginia. No date is set.

Lutz said these other major campaign events are expected: (1) a speach by former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, at Charlottesville, in October; (2) Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) to speak at Winchester October 7 during a visit of the Freedom Train; (3) Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., of the Republican National Committee to speak twice, with no dates set; Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) to speak at Lexington October 25.

Curiously divergent views are voiced by different officials of the Dixiecrat group. From one you hear that the Dixiecrat movement would collapse if Republican leaders openly or confidentially gave assurance that they would not implement the civil rights program, but would leave the States free to handle such matters. From another you hear that the Dixiecrats are in the fight to win.

From one official you hear that the group has enlisted many old line Democrats long actively identified with the dominant machine organization in the State. From another you hear that there is absolutely no connection between the Democrat organization and the Dixiecrat organization. Outsiders say there is a connection both in terms of personnel and in terms of basic political thinking, between the Dixiecrat group and the dominant group in the Democrats' State organization.

U. S. Ousting 50 Employes

General Tom C. Clark requested the FBI to give a list of the Federal workers whose disloyalty the department would have at least a 50-50 chance to prove in court. He also requested a list of the witnesses who had volunteered to testify against them, and a resume of their stories.

The cases were given a quick study by the lawyers in the Criminal Division and it was decided, tentatively, which ones would be prosecuted.

Several days later—on September 10—Clark and his top assistant, Peyton Ford, began to call in officials of agencies where the suspected people were employed. The suspension orders were given at these conferences. Most of the employes involved are now off the payroll. Several are employed in this city.

The next step is possible, grand jury action. It was explained that criminal action could be taken under either the Hatch Act, which is designed to bar Communists from Federal employment, or the rider on appropriation acts that requires each Federal worker to swear he is not a member of an organization that believes in overthrow of our form of Government by force and violence.

The Justice Department can be expected to follow along the lines of the Carl Marzani case in presenting some of the cases to the grand jury. Marzani, former State Department employe, was convicted of fraud on a charge of concealing membership in the Communist Party.

"It was emphasized that each in the series of loyalty cases was turned up as a direct result of the President's loyalty program. As one official explained: "This will show conclusively that the President's program is an effective and fair instrument to rid the Government of disloyal employes."

Clark Rejected As Witness In Red Probes

McClure, Pa., Sept. 18 (AP).—Senator Homer Ferguson said today Attorney General Tom Clark lacks enough knowledge about Communists in government to be of aid to congressional probes.

The Michigan Republican rejected Clark as "a qualified witness" in renewing a plea that Congress be allowed to quiz J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Clark is Hoover's immediate superior.

"The man we want to talk to is Mr. Hoover, not Mr. Clark" Ferguson told a reporter. "Mr. Clark personally doesn't know enough of the subject to be of much value to us."

The white-haired lawmaker made the remarks as he stepped off a train at nearby Lewistown, Pa., to appear here for a speech before a rural Republican rally.

He continued a hit and run verbal battle over what should be done to clamp legal shackles on known American Communists. It started yesterday when Ferguson asked Clark to seek immediately indictments against "Reds" both in and out of Government.

The request brought this reply from Clark in a letter to Ferguson made public at Washington:

"I would appreciate it if you would quit trying to claim credit for the work of the FBI and the Department of Justice and keep your political activity out of the field of serious prosecution of offenses under Federal statutes."

But Ferguson, chairman of a Senate subcommittee investigating Communist activity in the Government, denied that he was seeking "credit."

"I was asking him to do his duty," Ferguson said. "As a Senator, I have a right to do so. He also has a responsibility to the people."

AVC Committee Votes 16 to 1 To Expel Daily Worker Editor

John Gates, editor of the Daily Worker, yesterday was expelled as a member of the American Veterans Committee.

The ouster action was taken here by the national planning committee of the AVC.

The AVC said Gates was ousted because of membership in the Communist Party and on the ground that the principles of the Communist Party are inconsistent with those of the AVC.

The original action against Gates was instituted by the national administrative committee of the AVC which last month held a hearing to determine if Gates was a Communist.

At the hearing, Gates refused to state whether he was a member of the Communist Party. However, one witness testified that Gates had told him he had been a party member for 17 years.

Yesterday, 18 members of the National Planning Committee voted on whether Gates should be ousted and 16 voted in favor of the ouster. One committee member voted against ousting Gates, a World War II veteran, now, declaring it would be more proper for the issue to be put before the national convention of the AVC.

The eighteenth member refrained from voting on the grounds that he had disqualified himself by acting as legal adviser to Gates. This member said, however, that had he voted he would have opposed the ouster.

Free Time on Air Denied Atheists

By the United Press

A special congresional committee said last night that radio stations need not grant Atheists free time to reply to religious programs.

The committee accordingly advised the Federal Communications Commission to make that clear in its regulations or the next session of Congress will be asked to do so.

Commission Chairman Wayne Coy promptly issued a statement declaring that the agency's decision precipitating the controversy has been widely misrepresented. He said the FCC's so-called "Scott decision" of 1946 does not require stations to give rebuttal time to atheists.

The special House committee appointed to investigate the commission accused the agency in drawing up the Scott decision, of adopting "a dangerouse and unwarranted policy of thought policing that has no basis in law."

The committee, headed by Representative Forrest A. Harness (R., Ind), said in an interim report that radio stations had interpreted the decision as meaning they had to give atheists time to answer religious broadcasts.

The committee accused the commission of embarking on "a dangerous and mischievous line of reasoning that anything and everything should be permitted on the air regardless of its conformity to the rules of ordinary decency, to the sensibilities of the listening public or to the possible effect upon the moral standards of the Nation."

Johnston Hails Textron Move

Senator Johnston (D., S. C.) invited the Senate Small Business Committee yesterday to go to Anderson, S. C., to learn why Textron, Inc., has gone South for its main operations.

Textron has announced plans to close six mills in New England and Virginia.

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.), chairman of a Senate Commerce subcommittee, announced Friday his group will go to Nashua, N. H., September 22 to investigate closing of the mills.

The letter said: "Textron has recently designated my native city of Anderson as the operations center and main office for all its extensive operations. Several new plants are being constructed in nearby South Carolina and Georgia.

The letter added that "if you wish to unearth the significance and real seasons for such migration, you go to Anderson and make your investigations there," and continued:

"Already there is a community of industry centered in Piedmont, S. C., which leads the Nation in textile spindle activity. We have a temperate climate, abundant hydro-electric power, ample supply of intelligence, skill and stable labor, proximity to raw material, domestic markets and world ports of fast-growing importance."

Education Board Asks $221,000 for Refitting 9 Schools; Western High Would Get $82,610

The $23,746,250 budget requested by the District Board of Education for the fiscal year starting next July contains an item of $221,000 for the replacement of wornout furniture and equipment in nine schools.

Here are details of how the board would spend the money:

Armstrong Senior High School—$50,500 for new stage lig ting equipment and replacement of machines and equipment in electric, auto, graphic arts and shoe shops. Equipment in these shops is far below standard, the budget statement declares.

Bell Elementary—$12,500 to replace folding chairs and other auditorium equipment and for the purchase of new equipment for an occupational unit for boys.

Eastern High—$4000 for 60 mechanical drawing tables and stools, 60 sets of drawing instruments, 300 drawing boards and one blueprint machine to replace present equipment in use for more than 25 years.

Garnet-Patterson Junior High—$28,260 to equip an electric shop and bring the course offered in this subject up to standard; also for replacement of all lockers which have been in use for more than 20 years.

Langley Junior High—$9500 for replacement of equipment in the art room, five classrooms and the principal's office.

Macfarland Junior High—$11,830 for 500 half-size lockers to replace old lockers which no longer can be repaired and for 870 auditorium chairs to be used on an inclined floor, money for which is requested elsewhere in the budget.

Webster Americanization—$18,000 to completely renovate this school. A recent inspection showed that the furniture, practically all of which was transferred from other schools, is in "deplorable condition," the budget statement said.

Western High—$82,610 for new furniture to complete a modernization program started two years ago.

"If this request is approved, Western High School will have equipment in classrooms, shops, laboratories and other facilities, similar to that in use at Coolidge and Wilson High Schools," the budget request points out.

The money would be used to renovate the bank, book storage rooms, cafeteria, central sound system, child care laboratory, 29 classrooms, locker rooms, music rooms, offices, science laboratories and teachers' rooms.

Wilson High—$6800 to complete purchase of auditorium and stage equipment and provide 200 recessed lockers on the third floor.

'Soapless Soaps' Will Be Topic at Chemists' Session

Mixed Group Again Barred At Rosedale

Members of the Young Progressives of America yesterday failed again in efforts to lead a mixed racial group into the Rosedale Playground at 17th and Gales st. ne.

Small groups of corner loungers and the curious watched as Police Inspector Clarence Talley met the demonstrators at the playground gate and warned them that only the white children could enter.

A short discussion ensued, with Talley winding it up with the statement that he was "sick and tired" of the YPA groups' repeated demonstrations.

The knots of spectators, though curious, were orderly throughout the discussion and the one and one-half-hour picketing that followed.

Approximately 20 members of the YPA, about half of them Negroes, paraded in front of the playground carrying signs.

The picketers had assembled at the home of Thomas Sampler, 1661 Gales st. ne., half a block from the playground. They marched to the play area where Mrs. Lois Kurrier, 3545 10th st. nw., and Mrs. Rita Fleisher, 1339 Saratoga ave. ne., each leading a white child and a Negro child, attempted to gain entrance.

Parade, Display To Feature Fire Prevention Week

A parade and the display of fire equipment at various points in the city are planned for Fire Prevention Week, October 3 to 9, by the newly formed Fire Prevention Council.

High school art students have been asked to participate in a poster contest, and radio talks on fire prevention methods are being arranged by the council, headed by Harry J. Miller, representing the Board of Trade and Graphic Arts Association. Vice chairmen are Thomas F. Smith, Junior Board of Commerce, and Marcus Borchardt, attorney. Charles R. Barker, jr., Insurance Club of Washington, is treasurer, and Marie C. Rogers, Board of Trade, secretary.

Smith heads the committee on public demonstration; Borchardt, that on publicity and promotion, and the poster contest is being arranged by Dr. Carl F. Hansen, associate superintendent of schools, and Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell of the parochial schools.

Franco Trip Finds D. C. Group Divided on Merits of Regime

Ninety Americans, many from Washington, have just returned from a two-month trip to Spain, arranged and partly paid for by agencies of the Franco regime.

They brought back at least one thing they took with them: a difference of opinion on the merits of the Spanish government.

Many thought conditions in Spain were better than generally believed in the United States. Others didn't like what they regarded as repressive aspects of the Franco rule.

The Rev. Joseph A. Sobrino, a Cadiz-born priest attached to the Spanish Embassy here, led the expedition. He announced on his return that the Spanish government will "welcome" another group next summer—preferably even larger.

Miss Coulson

Fr. Sabrino

Visitors paid $800, of which $700 went for transportation.

In discussing the excursion, the genial 37-year-old priest said, "We feel the case of Spain is misrepresented . . . we wanted to let the Americans see for themselves."

The Franco government, as "a seed for the future," wined and dined the visitors, the rotund clergyman explained. A small group even visited privately with the Chief of State, Francisco Franco.

Just how much the "generous" attitude of the Spanish government accomplished could not be measured, but it split the opinion of at least one Washington family.

Mrs. Edith Coulson of 1770 Columbia rd. nw., a housewife, found her views on Spain materially altered.

"A lot of us had the wrong impression," she declared. "Actually the government is doing wonders."

She said she was "mighty pleased with Franco" and felt he was "the right man for the country."

But Rhoda Coulson, her daughter, a graduate of American University here, had a different view.

"I found Spain very intolerant, very conservative and completely lacking in freedom," she asserted. "Maybe I'm too much accustomed to freedom," she mused, "but the complete lack of it sure rubbed me the wrong way."

Miss Coulson felt she was able to get a more objective impression of the country than most of the visitors because of a good knowledge of Spanish and considerable background on the history and culture of the country.

She reported finding "as many soldiers on the streets as in Washington during the war," no "religious freedom" and extensive political restrictions.

Surveillance was so close, she reported, that police had to be constantly advised of the movements of the "foreigners." And native opposition to the government is risky.

"Anyone who disagrees with the government is automatically a Red," she said. "And that's dangerous."

Schools Head Asks Negroes To Cooperate

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—State Superintendent of Public Instruction G. Tyler Miller said today the quality of an educational program depends more upon the teachers than the buildings and called for cooperation by Negroes instead of court injunction as a means of solving the equalization problem.

In a 2000-word statement on the equalization matter—aftermath of a drive by Negroes in a number of Virginia areas to speed school plant improvements for pupils of their race—Miller said the gap between financial support of Negro and white education had been narrowed considerably in the past decade. He said it was reasonable to believe salaries of Negro and white teachers would be equalized completely by the 1949-50 school session.

And on the matter of buildings and other school plant facilities which he called admittedly important and necessary adjuncts in an effective program of education, the superintendent said:

"If the funds can be made available, it is evident that the local and State school authorities are willing and anxious to improve school plants throughout the State for both white and Negro pupils.

Miller said the recent emphasis in the equalization matter had been placed mostly on the physical facilities. He added, however, that those qualified to evaluate an education program generally conceded that the quality of the program rested to a major degree upon the teacher.

"It would appear, therefore," he said, "that those who are properly concerned with equality of educational opportunities for all children, both white and Negro, should place the emphasis more on the instructional program and on well-trained teachers, financially secure in their positions, than upon the buildings and other psysical facilities . . ."

Army Contracts for Union to Handle Cargoes But West Coast Maritime Strike Continues

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Army, bypassing the struck Waterfront Employers' Association, today completed contracts for handling essential Army cargo from West Coast ports with CIO longshoremen.

The office of Assistant Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray said a contract let to the Mutual Stevedoring Co. of San Francisco would cover the ports of San Francisco, Stockton and the Los Angeles area.

A similar contract covering Seattle was announced yesterday.

The statement said the Army "stopped recruiting civil service longshoremen and associated dock workers" when the contract was signed, but "the release of those employed already is not contemplated."

The signing is expected to free all strike-bound military cargoes from the effects of the 17-day Pacific Coast maritime strike, but had no effect on civilian cargoes.

Military shipping accounts for 30 per cent of the Pacific Coast's normal cargoes.

There were no indications of an end to the longshoremen's strike against contractors' associations which refused to do business with the union on grounds that its leaders had refused to sign non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act.

At East Moline, Ill., a strike of CIO Farm Equipment Workers at the International Harvester Co. works was called off by the union after nine weeks. Arvid Sheets, local chairman of the union, said the plant's 3000 workers would return to work in a body Monday and that job reclassification issues which led to the walkout would be negotiated with the company later.

Child Protective Association Gets New Secretary

Miss Genevieve Gabower has been appointed executive secretary of the Children's Protective Association here, it was announced yesterday. She succeeds Miss Mildred Terrett, who resigned.

Miss Gabower

Miss Gabower's experience includes consultant work in juvenile delinquency for the United States Children's Bureau. ## Fiscal Dilemma

The meaning of the District Commissioners' drastic economy order is made unmistakably plain in the details of next year's school budget now released. School authorities have been required to submit estimates that make no allowance for new school construction and provide for only 16 additional teachers. The inevitable result will be continued overcrowding in many schools, inadequate salaries for teachers and shortages of equipment. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, was being conservative when she said that "these estimates do not include many of the critical needs of the public schools for 1950."

Even with this drastic paring, there remains a 15-million-dollar gap between estimated revenue and the proposed expenditures of the various local departments. In addition, some means must be found to raise the $5,500,000 that will be needed to increase the salaries of District employes in line with the increases granted Federal workers by the last Congress. Obviously the city faces a financial dilemma. Its needs for civic improvements and better municipal service are enormous, and its possible sources of new revenue seem meager by comparison. Certainly the next Congress will be faced by the necessity of enacting a District sales tax. The question is whether or not sufficient revenue can be obtained by this means to avoid stagnation in our civic growth.

Considering the narrow bounds of their discretion, the Commissioners have no alternative to drastic economy. They are required to submit to Congress a balanced budget on a pay-as-you-go basis. In the light of that fact there is much to be said for having the departments themselves do the budget trimming. But this does not dispose of the larger problem of whether the pay-as-you-go policy should be retained in this period when the city urgently needs additional schools, health centers, libraries and welfare institutions because of its enormous growth during the war. It seems to us that the time has come for discussion of this larger issue as earnestly as the more immediate problem of raising more revenue for current operating expenses is discussed.

We doubt that Congress can properly decide the course to be taken. How can Congressmen from Texas, North Dakota or other distant States know whether the people of the District prefer to solve their fiscal dilemma by more drastic economy, higher taxes or an amortized bond issue? Probably no satisfactory answer can be given until the city has a government of its own. The present dilemma should encourage the advocates of home rule to press their demands, and it certainly ought to make Congress more willing to listen.

Air Force

Over this weekend Air Force bombers have been demonstrating the feasibility of long-range bombing. Planes from Japan, Germany, Iceland and the Aleutians have simulated attacks upon American cities. The distances these planes are able to cover would, of course, apply in reverse in the event that the United States were attacking an enemy by air. Thus the demonstration has served a dual purpose, showing the capability of present bombers to carry an assault to an enemy and illustrating the vulnerability of our own defenses against such an attack.

The maneuvers were appropriate to focus attention on the Air Force as it observed its first anniversary as an independent establishment. There is little point in reviewing again the 41 years of Air Force history and what they mean to the slogan of "peace power." If the Air Force had not become the preeminent American military arm beforehand, the atom bomb made it such. The danger today is not that the potentialities of air power will be underestimated but that its actual present-day capabilities will be oversold.

On this point, especially, the leaders of the Air Force bear a great responsibility to the American public. This sense of responsibility has not always been apparent. There have been too many rash predictions, too many scare stories by generals who visualize nothing but an umbrella of air power. Doubtless many of these leaders have justified their sensationalism on the grounds that theirs is a sacred mission. But a combination of scares and overconfidence seldom produces rational results. The hysterical manner in which the 70-group program was rammed through Congress without any real consideration of what it meant is an example of the kind of response such tactics bring.

On its birthday the Air Force found public opinion well disposed toward it, partly because of its inherent glamour but more because of its tremendous importance. The tension with Russia and the success of the Berlin airlift have helped increase respect for the air arm. Yet the Air Force is a part of the total military picture. How can we maintain a comprehensive military establishment adequate to our needs without strangling the national economy? Are air defense needs, such as radar warning nets, being overlooked in favor of total emphasis on offense? Is too much attention being given to the instruments of attack and too little to the supplies, bases and men they will require? Can a proper balance be struck between the blueprint and the production line so that the country will have a necessary striking force and still not be bogged down in obsolescence? These questions call for thought along with the congratulations to the Air Force for its accomplishments.

Party Line On Mr. Lie

Mr. Trygve Lie, who owes his job as secretary general of the United Nations in part to the fact that he was personna grata to Moscow at the time of his appointment three years ago, has now lost—or should we say gained—Soviet disfavor. The foreign editor of Pravda has taken note of the secretary general's third annual report in terms made familiar by the Russian experts in polemics. "Lie's position corresponds to the interest of the Anglo-American bloc and not to the interests of the peace and the security of nations," says Pravda. "The report cannot in any circumstances be accepted as corresponding to an objective statement of events and a correct interpretation of facts."

Our examination of the same report leads us to the opinion that it is by and large a straightforward and unexciting relation of actions taken by the United Nations and its subordinate bodies. Of interpretation there is none at all, and the report is nothing if not objective. The Pravda editor has clearly gone out of his way to find faults where none exist and would be hard put to substantiate his accusations out of the text of the report. On the long-drawn-out negotiations for control of atomic energy and on the Greek troubles, to mention only two of the points of alleged distortion, the report simply recounts the dry facts of resolutions passed or defeated, reports made and discussed, and votes taken. Mr. Lie does not even go into the argumentation brought forward on these and other issues by the various parties to support their positions.

His real offense, in Moscow's code of behavior, is to have mentioned the Marshall Plan without condemning it from A to Z as a scheme to bypass, undermine and destroy the United Nations, the peace of the world, and the welfare of the "peoples' democracies." What Mr. Lie actually said of the Marshall Plan was as follows: "This programme holds great promise for the restoration of western Europe to economic and political stability, but it can have lasting results only if present political divisions are not permitted to block coordinated action within Europe as a whole and an increase of trade between eastern and western Europe." On this single sentence, we suspect, hangs the entire fabric of Pravda's condemnation of the report in whole and in all its parts.

The importance of the attack does not, of course, lie in its content but in its effect on Mr. Lie's position. The secretary general not only must be acceptable to all the five permanent members of the Security Council in order to be appointed but must continue to enjoy their confidence if he is to operate effectively. The Charter says nothing about the secretary general's tenure of office, nor about how he may be removed if necessary. It does provide that he shall not take orders from any member government nor take any action reflecting on his position as an international official "responsible only to the organization."

The Charter also pledges the member states to respect the international character of the secretary general's responsibilities and not to try to influence him in the discharge of those responsibilities. Of course Pravda is the organ of the Communist Party, not the Soviet government. The Kremlin can plead innocence of attempting to influence Mr. Lie in violation of the Charter. It is a convenient technicality and nothing more.

United Front

The arrangement for direct and secret communication between John Foster Dulles at the United Nations Assembly meeting in Paris and Governor Dewey at home is significant beyond the mere extension of courtesy to a presidential nominee. Mr. Dulles has become in effect the representative of the Republican candidate for President at the Paris gathering. He will send Governor Dewey confidential reports and in return will receive whatever "guidance" the Governor has to offer. We may assume that Secretary Marshall will thus be kept fully advised as to what Mr. Dewey as well as President Truman is thinking with regard to the issues before the conference. It is an advanced step in the development of our bipartisan foreign policy.

The Russians can scarcely ignore this demonstration of unity in the conduct of the United States' foreign affairs. Whatever hope the Kremlin may have had that political wrangling would weaken our position in the world has sustained a sharp blow. To our friends in the Foreign Offices of Great Britain, France and other countries also this unity of purpose will be reassuring. Fear that our policy of cooperation to keep the peace and preserve freedom might crumble with a change of administrations has not died out in the capitals of Europe. The peoples and governments that are struggling back to stability on that continent need to be told in the most convincing fashion that the policy this country is pursuing is neither Democratic nor Republican, but American. If it can be shown that our foreign policy is one in which not only Secretary Marshall and Mr. Dulles abroad but also President Truman and Governor Dewey at home are working together, the hope for peace will be given a new vitality.

Soiled Victory

Superior force has decided the issue in Hyderabad in favor of the invading Indian army. After only about 100 hours of ineffective resistance, the Hyderbad forces have been ordered by the Nizam, into whose hands the cabinet placed the welfare of the state, to cease fire. The surrender, in effect, removes the Hyderabad conflict from the category of threats to the peace, and the Indian representatives before the Security Council can now argue on factual grounds that no dispute exists.

But if the issue of might has been decided, the issue of right has not. Indian success at arms may no longer be denied, but the propriety of India's resort to arms may still be questioned. The speedy end to Hyderabadian resistance may mean that the conflict will not develop, as otherwise it might have, into warfare between India and Pakistan and into Moslem-Hindu communal massacres. This is consolation of a sort, but not justification for the original invasion. There may be little the United Nations can now do except pass a resolution of censure against the Indian resort to force and then insist on a plebiscite to legitimatize the situation.

Bevin's Policy

The short special session of the British Parliament now in progress is well on the way to disproving the name once applied to it: the "silly session." Called solely for the purpose of going through the prescribed second reading of a bill to curb the House of Lords' veto power, Parliament has almost from the outset concerned itself with debate on British foreign policy in Europe, India and elsewhere. Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Anthony Eden, deputy leader of the opposition, both spoke in the House of Commons on Wednesday, and both alluded to the importance of a "western union" as a third force to balance the power of the United States and the Soviet Union.

As he has done before, Mr. Bevin kicked the idea of western union around. By emphasizing the difficulties in the way of achieving it, which are not slight to be sure, he revealed a lack of enthusiasm for it that belies his ostensible support. Indeed, that support itself has been less than wholehearted in the past. When Mr. Churchill got together a conclave of unionists at The Hague several months ago, Messrs. Bevin and Attlee gave the meeting a complete cold shoulder.

One difficulty in the British position Mr. Bevin succeeded in straddling without straining a muscle. The western union, he indicated, should be composed of the Marshall Plan countries and those of the British Commonwealth. These nations constitute the center of the free world. The implication is clear that the western union must extend beyond the confines of Europe. Canada, for instance, is both geographically and strategically allied with the United States in preparations for Arctic defense, and the Canadians are not anxious to align themselves in a bloc of nations dedicated to swinging whichever way a balance of power might require. The union must be of broader scope and draw its leadership from the new world as well as the old.

The British are a lot closer to the prospective scene of battle if another war should break out than we on this side of the Atlantic. Carping criticism of British wavering would ill become us, both on that ground and because our own foreign policy is not a model of clarity and firmness. Important as British leadership is in the achievement of western union, it is less important than United States leadership. The proper response to British hesitation, in our opinion, is more initiative in Washington in drawing the free world together.

More History

The study of American history, now a two-semester required course in District high schools, will be expanded to three semesters if the Board of Education approves a recommendation of Superintendent Corning. One semester of the lengthened program will absorb a presently elective course in civics and will concentrate attention on the Constitution and the Federal and District governments. The proposed change has the support of both the schools' curriculum committee and the principals. Presumably it will be applauded by those patriotic societies which hold that the purpose and effect of studying American history is to inculcate loyalty to the Nation's institutions.

This newspaper, too, is in agreement with the revision and with its purpose. Increased knowledge and understanding of the history and government of the United States and of the ideals which give them life cannot but make for better citizenship. American history can leave no question in a student's mind of the superiority of our ideals and sincerity of our efforts to achieve them. But it can also leave no question that we have our imperfections, too. The United States is a wonderful country, but it is not heaven on earth, and any student of history or civics who got the impression that it cannot be improved has been denied his birthright as an American citizen to search out the flaws and make the reality conform more closely, generation by generation, to the ideal of "one Nation, Indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Rail Fare Increase

I was in Washington during the summer of 1920 when the Interstate Commerce Commission approved a fare increase for the railroads from 2 cents a mile to 3.6 cents. That evening, when I first heard of it, I told my railroad employer that it would ruin the railway passenger business.

It came even faster than was anticipated. For the seven years following I was on the road almost constantly between the East and West Coast north of the Ohio and could see the very great loss taking place in railroad passenger traffic. It was simply heartbreaking to this railroad employe that no one who could would do anything about it before a large part of the railroad passenger travel had gone to the highways. About 1933 the basic fare of 3.6 cents was again reduced to 2 cents, but by this time a large western railroad had lost about five-sixths of the gross annual passenger earnings of the early 1920's.

Once more the railroads have raised rail fares to about the level of 1920 without apparently giving any thought to the disastrous results following the 1920 fare increase. Already there is evidence of a falling off in the number of passengers carried and revenues earned, despite the very large fare increase. What will be the result if we have a severe depression about the year of 1952, and this time with air line fares not very far from first-class railroad fares? I hope railroad managers ask themselves this question. LEO. B. FRISCH.

Over the Precipice

Anyone honestly seeking for an answer to the gravest question facing the world today—Exactly why is it that the human family is headed straight for irretrievable disaster?—can find it by perusing the pages of The Washington Post of September 15.

There was real news in Washington—appalling news as well as big news. At several meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the word was passed out so that all who would hear could hear that mankind is today teetering on the brink of deliberate suicide. And that word came, not from rattle-brained political partisans, but from the highest scientific authorities.

The editors of The Post saw fit to relegate that story to the sixth page. Yet the first page blazed with these headlines: "40 Americans Die, 60 Hurt in Korea Train Crash," and "Spy Probers Demand Contempt Action on Communist Witness."

There exactly is an illustration of the reason why mankind presently will go over the precipice! The story of the inevitable suicide of world civilization and its reasons, lacking human appeal, is sixth page news; the stories of a train wreck in Korea with 40 Americans dead and 60 injured, and of the Communist spy probe on Capitol Hill, both of intense human interest, feature the first page.

Is it then any wonder that the gods or devils—whichever the sages of the editoral staff of The Post fancy more—are laughing hilariously? J. H. S.

Chinese Students

"A. P.'s" letter of August 28 is a curious effort at refutation of the facts contained in my original letter of August 23, taken from official government releases—that thousands of students are refugeeing from Chinese Communist areas. He, quite casually, concedes that "13,000 high school students from Honan and Shantung . . . went to Nanking," but he pleads that they must have come from "landlords' families" and that they left their towns before the Communists arrived and not after. Later, he also admits to there being "refugee students from Manchuria in Peiping."

Despite these admissions, he says that "on the contrary, there are many students . . . running . . . to the Communist area" (though he advances no facts or figures) and furnishes two instances of government treatment of students, which he implies furnish reasons why the students "run away from government areas."

He states that the students (refugees from Communists) in Peiping were ordered conscripted to fight against the Communists and that their demonstration against this was met by shooting. The government case states that such refugee students, who had no identification papers, were ordered to be sent to a summer camp for military training and classification before being assigned to Peiping schools and that there was no suggestion of their use to fight the Communists.

He asserts that in the Kaifeng battle government troops burned "many school buildings" and shot "many students." The government release says: "The Kaifeng battle damage was greatly exaggerated . . . talk of . . . burning of school buildings, etc., was contrary to what visiting correspondents saw."

Pan American Art

John C. Rogers' letter of September 15 accuses the Pan American art show of being neither representative nor modern. I feel that it would be useless to try to tie down and define contemporary art and say what it should be, as so many would do without any attempt at understanding, going by personal taste alone.

Man in art has from time to time always changed in expression. Attempts have been made at different intervals to limit that expression—dictate what it should be. The cold, academic school of David attempted this and succeeded in retarding the normal growth of art in his period. Ingres and David were two artists who saw nature transcribed through the Greeks and Romans and expressed themselves in dry rhetoric in a technique that was slick and meticulous, seeing only the surface of things. These two artists were the antithesis of artists like Corot, who had to bow to the dictates of his period and painted two pictures on the same subject—one for himself as he truly felt, and one for the public that would have considered his self-expression "insane daubs."

Van Gogh was absolutely unappreciated in his lifetime and considered mad. Many artists have been called insane by their contemporaries.

Some of today's art may be purely experimental. Some of it may hold its own far into the future. If art is truly creative and has the freedom of aesthetic growth, no educated man should close his mind to its development.

We should be influenced by the past, but only by such artistic giants as Giotto, Rembrandt, El Greco and Cezanne.

"Injustice To The Few"

Ever since I read of the reported statement of the committee of Congress that, "Injustice to the few is justified in the name of security for the many," I have been struggling with my emotions.

While The Washington Post indicates that it is alive to the great danger to the people as a whole through the adoption of a policy whereby the general welfare of the majority is to be "promoted" in violation of the guaranty—"We will sell to no man, we will deny to no man right and justice"—it seems to me that it fails to use its opportunity to expose to the fullest possible degree the base, ignoble and altogether despicable nature of this governmental policy.

How can the sovereignties—State and national—take the liberties of its citizens because the A's steal from the B's, and yet the same sovereignties rob the citizens of that which is more valuable than anything generally classed as property? Isn't it still true that "He who robs me of my purse steals trash, but he who robs me of my good name robs me of that which neither enriches him, but makes me poor indeed?"

Isn't it still true that the only hope for mankind to enjoy the freedom which is an element of life itself is through a governmental system of written laws? Laws based upon the moral concept and embracing the ideal of a law of the land which is "a law which hears before it condemns, which proceeds upon inquiry and renders judgment only after hearing." The maintenance in its fullest integrity of this guaranty to which we are all parties, is the heart and soul of Americanism.

Why prate about lynchings in South Carolina, or elsewhere in the Nation, when the representatives of the United States Congress indulge in the same despicable practice — openly, brazenly, right in the halls of the Congress? Why preach to members of mobs, made up of ignorant, infuriated human beings, that "you must let the law take its course" while at the same time the educated and enlightened—both in and out of Congress—depart so definitely from their oaths by which they are committed to support and defend the Constitution?

To rob a man of his good name, to brand a citizen as being disloyal to his country until after he has had the full protection of the law which must hear before it condemns—which means only after full and fair inquiry—is the foulest form of lynching.

If the situation as to Communist spies is so bad that to save ourselves requires an operation on our Government whereby its most vital organ must be removed and destroyed, with no possibility of substituting anything but an iron lung from behind the iron curtain, then what is the use of talking about containing Russia within any particular territorial area? A totalitarian government is none the less a totalitarian government, whether it operated in Washington or Moscow.

There is but one pattern of this form of government. It operates not subject to the sovereignty of the law of the land, but subject to the will of the masters presently in power. In its early stages, as now in the United States, by the will of these masters injustice is practiced on "only a few," but tomorrow the masters will be unable to resist the call from on high to secure the general welfare of the majority through the process of destroying the rights of larger numbers of the minority.

Socialists in French Crisis

By Andre Visson

Neighbors' View

GENEVA—France's small neighbors follow with growing uneasiness the developments of the French crisis. The prevailing opinion in Switzerland—as well as in Belgium—is that the present French crisis is the crisis of a regime. The Swiss and the Belgians have the sad feeling of watching the death agony of the Fourth Republic in France. They never thought too highly of the Fourth Republic, but it spoke at least the same democratic language they have been speaking in their respective countries. And they wonder how and when the Fourth Republic in France will be liquidated.

Best Belgian observers of French affairs have been convinced for more than a year that General de Gaulle is bound to take over power in France. Now their opinion appears to be shared by the majority of the Swiss observers of the French political and social stage. "Only a miracle can save the Fourth Republic and the middle-of-the road democracy in France" is the opinion which you hear both in Brussels and in Berne.

The Swiss and the Belgians are rather worried at the idea of De Gaulle's return to power. They fear that his return is likely to be met by serious social troubles. They do not expect a civil war in France. They have confidence in the traditional common sense of the French people. But they sincerely deplore everything that weakens even temporarily France's position in Europe.

IT IS really significant for the future of Europe that, despite all their disappointments with the French, both during the war and since the liberation, the Belgians and the Swiss continue to look toward France and not toward England as a natural leader of western Europe. They respect and admire the British virtues of self-discipline and sacrifice. They deplore and criticize the French weakness and disorder. But they feel more at ease with the French than with the British.

Centuries of history cannot be easily washed out in Europe. France and Germany are fundamentally European countries. They are the core of Europe. Their reconciliation is indispensable for organization of western Europe. It is perhaps western Europe's last chance to survive.

Continental Europeans find it therefore quite natural that the French government was the first to come out with an official proposal for a constituent European assembly. And they find it almost as natural that the British cabinet poured tepid water on the French proposal. Both developments appear to them to follow the traditional pattern of western European history.

But their desire to see France succeed in establishing, together with the Benelux countries, some kind of western European union makes them resent with particular bitterness the game of French politics, which they make responsible for the present French crisis. They feel that the French politicians who persist in their destructive game of knocking down their frail coalition governments let down not only the people of France but the peoples of all western Europe.

FRANCE'S small neighbors are usually restrained in their public criticisms of France. This is particularly true of the Swiss, who often remark that, having been fortunate enough to escape the burden of a war and of an occupation, they have no moral right to be too critical of the French, whose present troubles are to a very great extent the sad consequence of the French ordeal during the war.

But they believe that the French politicians, even though elected by the French people, have ceased to be really representative of the people of France. And they put most of the blame on the French Socialists.

It is rather revealing that the most bitter criticisms of the French Socialists in the Swiss press can be found in Volksrecht, the official newspaper of the Swiss Socialist Party. Volksrecht declares that the French working classes revealed themselves to be "absolutely unable to practice an efficient and constructive policy." The Swiss Socialist newspaper would like to see the French workers and their Socialist leaders concentrate on both the indispensable adjustment of the French economy to the modern technical conditions and on a more equitable distribution of goods produced in France.

Similar criticisms of French Socialists leaders are voiced in the Belgian Socialist press. The general feeling in both countries is that when General de Gaulle comes to power he will owe it not so much to the attraction of his antipartisan and antiparliamentarian program nor to the political ability of his advisers as to the utter lack of statesmanship and even of a political common sense displayed by the Socialist leaders in France.

Bull Calves

I see in your issue of September 15 that Farm Editor Leon Hale of the Houston Post said that all dairy cows were bearing nothing but bull calves. What more can we expect? Ever since 1933 our Nation's cows have been forced by law to read nothing but Government bulletins.

How the Security Council Works

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

IT IS TIME for a report on what the National Security Council is and what it does. For it is now clear that, almost unnoticed, the National Security Council has effected a radical and deeply significant change in the whole technique of making American national policy.

As it has developed over the past year, the Council has assumed three main functions. The first is to make those decisions so critical and so urgent that they cannot be made on a day-to-day basis by individual policy makers. The second is to attempt to anticipate specific decisions which must be made in the foreseeable future. The third, and perhaps the most difficult, is to prepare a coherent definition of American political objectives for the world as a whole, and for specific areas of the world.

When an immediate, crucial decision must be made, the President calls the Council into session, and, with the President participating, the decision is made on the spot. This was what happened, for example, when information became available that the Soviet Union intended to propose the return of Trieste to Italy before the Italian elections.

Acting with a speed which has not been characteristic of the American Government, the Council decided to forestall the Russians.

Similarly, an emergency meeting of the Council was called some days ago on two hours' notice when it became clear that the negotiations between the four military commanders in Berlin were being rendered futile by the Soviet attitude. It was decided to recommend to Britain and France that the Berlin negotiations be suspended, and that one last attempt at negotiation be tried in Moscow.

Personnel Is Flexible

THE Council also meets regularly on the first and third Thursdays of each month in the Cabinet room of the White House. At these meetings, one or more decisions which must be anticipated for the future are canvassed.

Papers outlining these policy decisions are prepared by the staff of the Council, in consultation with the designated planning officers. These are George Kennan of the State Department, Gen. Albert Wedemeyer for War, Gen. Lauris Norstad for the Air Force and Admiral Arthur Struble for the Navy.

The papers are then submitted for approval or revision to the Council. The Council members are Secretary of State Marshall, Defense Secretary Forrestal, Air, Navy and War Secretaries Symington, Sullivan and Royall, Secretary of the Council Sidney Souers, and Arthur Hill, chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett, and Roscoe Hillenkotter, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, regularly sit in. Secretaries of departments concerned in a given problem also attend on occasion.

Before these meetings, Souers takes the policy paper which is to be discussed to the President. The papers are usually confined to five succinct double-spaced pages, and Souers fills in the details for the President and suggests some of the implications of each paper. The President does not ordinarily attend the routine Thursday meetings, but if a flat disagreement develops, the final decision is referred to him.

Otherwise, differences of view are ironed out, the paper is revised, and the President initials the resulting policy paper. The Council is now, for example, "seized" with the problem of what to do if no settlement of the Berlin crisis results either from direct negotiations or from the United Nations meeting. No final decision has yet been taken.

Policy in the Works

FINALLY, there is the task of defining a coherent basic national policy for the United States. A short paper, between 15 and 20 pages, is now being hammered out, defining American world political objectives. Subsidiary papers on specific areas—the Far East, the Mediterranean area, Western and Central Europe—are also being prepared.

In every case, the State Department's primary responsibility for policy is recognized. Almost all policy papers are initiated by State, but the representation of the defense departments on the Council insures that the military and strategic implications of a given policy are acknowledged and taken into account.

This coherent system of making American national policy is in sharp contrast to the system of decision by squabble which prevailed under Roosevelt and other Presidents. Under the squabble system, a violent row would break out between two or more departments on a given issue of policy. The deadlock would finally be broken, after much waste motion, by the President himself.

The astute editors of the London Economist have written that the creation of the Council "may mark a milestone in America's development as outstanding as, say, Washington's farewell address." The question remains whether Dewey, who will certainly be a strong executive, will give the Council as much authority as Truman, who has never failed to approve a Council decision.

Yet Dewey is nothing if not a friend of efficiency. The Council has already proved itself an extraordinarily effective instrument of government, and there can be little doubt that Dewey will make maximum use of it.

Bold Surgery Saves

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

BUFFALO, Sept. 18.—Deaths from severe bleeding peptic ulcers have been cut in half here by bold surgery.

Two steps, learned from treating serious war wounds, are involved. One is to give a huge amount of blood quickly by transfusion. The other is to operate immediately to remove the ulcer, despite weakness from loss of blood.

Until recently, it was thought that doing either of these things probably would kill a person.

Peptic ulcers may develop in the stomach or duodenum, the first part of the small intestine. Sometimes the ulcer breaks through to a blood vessel, starting a hemorrhage. In severe cases, the person may bleed to death.

The technique was developed by Dr. John D. Stewart, professor of surgery and chairman of the department of surgery at the University of Buffalo Medical School. During the war he was a surgical consultant in the Mediterranean theater, and worked close behind the battlefront.

Often, it was found, badly wounded men had lost more blood than doctors realized. Normally you have 5 quarts of circulating blood. You can lose half of it in a hemorrhage, and still live. It's a close call.

'Banks' Inside Body

BUT some of the wounded men had lost more than 2½ quarts. They could be given 3 to 4 quarts of blood and still might not have 5 quarts of circulating blood.

The reason became clear. In severe hemorrhage, the body draws on its own strange "blood banks." It takes red blood cells and some plasma proteins from reservoirs within the body. Just where these reservoirs or banks are isn't definitely known. They may be in the liver, spleen or bone marrow.

These banks demand early repayment. When new blood was received by transfusion, they took back their loans.

Also, the surgeon said, whole blood was needed rather than plasma. Plasma is blood fluid without the red or white cells. When given plasma, wounded men benefited temporarily. But later they might suddenly die. They needed red blood cells, in whole blood, to carry oxygen.

Death rates decreased dramatically when surgeons operated immediately to stem hemorrhages from bad wounds, even though the soldiers were weak and anemic. Blood transfusions before and during the operations pulled them through.

15 Per Cent Died

THIS method of treatment has been applied here to 33 persons with bleeding ulcers. Eighty-five per cent lived—a death rate of 15 per cent. In another group not operated upon, the death rate was 30 per cent.

Surgery is done only when there has been severe and continuing bleeding, he explained. In such cases, the chance of survival has been low.

If the patients are dangerously bled out, transfusions are started, usually 12 hours before the operation. Transfusions are continued, into veins in each ankle, during the two-to-four-hour operation. The average patient receives 3½ quarts of blood. This amount is necessary to repay the body's blood banks and to restore normal blood volume.

This method helps forestall shock and further hemorrhage, the surgeon said. The patients often emerge from the major operation in better condition than before it.

Up to 80 per cent of the stomach may be removed. In time, the person is able to eat three meals a day. When the surgery is properly done, the people are free of ulcers the rest of their lives, he added.

This method calls for special facilities, mainly a staff of young surgeons and good technicians, a good anesthetist, an active blood bank and a high degree of surgical skill. It is being tried in other cities with equally good results.

Radioactive gases are among the products of this atomic oven, and the purpose of the towers is to make sure that winds do not spread any dangerous amount.

In the basement of a building on the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute campus at Troy, N. Y., amid a collection of unusual instruments, engineers are feeling the pulse of supersonic planes.

There are no actual planes, but there are instruments to detect the vibrations of these planes. The pulses are a worry in planning for supersonic flight. Vibrations not only can damage planes and interfere with flight, but can injure the fliers.

The problem is to discover them by experiments. When they are known, planes can be constructed so as to eliminate the dangerous pulses.

One of the vibrations that must be avoided produces sounds too high-pitched for the human ear to hear. Some of these makes men ill. Instruments in the Rensselaer laboratory detect the pulses caused by tapping a finger on a heavy concrete slab.

In the super-speeds of the future, wing fluttering, pitching of planes, buzzing and loss of control all present new angles on old flying problems.

A search is on to learn how to make the most effective stop and turn lights for trucks. More than 20, of various sizes, colors and intensities, were studied by the Society of Automotive Engineers at General Electric's Nela Park.

They didn't adopt final specifications. But Val J. Roper, GE illuminating engineer, said it was determined that lights should be red or amber to the rear and red, amber or white to the front. They should be at least 4 inches in diameter, and don't need to have printed instructions or arrows.

One problem is to choose signals that will be bright enough to be effective in sunlight, but will not be blinding at night.

Colors should harmonize with a woman's eyes, hair and skin.

Components for gas turbines can be spun at 100,000 RPM in the pits, in studies for development of better jet engines. In actual use, most turbines reach maximum speeds of only 35,000 RPM. The higher speeds are tested for safer, more reliable engines. An ingenious system of photography snaps pictures at the moment that the spinning wheel begins to fly apart, giving vital design information to engineers. # The Speaker Could Be President

By A. F. Mahan
Associated Press Staff Writer

WHAT would happen if the States Rights group and Progressives should siphon off enough electoral votes so that no presidential candidate got a majority this fall?

The Constitution says that if no candidate gets a majority, 226 of the Nation's 531 electoral votes, then the House of Representatives shall choose from the three candidates having the highest number.

Each State has one vote for President in a House contest. How it will be cast is decided by a majority of the State's delegation.

A candidate must get a majority of the votes of all the delegations—25 out of the 48.

What happens if none of the top three gets a majority in the House before January 20, when the Constitution specifies that the President shall take office?

The Vice President takes over.

But if no presidential candidate has won a majority of the electoral votes, it's not likely any vice presidential candidate would have, either.

When no candidate for Vice President gets a majority of the electoral vote, the contest is decided by the Senate.

The winner acts as President until the House chooses one.

Speaker in Line

WHAT would happen if the two Houses became deadlocked and could not elect either a President or Vice President by January 20?

House Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler says that under Public Law 199 of the Eightieth Congress, the Speaker of the House would take over. A permanent deadlock—which has never occurred—would leave the Speaker as President until the next election.

The House twice has chosen the President, in 1801 and 1825.

In 1876, a commission created by congressional act voted 8-to-7 to credit the contested electoral votes of South Carolina, Florida, Oregon and Louisiana to Rutherford B. Hayes, a Republican. He thus was seated over Samuel J. Tilden, a Democrat.

In the first strictly House test, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia was elected over Aaron Burr of New York. Both were Democrats, and in the popular election each won 73 electoral votes. It took the House seven days and 36 ballots to settle on Jefferson. Vermont and Maryland finally swung to him after being evenly divided and passing numerous times.

Burr became Vice President.

In 1825, the man with the electoral votes didn't become President.

Andrew Jackson of Tennessee got 99 electoral votes; John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts 84; William H. Crawford of Georgia 41, and Henry Clay of Kentucky 37. Nobody had a majority.

Adams won with 13 votes in the House to 7 for Jackson and 4 for Crawford. There were only 24 States then.

Jackson ran again four years later and won. In 1832 he was reelected.

Senate Acted Once

THE Senate elected Richard M. Johnson of Kentucky, Martin Van Buren's running mate in 1837, the only time it ever was called upon to choose a Vice President.

There were four vice presidential and five presidential candidates that year.

Dixiecrats claim that their presidential candidate, Gov. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, are certain to get the electoral votes of Alabama (11), Arkansas (9), Florida (8), Georgia (12), Louisiana (10), Mississippi (9), South Carolina (8) and Texas (23).

They say they have "high hopes" of capturing Kentucky (11), Maryland (8), North Carolina (14), Tennessee (12) and Virginia (11).

If the 156 electoral votes of these 13 States had been taken away from the late President Roosevelt and his vice presidential candidate, Harry S. Truman, in 1944, they still would have won with 276.

Some politicians hastily say that if the Republicans elect a majority of the House and the presidential election goes there, Dewey is in.

That is not necessarily so.

They would have to hold the majority of the seats in a majority of the State delegations—not just a House majority.

Clay Is Fuming at Bedell Smith

By Drew Pearson

WHILE Allied forces have been locked in a dangerous feud with the Russians, an equally hot feud has been going on inside Allied ranks. Gen. Lucius Clay and Ambassador Bedell Smith have been almost as sore at each other as at the Russians.

When the current Kremlin negotiations opened, General Clay, who has had more dealings with the Russians than any other American, made two appeals to Washington and Moscow:

(1) Don't negotiate under duress, and (2) don't accept any loosely worded agreements about Berlin. Both these warnings were repeated again and again to Ambassador Smith in Moscow.

Despite this, diplomatic observers concur that Smith got sucked in. Molotov got him detoured into all sorts of side issues such as control of the Ruhr, withdrawal of all Allied forces from Germany, control of Austria and Italian colonies. Friends of Clay say that wherever the Russians threw out some bait, Smith jumped for the hook—hopeful that he was working toward penetration of the Iron Curtain.

As reports on these conversations were dispatched by diplomatic courier to Berlin, Clay and the men around him burned up. They had pleaded with Washington, London and with Smith to demand lifting of the Berlin blockade, then to leave the next move to the Kremlin. But the Ambassador seemed hypnotized by Stalin's charm.

At the end of the first meeting, Smith cabled that Stalin had invited him to his apartment for a private talk and a drink. After the second session, Smith cabled that at the end of a 4¾-hour session Stalin walked over to him, placed his arm around his shoulder and "apologized" for the difficulties which had developed in their negotiations.

Stalin's attitude was that of a gentle brother asking his elders to have patience with a bad boy. Molotov, of course, was supposed to be the bad boy.

Result of all this Stalin "snake-charming" was that Ambassador Smith persuaded Washington to accept an agreement "in principle" under which the Russians would "try to lift" the Berlin blockade—if the western Allies would accept the Russian mark as the official currency for Berlin.

Russian marks were to be accepted for western marks on an equal basis—despite the fact that western marks, backed by the United States, Britain and France, were selling for five times the value of Soviet marks.

When Clay and his advisers heard about this deal, they screamed bloody murder. Several top staff members threatened to resign, urged Clay to do likewise. Friendly West German officials served notice on Clay they would quit all attempts to save Berlin if the Russian mark was accepted. As one Clay adviser put it:

"Smith is trying to make the world think he is the savior of the peace and that Clay is a so-and-so. His agreement in Moscow isn't worth the paper it's written on. So he passes the buck to Clay to negotiate the details—while Clay has 90 divisions of the Red army pointed right at his heart. If that isn't negotiating under duress, I'll eat my shirt."

However, General Clay, always a good soldier, calmed down. He cabled Washington that he would follow orders.

You can put it down in the book, however, that from here on out Ambassador Smith will have to do a lot of explaining before Clay buys any more of his "Made in Moscow" peace packages.

No-Brass-Hat Denfeld

ONE of the best things that ever happened to the Navy was the promotion of Admiral Louis E. Denfeld to be Chief of Naval Operations. Breezy and democratic, Denfeld is no stuffy brass hat.

As a result, the morale of Navy enlisted men has never been better.

The night before Denfeld addressed the recent Veterans of Foreign Wars convention at St. Louis, he sat in his hotel room polishing the speech. Some late hour celebrating by VFW delegates in the room next door didn't help his power of concentration. Finally, at 2:30 a. m., the admiral gave up and knocked on the door of the merrymakers.

"Judging by all the noise in there, you gentlemen must be having a lot of fun," he told them. "Mind if I join you?"

Scandinavian Solution

IT HAS been whispered in inner Republican circles that Senator Arthur Vandenberg wouldn't give up the chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to serve as Dewey's Secretary of State because this all-important committee would then fall into the hands of the second ranking Republican—Wisconsin's roly-poly, well-meaning Senator Alexander Wiley.

But what Vandenberg doesn't know is that Wiley's secret ambition is to become Ambassador to Norway. This would take him out of the Senate where, by seniority, he has risen to power.

Preoccupied President

AT THE White House the other day, Lyall Beggs, new national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, showed President Truman a digest of resolutions adopted at the last VFW encampment. One item caught Truman's eye—a pledge to support a world peace program, based on a "firm and decisive" attitude toward Russia.

"That's fine," commented the President, "coming from a group of men who have been in combat and who know what war really means."

Ruddy, 48-year-old Beggs, a World War I corporal who hails from Madison, Wis., politely chided Truman for failing to show up at the encampment in St. Louis.

"We kept a spot on the program for you until the last minute," said Beggs.

"Oh, I wanted to go," replied the President. "But I've got a confession to make. I may be the boss of the Government, but I'm not always my own boss."

A Tip From Labor

AFL LEADER George Harrison gave an optimistic report to President Truman when he called at the White House the other day.

"Every major union executive in the American Federation of Labor, with the exception of Bill Hutcheson of the carpenters and one or two others, will be actively working in your corner, Mr. President," predicted the chief of the Railway Clerks Brotherhood.

"We're going to raise our own funds by voluntary contributions from AFL members. No handouts from the Democratic National Committee will be needed. We intend to pay our own way."

"That's a load off my shoulders," declared Chairman McGrath, who has been wondering where the next $100 campaign check is coming from.

Harrison suggested that Truman stress two themes to win the labor vote—the high cost of living and Taft-Hartley repeal of New Deal labor gains. He added: "And I think you ought to nail this story about the election being 'in the bag' for Dewey. That's rigged Republican propaganda to discourage votes for you and Barkley."

Truman replied he wasn't overly worried about this. He added that the Republicans were going to be a "surprised bunch" the day after election if they persisted in the attitude that a GOP victory was foregone.

"I realize we have a tough battle on our hands," he said, "but never was I as confident of anything in my life as I am of giving Mr. Dewey his second licking in a national election. All the reports I get convince me that the people are supporting my policies."

$7,099,000 Fund Asked For District Highways

Proposed Budget $55,000 Lower Than Sum Appropriated For This Fiscal Year

A "status quo" budget of $7,099,000 for fiscal 1950 was submitted yesterday by the District Division of Highways to the Commissioners.

It contemplates only completion of four major construction projects already under way and maintenance of present services on District streets and bridges.

The proposed budget is $55,000 lower than the $7,154,000 amount appropriated by Congress for the division during the current fiscal 1949.

Usually Untouched

The highways budget is one of the few which is usually untouched by the Commissioners and Congress. "There have been hardly any changes in the past 10 years," Director J. A. Robertson noted yesterday.

"The reason is that we cut our cloth to meet our money," he said.

He explained that funds used by his division are derived from the District income from gasoline taxes, auto tag sales, driver permits, gasoline dealer licenses, auto inspection fees and assessments made against property owners for road improvements.

These items, plus a few others, constitute the highway fund from which the division draws capital. In addition, the highway fund also finances the operations of the office of George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, and the salaries of policemen assigned to traffic control.

Likely Income Studied

The Highway Division budget was prepared with an eye toward the likely income of the fund, as well as the probable amounts required by the above units, Robertson said.

The budget is divided into two sections: Operating expenses, which will take $1,974,000, and capital outlay, which calls for $5,125,000.

The capital outlay section, which covers permanent improvements, calls for $125,000 less than last year. A total of $2,600,000 will be used to match funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis from the Federal Highway Act, the first postwar program.

2 Million Needed for Bridge

Two million dollars will be required to complete the seven-million-dollar East Highway Bridge connecting the District with nearby Virginia, the Dupont Circle underpass and the K st.-Whitehurst Freeway. The additional $600,000 is the first leg on the two-year Federal highway program covering construction in 1950 and 1951. A fourth major project, the South Capitol st. bridge, is financed by District funds only.

Among the projects being considered for the matching program are the paving of K st. from 21st to 27th sts. nw., including a depressed section running under Washington Circle; the grading of the unimproved section of Arizona ave. running through Glover-Archbold parkway and the completion of approaches to the South Capitol st. bridge, Robertson revealed.

He emphasized, however, that these are merely three major ones of some 30 projects being considered under the new postwar program.

Other items covered by the capital outlay section include $325,000 for the paving of new streets; $75,000 for grading work in order to permit construction of sewer and water lines in undeveloped sections; $25,000 for construction of curbs and gutters; $400,000 for resurfacing of worn-out streets; $125,000 for changes in drainage structures to improve the storm-water sewer system; $75,000 for traffic channelization through building of directional islands and curb changes.

Also, $75,000 for temporary—lasting 8 to 10 years—improvements to unpaved streets; $100,000 for acquisition of necessary right of way through condemnation of lands; $200,000 for paving of new sidewalks and alleys; $900,000 to complete the $5,400,000 South Capitol st. bridge, and $100,000 for widening of Benning rd. ne., 15th st. to Kenilworth ave., after streetcar tracks are removed and buses begin running there.

The $100,000 request for work on Benning rd. ne. is the final installment of a $250,000 project there.

The South Capitol st. bridge substructure is entirely completed, Robertson said, and the superstructure is being fabricated at steel plants for installation and completion by November, 1949. The East Highway bridge is scheduled for the same completion date, Robertson said.

Administration Costs Up

In the $1,974,000 operating expenses section of the budget, provision is made for $49,218 boost in administration costs to cover mainly the addition of 10 drawbridge operators and 9 bridge guards.

Five operators will be assigned to the East Highway bridge and five to the South Capitol st. crossing.

The second part of the operating expenses section sets aside $1,410,717 for maintenance of streets and bridges within the city. This includes temporary repairs on 998 miles of roadway, 398 miles of alleys and about 1500 miles of cement sidewalk.

The final item in the section is $70,000 for snow removal, the same amount appropriated last year.

Policeman's Hunch Lands Convict

A policeman's hunch and long memory yesterday landed an ex-convict in jail, charged with knifing the manager and a clerk in the Safeway store at 2011 S st. nw., while attempting to steal four pounds of butter.

William F. Clodfelter, 54, of 4827 9th st. nw., the manager, was treated at Emergency Hospital for left arm and hand cuts, and Calvert F. Wolfe, 49, of 2010 4th st. ne., was admitted with stab wounds in the back. They told police they were attacked with a six-inch knife while trying to catch the man, who fled from the store, dropping the butter.

Patrolling his beat shortly after the incident at 1:50 p. m., 13th Precinct Police Pvt. Heustis H. Smith got the lokout for such a fugitive, and had a hunch. The description partly fitted that of Leroy Payton, 30, no fixed address, whom Smith had sent to Lorton Penitentiary for 27 months three years ago for housebreaking and assault. Smith spotted Payton at 14th, near T st. nw., at 5:30 p. m., and Peyton was identified at the hospital by Wolfe as the man who stabbed him.

Youth Killed When Truck Jumps Road

Grocery Driver Hurled Through Top of Vehicle in 40-Foot Smashup

An 18-year-old Arlington grocery clerk was killed yesterday when he was hurled through the top of a panel truck when the vehicle overturned 5 miles north of Marlboro.

Merwin J. Van Sickle of 3605 S. 25th st., Arlington, was driving along Route 301 when the truck went out of control, plowing through an enbankment, and hurtled 40 feet into a field.

Van Sickle lived with a brother, Willard. He formerly attended Washington and Lee High School.

Another accident victim, David Jackson, 20, of 5223 42d pl. Hyattsville, yesterday was reported in critical condition in Leland Memorial Hospital as the result of injuries sustained Friday night.

Jackson suffered head injuries and a fractured pelvis near Laurel when his auto slipped off the road onto a road shoulder and turned over five times on Bowie rd.

Three other occupants of the car were slightly injured. They were listed by Maryland State police as Boris Eaturo, 20, of 3812 Oglethorpe st., Hyattsville; George Vance, 22, of 4505 Bachman st., Hyattsville, and Allen Frost, 23, of 5703 Serial st., Berwyn, Md. All suffered cuts and bruises.

Two persons were injured in a head-on collision yesterday at 1:30 p. m. on Viers Mill rd., near Wheaton, Md.

The accident occurred when a car driven by George Lee Vittitoe, 23, a sailor stationed at Solomons Island, swerved from behind a truck that had stopped suddenly. Vittitoe's vehicle then crashed into an approaching car driven by Milton Katz, 37, Rockville (Md.) laundryman.

Katz was treated for an injured knee at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda. A passenger in Vittitoe's car, William L. Chapman, 24, also a sailor, was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital for observation.

Man Reported Struck Twice by Hit-Run Car

A man was hit twice by a hit-run station wagon which first knocked him into the air and then hit him again on the way down, sending him 20 feet away.

The man, identified by police as Arthur Johnson, 636 E st. se., was struck as he was crossing D st. se.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, the man refused treatment and left, police reported.

Police Say Motorist Hit Sidewalk Group

A motorist whose automobile leaped the curb and ran into a group of men on the sidewalk was arrested last night on five charges.

Police said Granson S. Washington, 24, laborer, of 41 Fenton st. ne., drove his automobile into a group of men in Fenton st. ne. as he was approaching the wrong way on a one-way street. He did not stop, they said.

A bystander, Clarence Lancaster, 45, of 51 Rhode Island ave. ne., was taken to Gallinger Hospital with a possible fractured left knee.

Washington was charged with driving on the sidewalk, leaving after colliding, assault with a deadly weapon (automobile), operating an unsafe vehice and driving the wrong way on a one-way street.

Variety Clubs Honor Marshall For His Service for Peace

The Washington Post

STATE SECRETARY HONORED—Secretary of State George C. Marshall (left) views the Variety Clubs International Annual Humanitarian Award, held by Robert J. O'Donnell, of Dallas, Tex., international chief barker of the organization. The plaque was presented to Marshall last night at a dinner in the Statler Hotel in "appreciation of his measureless service rendered in behalf of world peace"

On the eve of going to Paris for the U. N. Assembly, Secretary George C. Marshall last night received an award of $1000, a scroll and a silver plaque for his "measureless service" to peace in 1947.

The scroll said that "as an author of the Marshall Plan, he translated into generous and inspiring fulfillment the shining hope for liberty, honor and dignity of free men everywhere." The triple award is bestowed annually by Variety Clubs International, representing the entertainment industry, for outstanding humanitarian services.

In accepting it, the Secretary, who takes off for Paris this morning, said that in conducting American foreign relations he was constantly impressed with "how much good heart and good will there is in the American people."

"We are often misunderstood in what we are trying to do because we are so open and so generous," he said.

The rest of what the Secretary said was "off the record" because, he told a great dinner audience at the Statler Hotel, "it would not be fitting" for him to discuss the international situation publicly just before going to an important conference.

Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson, one of the speakers at the award dinner, said Marshall was going to Paris "to make the United States the champion of the rule of law in the world."

Describing the twentieth century as the bloodiest in all history, Jackson said "one of the few things that will redeem this century in the eyes of the world is the effort of the United States to put despairing peoples back on their feet."

He said the award to Marshall was a sign of "past and present support throughout this country for the things the secretary is trying to do."

The award was presented before an audience that included members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court justices, foreign ambassadors and many distinguished private citizens. President Truman sent his regrets from his campaign tour, saying he could think of "no one more richly deserving" the award than Marshall.

Previous recipients included Secretaries Cordell Hull and James F. Byrnes, Gen. Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army and the late George Washington Carver, Negro scientist.

Prisoner Attacks Policeman But Chief Kayoes Him

The chief of police, of Mount Rainier, Md., saved a policeman from possible serious injury last night when the latter was attacked by a prisoner.

The attack ocurred after Private John J. Chop had arrested Oben Bodden, 28, no fixed address, for disorderly conduct at 35th and Perry sts. Chief Eugene B. Plumer, who lives above the police station nearby and was off duty at the time, had accompanied Chop.

As Chop was placing the man in the scout car, the prisoner knocked him to the ground and attempted to grab his pistol. The chief, unarmed, struck Bodden with a flashlight to subdue him, he said.

Chop, who is Chief Plumer's son-in-law, was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, for head injuries.

Bodden was placed in the Hyattsville jail to await trial tomorrow on charges of assault on an officer and disorderly conduct. Bond was placed at $2200 on the two charges.

Man Found Dead Under Calvert St. Span Early Today

A man about 25 years old was found dead under the Calvert st. bridge about 12:30 a. m. today after apparently plunging to his death from the bridge a few minutes earlier.

The victim was tentatively identified from personal papers as Juan Smith of 1418 Florida ave. nw.

At the Florida ave. address, Smith was said to be a Government typist.

The body was discovered by a motorist, Harry Barnes, 18, of 1921 Kalorama rd. nw., a Georgetown University freshman.

Board to Receive Draft of Rules For Loan Firms

15-Page Document Explains Plans to Control Many More Of These Companies

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District Commissioners will receive Monday a 15-page draft of proposed regulations for control of money lenders' operations here, the culmination of 10 months' of work by District officials.

The draft is designed to broaden the definition of money lenders so as to bring many more under control, as well as to set up rules of conduct for their operations. At present there are 26 licensed money lenders here.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, who has been under fire by various groups for the long delay in completing the regulations, has declared that the principal handicap has been how to bring many groups, now unlicensed, under coverage.

Gray has cooperated with License Supt. Chatham T. Nottingham in checking complaints so as to prepare rules strong enough to cover the grievances and prohibit their repetition.

One of the principal groups he has sought to bring under coverage is finance companies which buy conditional sales contracts on autos from used car dealers. Gray explains the usual procedure thus:

A person sees a used car on a lot that he wants to buy. He has only $200 toward the $600 price, so the dealer offers to "finance the balance." The purchaser signs several documents, including a promissory note.

The dealer then indorses the note "without recourse," indicating he assumes no respnosibility for non-payment of the note, and sells it to a finance company, usually for a commisison, Gray said.

A few days later the auto purchaser receives a letter saying the company has purchased the contract and he is expected to remit so much a month for so many months. This amount usually runs to almost 100 per cent of the unpaid balance over a two-year period, according to Gray.

At present only persons engaged in the business of lending money at more than 6 per cent a year interest are required to obtain a license. Gray has declared that many firms, under investigation, in spite of advertisements in newspapers and telephone directories, have denied that they are actually in the lending business.

The new definition proposed would include additional language covering persons representing themselves as money lenders, Gray disclosed.

Government or private credit unions are not affected by the proposed regulations.

William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for 90 per cent of the loan firms here, declared last night that firms engaged in "buying contracts," or acting as loan brokers, are not now and should not be included in money lenders' regulations.

The Commissioners are expected to schedule a public hearing on the proposed regulations.

Area Total 157

Boy Is 86th Polio Patient In District

One new polio case was reported in the District yesterday and another suspected case was "not definitely diagnosed."

At Gallinger Hospital a 6-year-old boy from the 100 block of Thomas st. nw. was admitted yesterday, the eighty-sixth District victim this year. The total for the Greater Washington area is 157.

Doctors at Walter Reed Hospital said an 8-year-old son of an Army colonel admitted Wednesday has "a very mild case, if it is polio at all." The boy has no paralysis and his general condition has improved rapidly since admission, it was said.

The boy, Voris Conner, son of Col. V. H. Conner, 6209 Georgia st., Chevy Chase, was taken to the hospital, his mother said, after he complained of a stiff neck and a slight cold.

Truman Lauds Pen Women's Scholarships

Alexandria Branch of the National League of American Pen Women was praised by President Truman yesterday for its scholarship project in connection with Alexandria's bicentennial celebration during 1949.

The message was relayed by John R. Steelman, assistant to the President, at the celebrity luncheon yesterday given by the Alexandria Pen Women at the terrace dining room of National Airport.

The clubwomen will award music, literature and art scholarships to school children of Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington. General theme of the entries must be Alexandria's significance in American history.

Yesterday's luncheon was part of the drive for scholarship funds and approximately $400 of the $1000 goal was taken in.

Steelman and his wife headed the list of celebrities who were interviewed briefly by master of ceremonies Jesse Ott of Arlington, national director at large of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Another special guest was Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Ambassador from India. She told the some 300 guests that a wider development of the fine arts might play a decisive part in uniting the world more closely.

Among others there were Marian King, author of "Young King David" and several other books for youngsters; Henrietta Nesbitt, former White House housekeeper and author of best-selling "White House Diary"; Cornelia Spence, author of "Nehru of India"; Mary Sheridan Fahnestock, author of "I Ran Away to Sea at Fifty"; Francis Coleman Rosenberger, author of "The Virginia Reader," scheduled for November publication; Amea Willoughby, author of "I Was On Corregidor"; Eleanor Cox, sculptor; Jean Wells, Canadian writer of popular songs; Anita Boutwell, mystery story writer; Eloise Lownsbery novelist, and her husband, Carl Clancy, film producer; Sari Maritza, actress and artist, and Bernice Benson Bentley, musician.

$3,300,000 Whitehurst Freeway Work 70 Per Cent Complete

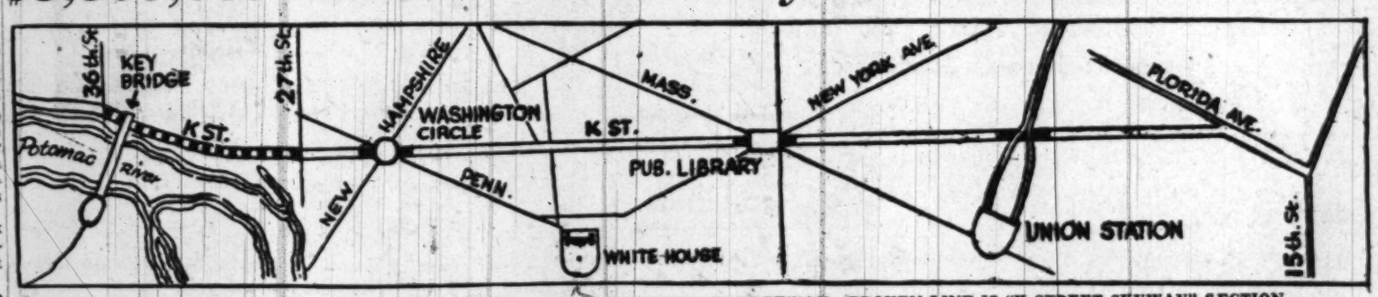

MAP INDICATES THE LONG-RANGE PLANS FOR THE WHITEHURST FREEWAY. BROKEN LINE IS "K STREET SKYWAY" SECTION

On or about next March 1, there will be a ribbon-cutting on the Whitehurst Freeway.

It will signify the end of 21 months of work on what started out to be the "K Street Skyway" and was renamed recently in honor of the late Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of the District Highway Department.

It will be only the beginning of ambitious plans of the highway department to provide an express highway downtown for residents in the entire Northwest section, and an express highway into town from Virginia, extending east to 15th and H Northwest.

If the Highway Department plans are put into effect, the Washington landscape will be considerably altered.

There will be a tunnel under Washington Circle, under the main District of Columbia Library at Mount Vernon Square, and under Union Station. There will be underpasses for Massachusetts and New Mexico aves. and Reservoir rd. in the Northwest part of the city.

And District residents will be able to motor without a stop for a light from the Wisconsin ave. neighborhood at about Nebraska ave., to the downtown K street area.

Some of these plans are so far in the future that the D. C. Highway Department doesn't have tentative estimates of their cost.

Others, like the tunneling of Washington Circle, are "near future" projects, if the department can get the funds.

As to the Whitehurst Freeway project, it now is 70 per cent complete—and behind schedule. It was to have been completed this December 28, but shortage of steel delayed finish of the project until March 1. There still is the same figure for cost of the freeway—$3,300,000.

At the present time, according to H. R. Howser, head of the Highway Department bridge division, all the steel for the freeway is up, all the foundations are in place. The overpass over the parkway has been completed. Engineers are now working on the connecting link from the overpass to the end of the steel structure at the east end. On the west end, the ramp leading down to Key Bridge is still under construction. Work has been begun on the concrete roadway slab on the steel portions of the structure.

When the Whitehurst Freeway is completed, it will connect with Canal rd. at 36th st., will have ramps east and west leading onto the freeway at 36th st. The freeway will extend down K st. to 27th st. to an overpass already built over Rock Creek Parkway there.

Future plans call for extending K st. as a depressed roadway under Washington Circle, and using K st. as a downtown freeway, thus necessitating tunneling under the library at Mount Vernon Square and Union Station, to the eventual 15th and H sts. ne. terminus.

The Highway Department hopes to reach the Washington Circle part of the project in its 1950-51 budget, according to S. R. Harrison, director of streets and highways. This step will extend the freeway from 27th st. to 22d st., under the circle, and will connect with K st. for downtown use.

Eventually K st., from this point on, is planned as a depressed road, two-way freeway, with islands separating directional lanes of traffic.

But as soon as the Whitehurst Freeway is completed, motorists will be able to bypass Georgetown and cobblestoned M st. by using the freeway, eliminating one bottleneck in traffic.

On the other side of the freeway the Highway Department proposes the Arizona ave. freeway, which would extend through the Glover-Archbold Parkway to the Tenley Circle neighborhood.

Howser pointed out that the three highways for which underpasses are proposed on this freeway were built on filled-in ground. The parkway itself is on low ground. The Highway Department proposes to excavate the fill, pass under Reservoir rd., New Mexico ave. and Massachusetts ave. on a depressed freeway basis over new roads to the Tenley Circle area.

The freeway proposal has been opposed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and by citizens' groups. Reasons for the opposition have been the planned use of the Glover-Archbold tract as a park, and the belief that the proposed freeway would encourage District residents to move into Maryland because of ready access to the downtown area.

The Public Buildings Administration has warned the Highway Department it will need a lot of justification to persuade them of the necessity for tunneling under Union Station. There has been opposition to the proposal to tunnel under the Central Public Library also.

Highway planners feel, however, that the two proposed freeways are essential to the eventual development of Washington.

Woman Who Hanged Self Called Suicide

Arlington Coroner W. C. Welburn yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death Friday of Mrs. Gladys Irene Coakley, 56, of 130 S. Highland st., Arlington.

Mrs. Coakley, who had lived in Arlington 22 years, was found in the attic of her home Friday night hanging by a sash cord from a rafter. Her son Warren found the body when he returned home.

Police said Mrs. Coakley had been separated from her husband, Fairfax Coakley, of 1851 Columbia rd. nw., Washington, for about two years.

They said that last August Mrs. Coakley had apparently tried to take her life in Washington by drinking a disinfectant, but was saved by quick treatment. She was taken to St. Elizabeths for observation and later released.

In addition to her husband and son, she leaves a daughter, Mrs. P. J. McNulty, of 4008 38th st., Brentwood, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the Ives Funeral Home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

Emil Ludwig, Biographer, Dies Abroad

Ascona, Switzerland, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Emil Ludwig, 67, who wrote biographies of Jesus, Goethe and Napoleon, died last night of heart disease.

Ludwig wrote of the lives, manners and characteristics of the world's great, but, in his own words, he was a portrait painter. Rembrandt, he once said, had taught him more about the human soul than had the poets.

"History I have never studied; human nature always," said the author.

"Only because I was incapable of finishing any historical book and yet perceived that the thing could be done differently did I try my own way," Ludwig wrote in 1931.

Wrote Many "Lives"

The list of his "Lives" also includes Bismarck, William II, two volumes on Lincoln, Cleopatra, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, published in 1938, and Beethoven.

Ludwig was born January 25, 1881, in Breslau, Germany, the son of Herman and Valesca Cohn. His father, a physician, changed his name to avoid the unpleasantness of anti-Semitism.

"I would not have done it," Ludwig later said. "Cohn is a fine, estimable name." Ludwig studied in Breslau, Heidelberg University and, in 1931, received an honorary degree from Rutgers. In 1906 he married Elga Wolff. They had two sons, Andrew and Gordon.

Ludwig began writing in 1900. For 12 years he wrote only plays, most of them in verse. His first biography, "The Life of Napoleon," published in 1926 and translated into English, made him famous.

Became Swiss Citizen

In 1907 Ludwig left Germany for Switzerland and, in 1932, became a Swiss citizen. He repeatedly attacked Hitler in lectures and writing before the outbreak of World War II and, in reprisal, the Nazis burned his books. Later the Russians said he was "militaristic," and they, too, banned his books in the Soviet zone of Germany.

In 1940 Ludwig brought his family to America, where they spent the war years. In 1941 he became a dollar-a-year man for the United States Treasury Department's defense savings program.

In 1943, before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, he correctly forecast the German attitude in defeat—a plea that the Germans were not to blame for the deeds of the Nazis.

Charles Wood, Writers Guide Editor, Dies

Charles D. Wood, publication editor for the Writers Guide series issued by the WPA, died Friday at his home, 2928 P st. nw.

He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., the son of Richard E. and Cecile Doris Wood. Mr. Wood was a graduate of Yale College and the Yale University Law School.

Mr. Wood spent much of his life in New York City, where he did newspaper work with the Western Newspaper Alliance and freelance writing.

He came to Washington in 1929 and served as publications editor for the Writers Guide series. He was later an information specialist for the State Department until about two years ago. He was a member of the National Press Club.

Mr. Wood is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy G. Wood, and a brother, E. C. Wood, of Washington, 4814 MacArthur blvd.

Burial will be private.

Courtney Rites Tuesday at Fort Myer

William Hubert Courtney, 52, a lawyer in the claims division of the General Accounting Office, died yesterday at the Bethesda Naval Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Courtney was born in Du Bois, Pa. He served in World War I and came to Washington after the war to attend Catholic University. After graduating from the university's school of law he went to Tulsa, Okla., to begin practice.

He returned to Washington in 1936 to become secretary to Representative Don Gingery. In 1944 he went to work for the GAO.

Mr. Courtney was a member of the Sacred Heart Church, and the GAO American Legion Post No. 48.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Harrington Courtney, and a son, William Hubert, jr., who live at 2418 39th pl. nw.

Requiem mass will be said at Fort Myer Chapel at 9 a. m. Tuesday, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Henry Major

Provincetown, Mass., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Henry Major, 59, of New York, widely known caricaturist and artist, died here last night.

Major was noted for his caricatures of the late President Roosevelt, Henry Ford, George Bernard Shaw, Albert Einstein and other prominent persons.

T. B. Love, 78, Dies; Former Treasury Aide

Thomas Bell Love, 78, of Dallas, Tex., who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in the Wilson Administration, died Friday night according to the Associated Press.

Death was attributed to cerebral hemorrhage.

Mr. Love held the Treasury post from December 1917 to his resignation in December 1918, and was in charge of the bureaus of Internal Revenue and War Risk Insurance.

Mr. Love was a native of Webster County, Mo. He studied law at Drury College, Springfield, Mo., and the University of Virginia.

He began law practice at Springfield in 1891 and took an active part in Democratic Party activities and held public office before moving to Dallas in 1899.

He was a former vice president and counsel of Southwestern Life Insurance Co., president of the Western Indemnity Co., and vice president of the Travellers Assurance Co., in Dallas. From 1902 to 1906 he was a member of the Texas House of Representatives, and then served as State Commissioner of Insurance until 1910.

He was elected to the Democratic National Committee in 1920 and 1924, but resigned the later year to fight the lection of Mrs. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson as Governor. He later served in the State Senate.

In 1928 he was a leader in the fight in Texas against Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee, which resulted in Herbert Hoover carrying the State.

Trial Set Monday In Girl's Murder

A Baltimore janitor accused of killing two 11-year-old girls, one in Rock Creek Park here, will go on trial Monday in Baltimore Criminal Court.

The defendant is Eugene H. James, 31, former convict, with a long record as a sex offender. He will be tried in Baltimore for the murder of Marsha Brill there on July 6.

He also is under indictment in the District for the slaying of Carol Bardwell in Rock Creek, June 27.

James will be tried before Baltimore Judge Herman M. Moser, probably without a jury, as Defense Attorney William H. Murphy has announced he will request dispensing with a jury.

Quick Trial Expected

Although the prosecution plans to call 35 witnesses, the office of State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells in Baltimore has predicted the trial will be completed speedily, perhaps in two days.

The killings linking Baltimore and Washington, and culminating in a Baltimore murder trial, began here on a pleasant Sunday afternoon last June 27.

Carol Bardwell, a sixth-grade student at Sacred Heart School, had left her home, 1635 Webster st. nw., that afternoon by bicycle to visit a playground in Rock Creek Park.

A man and woman strolling in the park stumbled across her body about three hours later. It lay under a fallen tree about 25 feet off a path leading from 17th st. and Colorado ave. nw. The child's throat had been slashed and a later examination showed she had been raped.

Second Killing

Nine days later a similar killing happened in Baltimore. Again the victim was an 11-year-old girl, and the circumstances were astonishingly similar to the Washington crime.

The second slaying occurred in a wooded, little-traveled section of Baltimore's outskirts. The victim, Marsha Brill, like Carol Bardwell, was riding a bicycle. She, too, was killed with a knife.

But this time there were witnesses, two small playmates of Marsha. They told police a Negro had jumped from the woods, grabbed Marsha and stabbed her, then fled.

Within hours, James was arrested. He was picked up because one policeman remembered he had been freed from prison after serving a term for a series of knife attacks and assaults on women in northwest Baltimore in 1940.

Baltimore police announced they had obtained a confession from James and he was charged with the Brill girl's murder.

Detectives from Washington were then allowed to question James and police here announced the janitor had admitted killing Carol Bardwell during a trip to Washington.

Maddox Chosen To Head Red Cross Campaign in Area

H. Randolph Maddox, president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., will head the 1949 Red Cross campaign in Greater Washington which starts next March, according to an announcement yesterday by John C. Folger, chairman of the District Red Cross Chapter.

Maddox

Maddox, who lives at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments, was vice chairman of last year's drive. The General Business Unit, which he also headed last year, raised over $344,000, or 109 per cent of its assigned quota, during the 1948 campaign.

$9000 Area Check Frauds Laid to District Resident

A dapper young Washington man yesterday was charged with three counts of passing bad checks totalling more than $9000 in nearby Virginia.

Belshaw

Walter D. Belshaw, 30, of 3620 47th st. nw., was booked by Arlington Police on two of the counts and released in $1,000 bond. Police there accused him of:

1. Passing a bad $3595 check drawn on an Arlington bank to the Cherner-Brewer Auto Sales Co. of Washington in payment for a 1948 Buick convertible.

2. Giving another worthless check, this time for $5500, to the Williams Realty Co. of Arlington in payment for a filling station.

Police said Belshaw had recently advertised on Arlington radio stations, offering the filling station customers $9.75 coupon books with which they could buy $11.25 worth of gas.

Alexandria police picked up and charged Belshaw on the third bad check count yesterday after Arlington released him in bond.

In Alexandria, he was accused of passing a bad $15 check on Montgomery Ward & Co., 906 King st., for merchandise. Belshaw was released in $250 bond.

Catholic Prelates Reduced in Romania

Bucharest, Romania, Sept. 18 (AP). The number of Roman Catholic bishoprics in Romania was reduced from 12 to 4 today by decree of the supreme presidium. The orthodox Romanian church bishoprics were reduced from 18 to 17. No Catholic churches have been closed in Romania. The announcement also said five Catholic bishops have been pensioned by the ministry of cults.

Falls Church Festival Set

The City of Falls Church Va., will highlight its nearly 250 years of history next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday with a "Falls Church Festival."

The festival will open at noon Friday with a parade of school children to the main festival area, on Fairfax st. not far from the historic Falls Episcopal Church.

The festival is sponsored by the Falls Church Community Park, Inc., a non-profit civic group made up of representatives of more than 30 local civic organizations. Festival profits will go to help purchase and equip land for a Falls Church park.

side. Bits of glass and blood were found on the right front seat.

A flattened bullet was found in the car. It had hit the steering post. A pool of blood was on the rear floor, next to one of Mary's shoes.

Miss Kline Mahlan

A second abandoned car was found about 5 miles from the first one, but police said there was no evidence that the two were linked.

A member of the posse found fragments of Mahlan's driver's license in the woods, about three-quarters of a mile from the car.

Howard H. Mahlan, John's father, said Mary and his son had known each other for two years and frequently went out together.

Fringe Lot Buses Start Runs Monday

The District's first attempt at combining fringe parking lots with a shuttle bus service between the lots and downtown stores will begin at 9:15 a. m. Monday.

The program, organized through the combined efforts of District government agencies and downtown merchants, represents one of the first major attempts to solve the ever-increasing commercial area traffic problem. It is planned to reduce downtown traffic and at the same time encourage residents of outlying areas to shop downtown.

Space for 400 cars will be available on a block-long lot near the Municipal Center, in the block bounded by John Marshall pl., C st., 3d st. and Constitution ave. nw. Four hundred additional spaces will be set aside at the Heurich-Kass lot near the Christian Heurich Brewery at 25th, 26th and E sts. nw.

25 Cents for 5 Hours

A fee of 25 cents will be charged at either lot for five hours' parking and 5 cents for each additional hour. The five-hour limit was decided upon by the Merchants' Parking Corporation, sponsor of the plan, to keep downtown workers and other all-day parkers from filling the spaces.

The lots will be connected with the business section by a system of shuttle buses, which will run every 10 minutes between 9:15 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. six days a week. Fare on the buses, operated by the Capital Transit Co., will be 10 cents cash. The usual weekly transit pass may be used.

The busses will be designated as "R-6, Riverside Stadium" on the westbound runs, which will carry passengers from the Center lot to the business zone and then pick up shoppers there returning to the Zeurich-Kass lot. They will b labeled "R-6, Municipal Center" on trips from the Heurich-Kass lot.

The route of the bus from the Municipal Center lot will be along Pennsylvania ave. nw. to 6th st., north on 6th to E st., west on E making stops at 7th and 8th sts., north on 8th to F st., and west on F stopping at 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th and 14th sts., behind the White House and then along G st. to the brewery lot.

Route From Brewery

The route from the brewery lot will be along F st., in front of the White House, then back on F st., making stops on F at 14th, 13th, 11th, 10th and 8th sts., then on 8th to E st., stopping on E at 7th, and then to the Municipal Center parking lot.

The Public Utilities Commission has granted six months' authorization for a tryout of the scheme beginning Monday.

The shuttle bus line was created by an extension of the present West End bus line, R-6. During the hours when the fringe lots are not in operation, the line will operate over its authorized route.

Incorporation of other lots in the parking scheme is being considered, depending in great measure on the success of the present two lots.

Six Deaths Laid to Mishaps In D. C. Homes During Week

1948 injuries to date.....4435
1947 injuries for same period.3789
1948 deaths to date .....182
1947 deaths for same period..157

Two children were among 10 persons who were treated at local hospitals last week for foreign objects in their ears, eyes, nose, throat or stomach.

A small floral seed was removed from the ear of an 8-year-old girl, where it lodged when she scratched her ear with it, and a small pearl button was extracted from the nose of a 6-year-old girl.

Both children were among 105 District residents treated at hospitals here for home injuries last week, according to the District Red Cross Home Accident Survey.

Fifty injuries were due to falls, 25 to cuts, 2 were burns and 2 were listed as accidental poisonings.

Six persons died during the week as a result of home accidents. An infant suffocated in his crib, a 3-year-old boy was fatally burned while playing with matches, and four elderly persons died from injuries due to falls.

Seven adults injured extremities when they fell at home, a 20-month-old baby suffered a head injury when it fell from its father's arms, and a 22-month-old baby fractured its shoulder in a fall from a bench.

Other victims of home accidents in the past week included a 21-month-old child who swallowed the solution he found in a beetle trap, 22-month-old twins who splashed a can of kerosene in their eyes, and an adult who broke off a tooth while chewing on a cabbage stalk.

Legion Post Holding Crab Feast Today

A crab feast with "all you can eat for the price of admission" will be held today from 3 until 8 p. m. on the grounds of the Cissel Saxon American Legion Post Home, 907 Sligo ave., Silver Spring, Md. In case of rain, the affair will be held inside the clubhouse.

Filipino Runs Amok, Kills Boy, Wounds 8

Honolulu, Sept. 18 (AP).—A Filipino carpenter ran amok through the alleys of the Hell's Half-Acre tenement district last night, stabbing to death a 12-year-old boy and wounding eight other persons.

Two of the wounded may die.

A policeman finally slugged the Filipino with a pistol.

Doctors' Art To Be Shown By Society

What does a physician contribute to creative art when he's not painting tonsils?

The District Medical Society will supply the answer in a special exhibit of "Doctors' Arts and Letters," to be displayed at the nineteenth annual scientific session of the organization, scheduled for September 27-29 at the Hotel Statler.

The special exhibit, to be displayed in the foyer adjacent to the South American Room, will be divided into four sections—paintings (drawings, water colors and oils), sculpture, creative photography and published literary works.

Physicians are limited to three entries each. Judging has been scheduled for next Friday evening at the Medical Society Building. Two awards each will be made in the painting, sculpture and creative photograph classes. On Monday, September 27, a public preview of the exhibit will be held between 7 and 8:15 p. m.

4 Die in California As Plane Crashes

Newhall, Calif., Sept. 18 (AP).—Ernest H. Hix, 46, newspaper cartoon collaborator, and Eugene Joseff, maker of much of the ornate costume jewelry used in the movies, perished today in a flaming plane crash.

Two other men also died in the accident which occurred when Joseff's single engine plane crashed and burned shortly after taking off for his Prescott, Ariz., ranch.

Ernest became owner of the cartoon ("Strange As It Seems") following the death of his brother, John, four years ago.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Guessing When Boom Will End

When I was in the eighth grade, the teacher—I still remember his name, Mr. Hopkins—tried to teach us the rudiments of sound, of pitch. He asked the members of the class to close their eyes and listen as he poured water into a long, narrow, glass cylinder. We were to cry out when we judged by the rising pitch that the cylinder was full.

Livingston

As I remember it, most called out before the container was a quarter full. Several held out until it was half full. Long before the spillover level, all succumbed. What happened is clear now. As Mr. Hopkins poured, as the level of the water in the cylinder rose, the pitch got unbelievably high to unaccustomed ears. No cylinder could be that big. Herd pressure was at work, too. As each student called out "Full," he influenced others.

A similar guessing game—gauging the pitch of the boom—now goes on in the United States economy. Businessmen and business analysts are trying to figure just when the recession will come, just when production, prices, and employment might turn down. A prevalent theory: Sometime in '49.

This is old stuff. Immediately after VJ-Day, Government economists cried doom, promised eight million unemployed. In September, 1946, the stock market had its say. And was wrong. But ever since, more and more businessmen and analysts have become wary. The inflation would run out. Today's story runs like this:

1. For the first time since the end of the war, many corporations have completed their expansion plans. Soon new investment, especially in manufacturing facilities, will drop sharply.

2. High construction costs have pushed up prices and many builders find that homes they've built don't move. Also, banks and insurance companies are not as free in making GI loans; they feel they have enough. To be sure, money is still available through normal financing channels (see chart), the foreclosure rate is down sharply and full employment encourages both borrowers and lenders. Nevertheless, last year at this time new residential construction was still rising. The peak came in October. This year a turndown started in April:

| Month | New Homes 1948 | Started 1947 |
|---|---|---|
| April | 98,800 | 67,100 |
| May | 97,000 | 72,900 |
| June | 96,000 | 77,200 |
| July | 94,000 | 81,100 |
| August | 83,000 | 86,300 |
| September | ? | 93,800 |
| October | ? | 94,000 |

Inventory Reserves

3. Commodity prices—notably grains and cotton—have declined as the result of bumper crops. And more businessmen are coming to think with Richard R. Deupree, president of Procter & Gamble, who told his stockholders that "sooner or later" prices will "react to a normal basis." Deupree noted that last year the price of the company's raw material averaged 15 cents a pound, this year 19 cents to 20 cents, and prewar about 6 cents.

4. Inventory expansion is at an end. Businessmen are no longer stocking goods for the sake of having something on hand—just in case prices should rise. Firms increasingly are setting up reserves against price declines. Procter & Gamble, for example, has a 37-million-dollar reserve against 143-million-dollar inventories. That's 26 cents on the dollar.

Too Bearish, Too Soon

Declines in wheat, cotton, and corn have not yet penetrated into the cost of living or the general level of wholesale prices. Layoffs in textiles have been isolated, rather than general. We're still in a tight economy—so far as manpower and materials go. Inflation persists.

Since VJ-Day, forecasters have erred on the too-soon side. The declines in sales of furs, off-brand radios, toys, comic books, small electric appliances, magazines, and books in general, were all heralded as the end of the boom. To the businessmen immediately affected they meant losses or even failure. But they proved merely internal corrections in the economy—departures from the major inflationary trend.

President Truman, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and the Federal Reserve Bank feel that we still have more worry about inflation than deflation. They can make a good case. The Berlin crisis has not heightened hopes of peace. That means increased armament expenditures. The Marshall Plan drain on United States supplies has not attained maximum force. Numerous State and local government projects, delayed by shortages of materials and construction workers, probably would get under way at the first sign of slack. Further, consumer income and expenditures continue at a high level. The third round of wage increases is beginning to show up in retail sales.

Thus, though inflation is proceeding less rapidly, it still has a strong underpush—in the carryover of pent-up demand from the war. And it's a bit soon yet to decide—as many forecasters are doing—that a decisive turn is due in '49. Not when J. R. Davis, sales manager of Ford, can still say that it will take one and one-half to two years to produce a sellers' market in low-priced cars.

Balshaw Made Division Head Of Safeway

By S. Oliver Goodman

Appointment of Edgar Balshaw as top executive of the Washington division of Safeway Stores was announced yesterday by Lingan A. Warren, president of the national food chain.

Balshaw

Balshaw, who will take charge of the local headquarters tomorrow, succeeds the late Mack L. Langford. Balshaw's formal title will be distribution division manager.

A veteran of 20 years in retail food distribution, Balshaw joined Safeway as a clerk in a Bakersfield, Calif., store in 1928. Within 18 months he was elevated to store manager in Winnipeg and subsequently became manager in the Canadian districts of Brandon, Edmonton and Winnipeg.

In 1941 he took over as distribution division manager in Winnipeg and in 1946 was assigned to the same post in Vancouver. Born in Blackburn, Lancashire, England, he came to America in 1910.

In his new Washington post, Balshaw will head upward of 200 food stores in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia.

WILL CHART COURSE: Plans for the coming semester will be outlined at the annual Fall educational dinner meeting of Washington Chapter, American Savings & Loan Institute, in Burlington Hotel Wednesday night. Chapter officers, the board of governors, counsels and instructors will attend. Chapter President Richard Sinclair said yesterday this year's faculty will include: C. Nelson Bean, insurance; Harry Kane, real estate law; William E. Poulton, principles and William H. Rippard.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Eugene F. Warner, former reporter for The Washington Post, has been appointed vice president and general manager of the McGraw-Hill International Corp. Warner has been associated with McGraw-Hill since February 1, 1947. He is a former associate editor of Time and Fortune magazines.

Warner

In 1940, he went to South America for the Government to investigate and help eliminate Nazi infiltration of press and radio. At the outbreak of the war, he returned to head the Morale Operations Branch in the Mediterranean Theater. Following the war, he joined Trans World Airline as international publicity director, then joined McGraw-Hill. In his new post he will make his headquarters in the New York office.

GAS TAX LOOMS: Texas Democrats last week adopted a State party platform that may lead to bad news for Midwestern and Eastern users of natural gas. The party's general election platform calls for "a reasonable tax" on natural gas, the revenue to finance a long-range farm-to-market roads construction program. Many Texans long have objected to the State's natural gas being exported for industrial and household use without a tax.

PURELY LOCAL: Directors of Southern Oxygen Co., Inc., Washington, have declared the regular dividend of 50 cents a common share, payable September 30 to stock of record September 20 . . . Harry Meixell, executive director of the National Aviation Trades Association, Inc., will address a luncheon meeting Monday of the local chapter of the American Public Relations Association in Lafayette Hotel . . . National University School of Law will sponsor a series of tax seminars to be conducted on the four Thursdays in October at luncheons in the Romany Room, 817 13th st. nw. . . . Thirty-nine members of Washington agency of Equitable Life Assurance Society recently returned from a four-day conference in Atlantic City . . . Miss Margaret K. Odell, consultant to the Economic Cooperation Administration, will address the first autumn meeting Tuesday of the Washington chapter of National Office Management Association.

Chicago Video Show Opens

Chicago, Sept. 18 (F).—The National Television and Electrical Living Show opened today with industry, educational institutions, the Army and Navy demonstrating some of the latest developments in the field.

Changes Slight in Week

GRAIN PRICES WEAK—The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed at 67.8 last week, as against 68.0 a week ago. Trading volume was slowest in three weeks. The commodity index dipped 186.0 from 186.4 the previous week, despite record cattle prices. Grains showed the largest loss with weakness pronounced in corn

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 18 (F).—The deferred wheat futures got a lift today out of Governor Dewey's farm policy. Prices on the Board of Trade were firm, with the July contract going above the $2 mark for the first time since mid-August. It closed at 1.99⅞.

Price trends in other grains were mixed. September corn firmed on short covering, but September oats dipped in the face of heavy deliveries of cash grain on these contracts. Deferred corn and oats contracts recorded only fractional changes, most of them on the down side.

Wheat closed unchanged to 1⅞ higher. September 2.26; corn was ½ lower to ½ higher, September 1.69¼@1.69½; oats were 1 cent lower to ⅛ higher, September 71¼; rye was ½ lower, December 1.59½, and soybeans were unchanged to 1 cent higher, November 2.47.

Governor Dewey indorsed the long-range farm legislation passed by Congress in June. As far as the present market was concerned, this indorsement was most important in relation to the May and July wheat futures. Both weakened during the early part of September on reports the price support program might be lowered.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 18 (F).—The cotton market was irregular today in mixed, quiet trading. Hedge selling and commission house liquidation were attracted to nearby positions, with the latter interests buying deferred contracts.

There was a considerable amount of transferring operations. The selling in nearby October reflected the fact that this delivery was selling considerably below the Government support price, and as a result attracted the buying.

Futures closed 40 cents a bale lower to $2.25 higher than the previous close.

Kaiser Offers Ways to Offset Pig Iron Loss

Cleveland, Sept. 18 (AP).—Henry J. Kaiser today advanced three proposals for supplying pig iron to customers threatened with being shut off when Kaiser-Frazer Corp. takes full control of the Cleveland blast furnace now operated by Republic Steel Corp.

The plant, subject to a bitter fight between Kaiser-Frazer and Republic, recently was leased to K-F by the War Assets Administration. A later agreement allowed Republic to continue operation until next May 1, with K-F to receive 5000 tons of pig iron a month.

Republic says it will be unable to continue supplying some 403 pig iron customers. Kaiser, board chairman of K-F, sent a telegram to President Truman offering these possible solutions to the problem:

1. Republic Steel build a new blast furnace (Republic has said it cannot do this and it would take two years if it did).

2. The affected foundrymen could form their own cooperative company and either lease from the Government, or build a furnace to supply themselves. In this, Kaiser said he would offer the services of his engineering and operating personnel in construction and operation.

3. "The Government could request Republic Steel to supply its own pig iron customers out of some of the Government-built iron and steel-making facilities."

Explaining the last alternative, Kaiser said the Government-owned Gadsden, Ala., furnace now being operated by Republic has a capacity of 280,000 tons of pig iron a year.

"Republic closed this furnace for more than one year, from July 17, gram said. "The production of this 1947, to August 10, 1948," the telefurnace is therefore just becoming available again . . . and . . . it is now available for Republic to serve the 403 foundries over which it is so concerned."

Electric Industry Runs Line To Its 40-Millionth Customer

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—The electric industry ran a power line to its 40 millionth customer this week and came within sight of the saturation point of its business with householders.

Ernest R. Acker, president of the Edson Electric Institute, says 97 per cent of the Nation's 39,750,000 occupied family dwellings now have electricity available and 94 per cent are actually taking service.

But don't get the idea the electric industry is running out of household customers.

The head of the electric power trade association says:

"Although saturation in this field seems near at hand, new construction of homes and continuing population will provide steady increases in the number of customers during the coming year."

In addition, electric consumers are daily buying more of the accessories that burn power.

The institute reports new customers are being added at a record high rate. During the first six months of this year, 1,123,000 were added to power lines and of that number more than 918,000 were rural and urban residential users.

About 86 per cent of the electric industry's customers are the residential and rural type. Commercial customers—such users as smaller stores, shops, filling stations, theaters—make up about 13 per cent. The remaining 1 per cent includes large industrial plants, electrified railways, highway lighting.

While new customers have been rolling into the offices of the country's electric companies, old ones new alike have been using more electricity than ever before.

The institute's figures show that in 1940 the average annual use per domestic consumer was 952 kilowatt hours. For the 12-month period ended last June 30, average annual use was 1505 kilowatt hours.

WANTED
MEN WHO CAN MAKE DECISIONS
A Message from The WALL STREET JOURNAL

During the next 5 years, the men who get ahead in business will be those who have the ability to make decisions. And your ability to make decisions is based on your knowledge of business conditions. For example: How will current trends in consumer buying affect your business? What are the latest price trends of raw materials? What is going on behind the scenes in Washington? In New York? In London? What new inventions are creating new ways to make money?

Every day you can get answers to questions like these in the pages of The Wall Street Journal. The Journal keeps you informed on every major new development relating to Prices, Taxes, Inventories, Industries, Production Trends, Commodities, Securities, Marketing, Consumer Buying, World Trade and New Legislation. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or to seize quickly a new profit-making opportunity. Business today is not a guessing game or a "yessing" game. You've got to KNOW. And the men who know, will make money during the next 5 years.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for 3 months for $6 (in U.S. and Possessions). Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. Address: The Wall Street Journal, 44 Broad Street, New York 4, N. Y. WP-9-19

HOW A $10,000 MAN CAN BE SMART ABOUT HIS MONEY
In the next 17 weeks—

What you do with your money in the next 17 weeks can have a serious effect on your whole financial future. The next 17 weeks will bring changes—both political and economic—which can mean crippling losses if you are unwary. Or these weeks can put you ahead financially, if you act wisely and in time. Let Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly give you the information and guidance you need.

You will see in Barron's how the values of your stocks and bonds, real estate, commodities, insurance or other holdings are rising or falling as the result of changing conditions—political and economic—from week to week.

You will get clear, well-founded information each week—not only on industrial and market trends, but on the condition and prospects (the changing fortunes) of individual corporations.

Barron's never attempts to tell you which stocks or bonds to buy or sell. It does tell you the facts that affect securities—the underlying trends, immediate outlook, vital news and statistics that indicate the intrinsic values.

If you are worth over $10,000... or save $1,000 or more a year... you will welcome Barron's reliable guidance, as you build your financial future.

Try Barron's for dependable aid in making your investment decisions. 17 weeks' trial, only $5. Or full year, $15. Just send this ad with your check today. Or tell us to bill you. WP-9-19

WANTED: A Man

We have a client who seeks a man for a position which demands rather unusual qualifications.

The client is seeking a man for a permanent position, with a starting salary of $20,000, with distinct step-up possibilities. He will be given a three-year contract. The position carries dignity and honorable standing, with liberal scope for development of new ideas.

There are certain conditions that must be met:
1. Age—somewhere between 35 and 50.
2. Really excellent health.
3. Freedom to travel throughout the country as much as the position requires. (Office and residence, and much the greater part of his work, will be in Washington.)

Advantageous, but not a necessary requirement is a reasonable amount of executive experience either with:
(a) A public relations organization experienced in handling problems on a national basis; or
(b) A national or regional trade or businessmen's association, where he has had experience in dealing with the over-all problems of an industry, rather than with one particular phase; or
(c) Government service, either departmental or legislative.

Other factors which might count are newspaper experience, writing or public speaking ability.

Our client uses this method of seeking desirable applicants because he feels that there must be many men with these qualifications, who are well situated at present. Even their close associates may not realize that they are quietly looking for an opportunity to improve their position. We desire the application of such men.

The undersigned will accept written applications only, these to be handed in person to the client and treated in strict confidence.

The undersigned certifies to the high type of position being offered and to the fact that the three-year salary agreed upon is guaranteed; and further offers the opinion that if the man makes good during this trial period, his future is assured in a useful and unusually stimulating field.

In view of our assurances of confidential protection, we require full and complete details as to the candidate's experience and qualifications in the initial letter. Again: Only written applications will be considered.

Address all communications to: Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb, Union Trust Building, Washington 5, D. C., Attention of Mr. Charles A. Horsky.

Many Improvements Claimed for 1949 Kaiser

ENGINE HORSEPOWER BOOSTED—More than 100 improvements, 72 in styling and 30 in engine and mechanical features, are claimed for the 1949 Kaiser sedan. The new cars are 3 inches lower and the over-all length has been increased 3½ inches. Another major development is a boost in engine horsepower from 100 to 112. K-F engineers designed the '49s against a background of more than two billion miles of driving by 250,000 owners

7 Fire Companies Compete in County

Arlington firemen had a wet time and a host of kids a fine one yesterday at the Arlington County Firemen's Association Field Day at S. Fillmore and 8th sts.

Paid and volunteer firemen from Arlington's seven companies competed in events ranging from hose coupling to ladder climbing, while more than 200 spectators—including the kids—watched.

Competitive events were preceded by a parade from the Washington-Lee High School to the Fillmore st. field. In the parade were floats sponsored by Arlington merchants, and the men and equipment of the fire companies.

The Clarendon department won the first competitive contest—the "standing hookup" between a stationary pump engine and a hydrant. Second in this damp event was the Ballston company.

Paid firemen won a "standing hookup" contest with the volunteer firemen. In the ladder-climbing Cherrydale was first, the Falls Church company second.

Falls Church topped the hose-coupling event, with Ballston second, and nimble-fingered firemen from the Clarendon company won the one-man dressing contest, nosing out Ballston.

In the "combination hookup" event, when firemen drive a pump engine to a hydrant, stop, and couple the engine hose to it, Cherrydale men led, with Ballston second.

Judges of all events were A. J. Bargagni, chief of the Bethesda (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department; Sergt. A. M. Peel, an instructor at the D. C. Fire Department Pump School, and Karl A. Young, chief of the Mount Rainier (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department.

City League Reactivated In Maryland

By The Associated Press

The Maryland League of Municipalities was reactivated at College Park yesterday at a meeting of more than 40 mayors and other town and city officials.

The league was organized before the war to work for passage of legislation advantageous to Maryland cities and to serve as a clearing house for information on problems of municipal government. It had been inactive since 1941.

Julian C. Tubman, mayor of Cambridge was elected president of the reactivated league.

Mayors Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore, Paul R. MacLean of Bel Air, Thomas S. Post of Cumberland, and John C. Post of Takoma Park were named vice presidents. Tubman, the vice presidents, Mayor John H. Torvestad of Colmar Manor and City Councilman Henry H. Hanna of Salisbury will constitute the board of directors.

Members voted to adopt a dues schedule graduated according to population of member cities.

A new constitution was adopted and permanent headquarters were set up at the University of Maryland.

Two association directors of the American Municipalities Association—Roy H. Owsley of Chicago and Donoa W. Hank, jr., of Washington—attended as observers.

The Maryland League is an affiliate of the national group.

Headed by Dr. Dean

Dental Study Institute Established

Establishment of the National Institute of Dental Research was announced yesterday by Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator.

Dean

The institute was authorized by Congress in a law signed by the President June 24. At the same time, Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the Public Health Service announced the appointment of Dr. H. Trendley Dean of Washington as director of the institute.

Under Ewing's order, the institute will be in the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., which is headed by Assistant Surgeon General R. E. Dyer. It will have equal status with the previously established National Cancer and Heart Institutes and the Institute of Experimental Biology and Medicine.

Firemen Meet At Rockville

Five thousand lined the sidewalks of Rockville yesterday to see a parade of more than 500 firemen from six Maryland and Virginia counties at the annual convention of the Montgomery County Association of Voluntary Firemen.

Fifty units and three bands were in the line of march.

Blonde Grace Johnson, 16, "Miss Burtonsville," was named "Miss Montgomery County Fire Fighter of 1948" over five other contestants in a beauty contest. She is a student of Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md.

Miss Mary Ellen Horman, Clarksburg, "Miss Maryland Fire Fighter" and winner of last year's county title, presented an orchid to Miss Johnson. A trophy was awarded by Chief Spencer J. H. Brown of the Sandy Spring volunteers.

The Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department won trophies for the best appearing and best equipped fire department in the parade and for having the most uniformed men in the line of march.

Other prize winners were: Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, best appearing and equipped ambulance unit; Warrenton, Va., volunteers, for coming the greatest distance; the Brownsville, Md., cornet band, organized in 1884, best band; Silver Spring Boys' Band, second place; Chevy Chase volunteers, for the oldest piece of equipment, a 1926 fire truck, and the Senior Girl Scouts of Rockville, best appearing float.

Fire-fighting demonstrations were held on the Rockville Fire Department carnival grounds preceding a banquet at the Richard Montgomery High School.

Following a banquet at Rockville High School, members of the association elected Leslie Thompson, Chevy Chase, as president, and Victor Bender, Silver Spring, as treasurer.

The address of welcome was delivered by Chairman Dave Yokum, Rockville, and an address was given by Judge Charles W. Woodward, Circuit Court, Rockville.

No Change in FBI's Hoover

An FBI spokesman said yesterday there was no change in the condition of J. Edgar Hoover, who is ill with bronchial pneumonia. His situation was not critical or serious.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Paris Assembly Will Move the 'Cold War' Indoors

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

THE General Assembly of the United Nations faces a stormy 10 or 12 weeks' session when it meets Tuesday in Paris.

The trouble is not that its debates will be bitter, or that hard words will be exchanged, or that there will be controversy over many issues. Every Assembly, by its very nature, is bound to give an impression of storm and stress to the outer world.

The Assembly's business, by and large, is to bring world opinion to bear on international problems. It transacts its business by public speeches. Its speeches often crackle with indignation and ill-will.

Its babel of argument is brought to the world by press and radio in the form of clashes and battles, attacks and counterattacks, victories and defeats.

What makes the prospect so stormy is not the normal Assembly background of controversy, but the fact that the great powers seem determined to use this year's Assembly as an instrument in the Cold War. They appear ready to use it to the limit, with no holds barred.

A Two-Edged Weapon

AS THE DELEGATES from 58 nations assemble in Paris, the Western powers are on the point of asking the Security Council to deal with the Berlin blockade, the most dangerous international dispute since the end of the war. The Soviet Union may cast its inevitable veto, but then the Western powers are expected to put the case before the Assembly for debate and for a moral judgment.

Unless there is a last-minute settlement by four-power negotiation, the injection of this issue seems sure to create more bitterness than any other ever put before the United Nations.

Other issues of the Cold War will entangle every Assembly committee and almost every debate. The United States and its friends are bent on getting majority support on the control of atomic energy, on the guerilla warfare in Greece, on Korea and on many other issues now deadlocked between the Soviet Union and the West.

The Soviet Union and its satellites are no less ready to use the Assembly as a weapon in the present power struggle. They will renew their attack on the Marshall Plan and on Western "imperialism," and will fish for majorities in the waters of discontent, wherever good anti-Western fishing can be found.

In this public war of words between East and West, the smaller nations will often be in the position of having to choose sides on issues that do not directly concern them. It remains to be seen whether this sort of thing can contribute to a sense of peace and security in the world, and whether the Assembly will emerge with heightened prestige when the long weeks of argument are over.

Only a Moral Victory

THE LIST of subjects for discussion is not yet complete, but it already shows clearly what each group of powers is trying to do. A good example is the case of atomic energy.

Here the 12-nation Atomic Energy Commission, set up by the Assembly in 1946, has been deadlocked for 22 months in its effort to control the uses of atomic power. Ten out of the 12 nations in the commission were ready to accept the American plan—virtually the Acheson-Lilienthal Plan of two years ago—for setting up an international atomic development authority, but Russia and Poland balked.

Now the United States is ready to seek the moral judgment of the entire United Nations world on this issue. The Assembly, which can only "recommend," cannot force Russia to accept the American plan, but it can at least make clear that the Soviet position is rejected by the overwhelming majority of mankind.

Another issue on which the Assembly's moral support will be sought is the guerilla fighting in Greece. Last year the Assembly sent a committee of observers to the northern Greek border to determine whether the guerillas were getting illegal help from the three Communist neighboring nations to the north. Now the committee has reported that Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria have all been helping the guerillas.

Almost certainly the United States will seek what it could not get last year—a vote of censure, by a two-thirds majority, against the three Balkan states. Secretary Marshall said the other day that no government likes "to admit or have it said that it is acting in violation of the Charter." On this basis the United States appears ready, as never before, to hold Russia's Balkan friends up to the moral judgment of world opinion.

Colored Bloc Formidable

OUTWARDLY Russia would seem to be hopelessly outnumbered in this annual effort to roll up Assembly majorities. Out of 58 votes, there are only six that she can regard dependably as her own. But it is often forgotten that at least two groups of nations in the Assembly are big enough to roll up majorities against the United States.

One is a group with no common interest whatever except the desire for prestige and offices on United Nations councils. This is the odd combination of the Arab and Latin American blocs, which, with Soviet support, can accomplish almost anything it wants in Assembly elections.

The other is a more formidable group, because all its members have one overriding common interest and feel it with passionate intensity. This group consists of the so-called colored nations (although some are of the white race) which have felt the color bar or colonial grievances at the hands of the West.

India is a leader of this group; all the other Asiatic member states can be counted on to support it; Liberia, Ethiopia and Haiti are natural members of it; the whole Arab bloc is sympathetic to it, largely because of Arab grievances against the United States over Palestine; and Mexico and other Latin American countries will vote with it on occasion.

Whenever this group has Soviet support and advocacy, it can become the most formidable force in the Assembly. The agenda for this year shows that the Soviet Union and its friends will make a shrewd attempt to exploit color grievances as part of the Soviet struggle against the West.

Africa Walkout Possible

THE OLD DISPUTE over the treatment of Indians in South Africa will come up again, and perhaps in aggravated form. South Africa has flatly refused to let the U. N. interfere in what it regards as an internal affair; and to make its defiance plain, it has denied a passport to the leader of its Indian community, who had wanted to go to Paris to testify.

This time a vote of censure might lead South Africa to walk out of the Assembly, either on the Indian issue or on the condition of the natives in the former mandated territory of Southwest Africa. On both issues the Russians, Indians and their miscellaneous friends will be in full cry.

The future of the Italian colonies in Africa has now been referred to the Assembly, since the four powers could not agree on it; this, too, is an issue on which Russia may cry out against "imperialist" Western domination of African natives—in the hope of getting the support of the Arabs and former dependent peoples everywhere.

The Russians are sure to renew their attack against the British, the Dutch and other colonial powers for their administration of native populations. The Poles will sound the antidiscrimination cry in charging others with alleged discriminations against refugee labor.

One reply from the West will be Chile's formal complaint that Russia has violated "fundamental human rights" by not letting the Chilean Ambassador take his Russian wife out of the country with him, and by preventing other Russian wives of foreign nationals from leaving the Soviet Union.

Some Hope for Progress

ALTOGETHER THERE are 68 items on the agenda, not counting those that may be added early in the session. Some of them give the Assembly an opportunity for constructive action, such as setting up the so-called "Little Assembly" on a permanent basis, or bringing order out of the present jumble of specialized agencies which, individually, are doing some of the U. N.'s most useful work.

Yet, reading over the agenda for this year's Assembly, one cannot help feeling that each of the giant protagonists, the United States and the Soviet Union, is simply using the Assembly to score political and propaganda points off the other. From the American viewpoint, the Assembly will be a thumping success if it outwits, discredits and humiliates the Soviet Union; from the Soviet viewpoint, the converse will, of course, be true.

At this rate the Assembly will be fortunate if it is not torn apart by the pulling and hauling of its two most powerful members. If the Assembly can survive what is evidently in store for it in Paris, it can survive anything.

Teamster Dave Seeks Driver's Seat

By Lester M. Hunt

TWO strong men are grasping for control of American labor. They are David Beck of Seattle and Walter Reuther of Detroit.

Inevitably they will clash if each achieves his preliminary ambition—Beck to control the AFL and Reuther the CIO.

On the outcome of that clash will hinge the new pattern of the labor movement and perhaps the economy of the United States.

Beck now controls the largest union in the AFL, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, while Reuther heads the largest in the CIO, the United Automobile Workers.

Each has about a million members.

The auto workers, despite their turbulent internal feuds, are the more cohesive unit. The teamsters, built around a solid core of some 250,000 truck drivers, include everything from deep sea fishermen to holly planters. They are a gigantic District 50, particularly in the West where Beck commands the sun to stand still.

'Boss' Takes Orders

BUT BECK is not satisfied with his vast feudal barony beyond the Rockies. He is reversing the historic admonition of Horace Greeley. He is coming East.

Already he has left large footprints in the Indiana cornfields and on the seat of Dan Tobin's pants.

Tobin is still the nominal leader of the teamsters' union. But as executive vice president of the teamsters, a new post created to sate his surging ambition, Beck is the actual ruler.

Tobin may sputter and fume in occasional delusions of independence, but when the whip finally cracks he leaps through the hoop.

Beck is riding hard to reach his goal ahead of Reuther. If Reuther heads the CIO before Beck can take over the AFL, Beck will find it harder to crush the CIO and realize his next ambition of dominating the entire American labor movement.

The fight between the two will probably cast Beck in his favorite role of defending free enterprise to make business his ally. Reuther will be castigated as one who would regiment industry to the detriment of both capital and labor.

Beck abhors regimentation by Government. He favors it by Beck. Beck's philosophy of labor relations envisages one big man in labor sitting down with one big man in industry to write the ticket.

Lester M. Hunt, who wrote this story of Dave Beck's "victory" over his old friend, Dan Tobin, has worked for both men. He was Beck's press agent and editor in Seattle from 1938 to 1941, when he went to Indianapolis as a general organizer of the Teamsters. Actually, he was editor of the Teamsters' magazine, but Tobin held the title.

Hunt's signed articles for the Teamsters' magazine have been quoted widely by labor reporters.

When Beck "left large footprints on the Indiana cornfields and on the seat of Dan Tobin's pants," as Hunt puts it, Hunt lost his magazine job. Now he is planning to return to newspaper work, which was his field from his World War I discharge in 1919, until 1938. He is a Minneapolis native.

Last Laugh Is His

FOR YEARS most of the big labor leaders have laughed at Beck as a simple upstart from the Northwest woods. Their laughter showed their own simplicity. Beck forged ahead steadily in ways they did not comprehend.

He finally showed his power at the AFL executive council meeting in Chicago last month when the old leaders unanimously took him off the hottest spot he has occupied in recent years.

By blandly disregarding the facts in the Boeing strike in Seattle, the council indorsed his strikebreaking against the International Association of Machinists and left five locals of the retail clerks at his mercy.

This action was taken despite the fact that most of labor in the Northwest was seething over Beck's attack on the machinists while they were on strike.

According to the official statement of the AFL, nobody would have thought a strike was in progress in Seattle. It was airily dismissed as a jurisdictional "controversy."

For weeks before the AFL council session, Tobin had squirmed in embarrassment as one union after another condemned the teamsters and demanded that Tobin discharge Beck as executive vice president.

The day before the council rescued Beck, Tobin was giving solemn assurance that he would never capitulate. A few hours later Beck flew into town with a retinue of Western satraps and the following day Tobin went to bat for Beck.

Tobin's Frankenstein

HAD TOBIN refused to do that, Beck would have been through as a labor leader. Why did Tobin do that? Why has he permitted Beck to humiliate him publicly and then has apologized for Beck, time after time?

Nobody knows the answer but Tobin and Beck, and probably nobody else ever will.

Without Tobin, Beck would still be driving a laundry wagon in Seattle. He might have worked his way up to secretary or president of the Central Labor Council, but he would have never made the big time.

Tobin permitted Beck to organize the Western Conference of Teamsters, which is a union within a union, embracing the teamster membership in the 11 Western States. When local unions resisted, Tobin turned on the heat to force them in.

Tobin permitted Beck to extend his jurisdiction to fantastic lengths, taking in office girls, store clerks, fish cleaners and chicken pickers. At one time he even considered taking in newspapermen.

He made the teamsters a federation of labor instead of a union.

A Civic Leader Emerges

AFTER THE ROUGH and tumble days of early organization, Beck changed his methods completely. He became the friend of business. He joined the Chamber of Commerce. The Community Chest rattled with silver tossed in by Beck with much publicity.

Whenever Beck got into a hot spot, it was not other labor men who charged to his aid, but businessmen.

When Westbrook Pegler attacked him several years ago for closing some 200 independent service stations by refusing to deliver gasoline, Beck sent out urgent invitations to businessmen, bankers and industrialists to attend a meeting in the Olympic Hotel. They crowded the place and censured Pegler for besmirching the fair name of Seattle.

And then, after closing down service stations because Seattle had too many, Beck saw nothing inconsistent in opening one himself across from the teamster hall. The station hired members of one of Beck's unions, which made him an employer of the men he was paid to represent.

De Lacy Adds Footnote

IN RECENT YEARS, Beck has assumed the role of communism's arch foe. But Hugh De Lacy claims Beck contributed $500 to his campaign for reelection to Congress from Seattle two years ago. De Lacy's voting record in Congress was like Vito Marcantonio's.

Tobin may still deny Beck is not top dog in the teamsters. He issued a statement in Chicago last month that dripped with affection for Beck.

In obvious reply to Columnist Robert S. Allen, who had written that Beck was pushing Tobin out, Tobin said it was a vile conspiracy to create hard feelings between him and his good friend, Beck.

What is Beck shooting for? For the works. He intends to take over the AFL and then, using the tactics he has developed in the West, to raid all other unions with the cooperation of business to "save them from communism."

Beck would then run American labor, and in that position he would have a stranglehold on industry.

Where would an ambitious man go from there?

Mussolini made the trains run on time. And Beck doesn't like late trains, either.

Dewey 50% to Truman's 38 in Ohio

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

OHIO, a State which Governor Dewey carried in the 1944 presidential election by the exceedingly slim margin of two tenths of 1 per cent, is today in the Republican column by a fairly wide margin.

Interviewers throughout Ohio have put the following question to a cross-section of the State's voting population:

"If the presidential election were being held TODAY, how would you vote—for Truman, for Dewey or for Wallace?"

The vote:

|---|---|
| Dewey | 50% |
| Truman | 38 |
| Wallace | 3 |
| Undecided | 9 |

Ohio is the seventh State to be reported in the institute's series on political sentiment in the individual States. The series has brought out the following facts so far:

1. Dewey is leading today in five of the seven States—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, California and Ohio. President Truman leads in one, Missouri, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Party candidate, in one, South Carolina.

2. Except for New York, Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate, polls a comparatively low vote in all the States thus far reported. His strength varies from a low of less than 1 per cent in South Carolina and 3 per cent in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, to a high of 14 per cent in New York.

In New York his candidacy, by splitting the Democratic vote, throws the State to Governor Dewey today, but in the other States thus far reported the Wallace forces do not hold the balance of power, for even if Wallace were to drop out and if all his votes went to Mr. Truman, Dewey's lead in those States would still not be overcome.

3. The Thurmond threat to the Democrats in the South can be seen by the large popular vote majority for Thurmond in his home State of South Carolina, where he outpolls President Truman, 2 to 1.

4. Although election day is less than two months off, approximately 1 voter in 10 continues to be undecided about his choice of candidate. Some of these undecideds did not vote in the last presidential election, but among those who did vote last time the majority voted Democratic.

LOOKING AHEAD—At Spain and Korea

By the World Staff of the Associated Press

AMERICAN occupation authorities in South Korea say they have found "the answer to communism in the Orient."

By the close of this year they hope to have increased by some 200 per cent over 1945 the number of rural families which own from 90 to 100 per cent of the land they till. The land is being redistributed, payment being made in ground rents over 15 years.

Don Juan's Gamble

PARIS—Spanish monarchists say that Don Juan, pretender to the throne, is confident that Generalissimo Franco will have to give up power in Spain. They cite the recent incident concerning the schooling of the 10-year-old Prince of Asturia, Don Juan's son, as evidence.

Don Juan and Franco met off the coast of France. Monarchists say it was Franco who requested the meeting and that he suggested the prince go to school in Spain.

The monarchists see this as an attempt by Franco to bolster his position in Spain—but they say Don Juan prefers to wait, convinced that sooner or later Franco will have to resign.

THE GERMANS drafting a constitution at Bonn want to bolster their hoped-for democratic government against both Communists and Nazi types.

Carl Friederick, Harvard professor who has been political adviser to Gen. Lucius D. Clay, says the draft constitution would deny the right to hold public office to any German convicted in a denazification court or who advocates destruction of civil rights.

WORLD AFFAIRS

Three Times Death Has Brushed Italy's Scholarly Red Boss

By Philip Clarke.
Associated Press Staff Writer

ROME, SEPT. 18.—It was 1922, and Rome echoed to the first ugly sounds of fascism.

Black-shirted youths stormed into the tiny Guardiole printing shop, smashing and wrecking everything. They seized a small group of men working on the latest edition of Il Comunista, organ of the year-old Italian Communist Party.

A Fascist army lieutenant left in charge of the Communist prisoners lined them against a wall to be shot. Then he either lost his nerve or, as Communist sources say, gave a "high sign" to escape. One Communist who thus escaped death was myopic, mild-mannered Palmiro Togliatti, who was to lead Italy's Communists in and out of exile for a quarter century.

Now it is March 5, 1939, in bomb-blasted Madrid. A group of Spanish generals has seized the city, hoping to negotiate peace with Francisco Franco, whose forces are spilling into the outskirts.

In their coup, the generals have condemned to death a number of last-ditch Loyalist defenders. Among them is Togliatti, an organizer of the volunteer Garibaldi Brigades.

At the last minute, a band of Loyalist officers breaks into the building where Togliatti is held and frees him.

It is July 14, 1948, in Rome again.

Not a block away from where he first escaped death, Togliatti leaves the Chamber of Deputies to buy some ice cream. Three bullets of a would-be Sicilian assassin strike him down.

Still wearing his glasses, he is taken to a hospital where transfusions, oxygen and American-made pencillin help save his life while Communist-inspired riots rage throughout Italy, bringing death to 21 and injury to more than 200 persons.

Thus death stabbed at Togliatti a third time and missed.

No Time for Sleep

TOGLIATTI, neat, college-educated and level-voiced, is an example of Moscow's better-bred Communists. He is one of the "hard core" of thoroughly-trained and disciplined party leaders.

An antitype of the classic dictator, Togliatti has an easy, unaffected manner. His face is strongly intelligent. His studious appearance is heightened by the direct gaze of dark eyes, framed by steel-rimmed glasses.

As an orator, he is undramatic, even monotonous. He relies on logic, sharp phrases and knifing repartee.

A tireless worker, he sleeps five to six hours a night. Almost always he is at his desk in Communist headquarters by 7 a. m. He personally decides most major policy questions.

Togliatti spends most of his evenings reading and working at home, a fairly pretentious three-story building near Rome's vast Piazza del Popolo. It formerly belonged to a Fascist minister; the Togliattis occupy only a few rooms.

A huge library of historical and political works provides background for many of Togliatti's speeches. Among his favorite quotation sources are Dante, Lincoln and the Bible. He once startled the Constituent Assembly by reading the First Commandment.

On Sunday afternoons he frequently goes to a soccer game. He likes to bowl and play "scopone," an Italian card game.

Named for Holy Day

TOGLIATTI was born March 26, 1893, in Genoa, one of four sons of a meagerly-paid government bookkeeper. The poor but pious parents named him Palmiro in honor of the day—Palm Sunday.

The family moved to Sassari, Sardinia, when Palmiro was a few years old. Togliatti's father died when Palmiro was 18 and the family returned to Genoa.

In 1911 he won a scholarship to Turin University, where he studied history, philosophy and law, including canon and ecclesiastical law. While he was a senior student he lectured on Hebrew rights and the 12 tables of Moses.

Togliatti received his university law degree and high honors in history and philosophy from Prof. Luigi Einaudi, now the President of Italy.

When World War I broke out, Togliatti was a confirmed Socialist. He was kept from active war service by his myopic eyes but was assigned to the Red Cross.

After the war, he worked on Milan's Socialist newspaper, Avanti, which former Socialist Mussolini had directed before 1914. In 1919 he helped found the weekly Ordine Nuovo (New Order). As managing editor, he wrote a column on Marxist theory entitled "The Battle of Ideas." The newspaper became a rallying point for Italy's extremist Socialists.

It was the men of the "New Order" who led the revolt from the Socialist Congress of Leghorn in January, 1921, creating the independent Communist Party of Italy.

Married a Striker

FROM THEN UNTIL 1926, Togliatti rose swiftly in Communist ranks as he battled Mussolini's strong-arm squads. Meantime, he had taken direction of Lavoratore di Trieste (Workers of Trieste), one of the Communist Party's three daily newspapers.

In 1922 Togliatti moved to Rome, where he became a member of the Communist Party's central committee. In 1924, he married Rita Montagnana, a seamstress, while she was striking with other employes of a clothing shop.

Rita, the sister of Communist Parliament Member Mario Montagnana, is now a white-haired Communist Senator and a party bigwig in her own right, member of the central committee and leader of the Communist women's organization. They have a student son, Aldo, 24, who speaks Russian almost as well as Italian but who steers clears of politics.

Mussolini's "exceptional law" in 1924 outlawed the Communist Party. By 1926 it was driven almost completely underground and Togliatti fled to France, where he began effective leadership of Italy's Communists from exile. He began to turn from an independent Communist viewpoint to fervid pro-Moscowism.

Togliatti moved about rapidly—from Moscow to Madrid to Paris, Brussels and Cologne.

When Italy's Communists in exile split over the issue of underground warfare within Fascist Italy, Togliatti led the battle to keep underground forces fully active. He won his point at the party's fourth national congress in exile at Cologne in 1931. His opponents were expelled.

A Kremlin Fanatic

IN THE EARLY 1930's, Togliatti appeared in Paris as an ardent apostle of Russian leadership in all world Communist movements.

In Spain in 1936, Togliatti helped organize the Garibaldi Brigades with such leftist figures as Pietro Nenni, Socialist leader; Giuseppe di Vittorio, now secretary-general of the Communist-controlled Labor Confederation, and Luigi Longo, No. 2 man in the party today and organizer of its partisan forces.

With Spain's fall to Franco's forces in 1939, Togliatti fled to France. He became is leading member of Communism's executive committee or presidium under George Dmitrov, Bulgarian Communist leader, and was placed in charge of the presidium's Mediterranean section.

In Moscow, where he was said to have enjoyed Stalin's personal friendship, he wrote frequent articles for Pravda and gave occasional lectures. He also completed the first Italian translations of most of the works of Marx, Lenin and Stalin.

He was one of the 12 Communist leaders under Dmitrov who in May, 1943, signed the decree abolishing the Comintern. He is a permanent delegate to the Cominform.

Late in 1943 and early in 1944, Togliatti made at least two daring trips into Fascist-held Italy to speed organization of Communist resistance forces. On the second trip, plans were made for a general, nation-wide strike to coincide with Allied entry into Rome.

Ordered Duce's Death

THE COMMUNIST press credited Togliatti with ordering the execution of Mussolini at Dongo in 1945. Defense attorneys in the recent trial of six former German officers accused in the Ardeatine massacre of 335 Italians in 1944, said Togliatti was behind the partisan ambush of 32 German soldiers which led to the mass reprisal.

Togliatti arrived in liberated Naples from Algiers on March 27, 1944. It was Andrei Vishinsky, then Russian delegate on the Advisory Council for Italy, who got Allied permission for his first official return home in 18 years.

Twenty-five days later, Togliatti entered the wartime government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio as minister without portfolio—the first Communist cabinet member in Italian history.

Togliatti adopted the role of conciliator and pious observer of political niceties. He worked hard to acquire political respectability for the party.

In the June, 1946, election of the Constituent Assembly, 4,350,000 Italians voted Communist. With this mandate, Togliatti began a typically Communist policy of political expediency which kept Italy spinning.

After Communists were kicked out of the government last year, Togliatti trumpeted that a left-less Italian government posed "a promise of civil war." Government officials reported the Communists had an underground army of more than 100,000 posed to strike.

Yet the Italian election in April passed in surprising calm. Not a Communist finger was lifted in revolt until the sudden eruption of violence which followed the surprise attack on Togliatti in July.

A Farm Economist Analyzes the Boom

History Says 'Bust,' But U. S. Has Cushions Now

A digest of an address delivered by William I. Myers, dean of the College of Agriculture at Cornell University, before the American Institute of Cooperation at Amherst, Mass. Dr. Myers has a long record of Government service, including terms as governor of the Farm Credit Administration, president of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, director of the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation and member of the President's Famine Emergency Committee.

THE ECONOMIC outlook is always unpredictable, but it has seldom been more uncertain than now. Under present conditions the trend of prices, employment and production in the United States is influenced not only by economic factors but also by political policies and international relations. As a result, the economic visibility is very low.

During the Second World War period the older generation has been comparing developments with those of the First World War because of the tendency of major economic movements during war periods to follow similar patterns.

Beginning in 1914, marked increases occurred in prices of farm products and other commodities which were accelerated after the Armistice and reached a peak in May and June, 1920. From this time until 1922 there was a sharp drop in the general price level, a collapse in farm prices and in food exports, and a short but severe business depression.

From 1923 to 1929 the United States enjoyed a period of recovery and of unparalleled prosperity. This urban prosperity was followed by another severe collapse in prices and the worst depression in our economic history. From 1933 to 1939 this country passed through a period of slow, irregular recovery, but unemployment was still high and farm prices at depression levels when the Second World War began.

What has been happening in the present war period up to July, 1948?

United States farm prices have risen from an index of 89 in August, 1939, when the average of 1910-14 is taken as 100, to the highest point in history in 1948, and an index of 301 for July. A substantial part of this increase was recovery from the depression levels of August, 1939, when farm prices were only 73 per cent of parity. However, farm prices are now three times the level of the base period and for 1948 will average about one third above the peak year of World War I.

Farm wage rates, with an index of 431, are more than four times the 1910-14 level but have no more than maintained their relationship with industrial wages. Farm costs other than labor have lagged as usual but are now catching up with farm prices. The index of prices of articles farmers buy (including interest and taxes) for July was 251.

The prices of basic commodities, including fuels, metals and other nonagricultural as well as farm raw materials, have risen rapidly since the end of the war, and now at an index of 290 are about in adjustment with farm prices.

The general level of wholesale prices has risen more slowly than farm prices and more slowly than during World War I. This index of 247 has recently surpassed the mark of World War I, reached in May, 1920.

While wholesale prices of both farm and nonfarm products rise and fall with inflation and deflation, the fluctuations in farm products are more violent and lead the price recession both up and down. Wholesale prices of farm products are about 20 per cent above nonfarm products, but this disparity is decreasing and will disappear in due course.

Depression Start

THE slower rate of increase in the general price level during this war period has been due largely to three factors: The fact that this war started during depression; Government rationing and price controls, and the increasing importance of administered prices.

The Second World War started while the United States was still in a depression, with widespread unemployment and much unused industrial capacity. As a result the Nation was able to produce a large quantity of war materials by putting unemployed to work without curtailing civilian production.

Government rationing, subsidies and price controls retarded price increases of many products during the war. The effects were substantial, although overstated in official price indexes, since Government subsidies in lieu of higher prices were not included while lower quality goods were sold at prices for higher quality without affecting nonfarm commodities because of difficulties of administration.

The general price level has become increasingly slow moving and sticky as a result of the growing importance of administered prices. During the present inflationary period, restraint has been exercised by many corporations in keeping the prices of farm machinery, automobiles and many other products below free-market prices by the use of informal rationing. Similar resistance to price declines may be expected.

For two years in succession a business recession in this country has been predicted but it has not yet arrived. Last year the most important reason was unexpectedly high exports. Early in 1948 it was again predicted, but by a smaller number, that a recession would occur.

There has been a definite decline in industrial construction due to high costs. Although exports have continued at high levels, they have decreased about 20 per cent in the first half of 1948 from the corresponding period of 1947. This decrease has occurred in spite of the European Recovery Program because other countries have largely spent their war-accumulated dollars.

The most important factors sustaining high business activity in 1948 have been residential construction, rearmament and tax reduction. The result has been a continuation of overemployment, of feverish business activity, in short, a "boom." Barring another world food disaster or serious threat of war, the next marked change in economic conditions will be downward.

Sooner or later it seems certain that the United States will have a decline in prices, business activity, employment and industrial production until reasonable stability is attained at a somewhat lower level. Granting this, the important questions are:

WILLIAM I. MYERS
. . . "Reduce short-term debts"

When will this decline occur? Will the decline be sharp or gradual?

Cushioned This Time

THE economic history of the United States indicates the likelihood of a violent drop, since every previous war period has been followed by such a decline.

In spite of this record, there is a possibility that the recession may be less violent this time because of steps taken to restrain rising prices and to cushion the effects of declining demand. The restraint against rising prices exercised by many large corporations will make their prices less vulnerable when the price level declines.

While our contributions to the recovery of devastated countries have added to the intensity of inflationary pressures, the European Recovery Program may contribute to stabilization when a recession occurs by cushioning declining exports. Unemployment-insurance plans and farm price support programs are also stabilizing factors.

Another important factor in the present unstable situation is the availability and wide dissemination of economic information on trends of prices, inventories, employment and business activity. As long as businessmen are concerned about the probability of a recession there is less danger of having one, because of actions taken to prevent accummulation of excessive inventories and to avoid overexpansion of credit. If, however, the public decides there is no danger of a recession and strong bull markets develop, it will be wise to look up a good cyclone cellar until the storm is over.

In spite of the high level of business activity some industries have had difficulties, because their output has exceeded demand at quoted prices. Among others these include radios, textiles, shoes and certain types of household equipment. Another example is provided in the decline of prices of grains, especially wheat and corn, as a readjustment from the near famine levels of 1947 to more favorable production prospects this year. However, thus far these adjustments in production and prices have been limited to one or two industries at a time.

If this process of piecemeal adjustment is continued it might be possible to get down gradually from boom levels to a firmer basis without a smashup. However, if a sharp break in the general price level should occur, demand for all commodities will decline and there will be the general under-consumption that is characteristic of depressions and is popularly called overproduction.

If such a depression does occur it will probably be of short duration until readjustment is regained at a somewhat lower level. After the readjustment has been completed there are excellent prospects for several years of high production and employment to make good the shortages of durable goods resulting from the war period. This will be a period of reasonable prosperity for farmers and others who are not burdened with heavy debts.

Even if a sharp drop in prices and business activity is avoided, a decline to parity prices for farm products would mean a substantial decrease in net farm incomes and would seem like a recession in comparison with recent years. Such a decline is generally expected by farmers but it will not be enjoyed.

If a sharp recession should occur, the effects would be serious because of the heavy losses that are inevitable in a business with a slow turnover like farming when prices decline rapidly while costs remain high. Fortunately, farmers are in a better position than ever before to withstand unfavorable economic conditions because of the low level of mortgage debts and their financial reserves in savings bonds and cash.

A Different War

EVERYONE was too optimistic regarding the recovery of world food production after this war. It was assumed incorrectly that, like the First World War, if the United States could meet the emergency needs of other countries for one winter, the production of food would increase quickly to prewar levels. Unfortunately, this time it didn't work out that way, largely because of the terrific destruction of total war and the consequent demoralization of production of fertilizers and farm machinery that are essential in modern farm production.

The third round of wage increases in this country was based on increased living costs, largely food. Unfortunately the public doesn't understand that these price increases were due to drought and to our efforts to meet the European disaster and in spite of the continued extraordinary efforts of farm families for maximum food production. The meat shortage this year is the inevitable delayed result of the small corn crop in 1947 and of the heavy grain shipments abroad to prevent starvation. If present prospects for the largest feed grain crops in history are realized, improvement in meat supplies and some reduction in prices can be expected during 1949.

The prospective wheat production in Western Europe this year is the best since the war, but still about 10 per cent below the prewar level. This improved outlook for food production is one of the most important constructive developments since the end of the war. However, the effect of this increased production on United States exports has been overestimated.

Large food imports are expected by Western European countries even after 1951. With limited land resources and 270 million people to be fed, there will be a heavy deficit in food even after full recovery has been attained.

A Population Factor

AS A result of these factors, a decline in United States food exports is to be expected, but it will be less abrupt than in 1920-21 if the European Recovery Program is continued and their recovery is attained.

In spite of the troubled outlook for the next few years, world agriculture is in a relatively strong position in the world economy and the long run prospects are favorable. Since the start of the war there has been an increase of some 10 per cent in world population and in food demand, while world food production has not yet regained prewar levels.

The United States has more than kept pace with the rest of the world with a phenomenal increase in population from 132 million in 1940 to 145 million this year. Livestock numbers have not kept pace with population and livestock per capita is approaching an all-time low.

More feed will be required for livestock for our growing population and also, of course, there will be a greater demand for other foods. As a result, there will be less food for export. To put it another way, there is no danger of a so-called general overproduction of food in this country until the next depression.

United States farmers as a group may expect somewhat lower net incomes in the next few years because costs will be higher in relation to prices received. Prices of farm products are not likely to decline appreciably during 1948, but present high levels are not likely to continue indefinitely. While the general price level and business activity may maintain their present altitude for some months, a readjustment is probable within the next year or two.

In view of this outlook, cautious, conservative operation is the soundest policy for farm cooperatives and other business. The first step in the protection of any business from the shock of a possible recession is to avoid overexpansion of credit in a period of boom like the present. A major part of the grief in previous recessions was due to this cause.

With present extremely high costs it is wise to be cautious about new building construction.

Now is a good time to reduce short term debts to a basis that will be safe under adverse conditions and to get other debts financed on a conservative long term basis. If additional capital is required it should be obtained from investment by members or stockholders rather than by borrowing. Inventories should be kept at a minimum for the prospective volume of business. Make plans on the basis of lower net margins and keep the business on a sound financial basis.

THE MOST important economic problem of agriculture, of farm cooperatives, of other corporations and of all the United States is the reduction of the violence of economic fluctuations; the reasonable stabilization at favorable levels of prices, production and employment.

Some fluctuation is probably inevitable as long as human beings become alternately overoptimistic and overpessimistic. These minor movements or business cycles are like the waves of the ocean and are not a cause of major difficulties. It is the great depressions, the tidal waves, which raise havoc with modern economic society.

In order to reduce the violence of depressions, it will be necessary to discourage overoptimism during booms.

Reducing the violence of economic fluctuations is not a panacea for all economic ills. It would not solve all economic problems of the Nation, but it would reduce them to manageable proportions.

The reduction of the violence of economic swings involves public education, wise action by individuals and corporations, and wise Government policies. The outlook for immediate success is not hopeful, but some gains have been made. If progress is to be made there must be the courage and the know-how to repress some of the violence of booms without causing a violent reaction.

90 Days in Fabled Manhattan Put Crippled Miners on Feet

By Adelaide Kerr
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Crippled miners from the Nation's coal fields are digging for gold in Gotham today.

The "gold" they seek, says Dr. Donald Covalt, is physical rehabilitation and a new outlook on lives twisted by accident.

Dr. Covalt is clinical director of the Institute of Rehabilitation of the New York University-Bellevue Medical Center, where the miners are getting treatment and training.

Twenty-seven have been brought here from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Alabama since the program was started April 12 by the United Mine Workers. Some were bedridden and required hospital attention first. Others came in wheelchairs. Few could walk or dress themselves. All had lived with heartache, pain and despair.

When the 19 who have been graduated left after 60 to 90 days of treatment, training and exercises, they were able to live independently again with the help of crutches and leg braces. They had hope in their hearts and could mix with people once more. They had prevocational training pointing toward work that might enable them to pay the grocery bill again some day.

A Plan for Living

"WE DO NOT actually give vocational training," says Dr. Covalt. "But we use the opportunity while the miners are here to test them for the work they can do.

"Wood work, repairing precision instruments and office practice are among the things in which they can test their ability. Then every man comes before a clinic of doctors, psychiatrists, social service workers and vocational guidance workers for counsel and guidance from people who know him. He is given a report and a general living plan which covers exercises and notes the work he can do. He goes out to aim at definite goals."

Copies of the reports are sent to the union, and it is hoped that they may be followed by vocational training and efforts to find jobs.

But the "lode" the miners are working in the institute has still more riches. They see sights and do things that are nine-day wonders to men long chained to beds and wheelchairs in mining towns.

Broadway lights glowing like a jewel box. Dizzy views over the Manhattan mosaic from the Empire State Building. Big league baseball. Swift underground rides in Baghdad on the Subway. Visits to the Bronx Zoo under their own power. Trips on a sightseeing boat around Manhattan. Visits to Broadway theaters, movies, radio shows. Glimpses of the twentieth century's new wonder—television. Famous faces. Chic women. Chinatown restaurants. Fifth ave. shops.

"To a country fellow like me, it's a wonderful sight," said Clarence Alexander, 34, of Westbourne, Tenn., crippled for 10 years.

The Big City's Heart

NEW YORKERS, supposedly callous creatures, cooperated at many turns to help the miners have fun. When the gangplank of a sightseeing boat was set at a sharp pitch, eight stalwart cops sprang from somewhere to push the chairs up the incline. People chased taxis for men in braces and helped bundle them inside. A nightclub put an occasional table at their disposal.

One day two crippled miners hailed a taxi and ordered the driver to "cruise around so we can see the sights." When the meter climbed to $2.50, the driver shut it off and drove the boys free for the next two hours.

Treats like that come after days of serious work, filled with examinations, treatment, exercises and occupational therapy. There is little time for doubt and despair.

Besides, the miners can always remember George Leslie of Birmingham, who came on a stretcher and went home sitting up and able to walk short distances with a cane.

Or the West Virginia miner who stepped off the train at home and, before a circle of grinning and amazed neighbors, danced a little jig in his braces, as he whistled a happy tune.

American Aid Going Astray, Says Austrian

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

A SHORT MAN with a stout heart—until two weeks ago a repatriated Viennese—paid his first visit to Washington last week. His objective: To save America money.

Jakob Eisner, 52, walked shyly into the city room, a portfolio under his arm, and in halting English explained his mission.

He believes the United States should organize a unit to prevent the waste of American help through improper distribution, diversion of foodstuffs into the black market and "overdrawing by States, municipalities, corporations and by the Russians."

Eisner feels he can speak with some authority in this field. For the past two years the plump, kindly refugee, who saw the inside of more than one concentration camp, has been employed by the supply division of the United States Commission on Austria as a supervisor and food inspector.

As such, according to a letter from Lieut. Col. Fred W. Collins, with the United States forces there, Eisner supervised "20 Austrian investigators conducting surveys and investigations of food, fuel, clothing and other rationed and controlled commodities."

And Eisner frequently uncovered situations which angered him.

A Holdout in Lard

ON August 12, 1947, for example, he reported in writing to his American chiefs:

"Last week there was a call of lard for supplement ration-cards, 90 grams for workers und 200 grams for mothers. By making out our wholesalers' survey, there was a plain reply of 100 per cent at our district for all items besides potatoes.

"By the end of the week we found still consumers telling us that they have not received their lard supplement yet. Asking the butcher wholesalers again about this, we learned that the Fett und Viehwirtschaftsverband (an association of wholesalers) have blocked the lard stock. Therefore no lard was supplied to the retailers.

"At this time it was known that a big raise of all prices is expected for the following week. Therefore, we denounced the Fett und Viehwirtschaftsverband for cheating the consumers, because 400,000 workers and mothers approximately are damaged by this dirty trick.

"We beg this time earnestly to make a strong example so that the American relief who just like to help the hungry population and certainly workers and mothers, should not be used by such an absolutely unnecessary trust to rob the poors and make such high unlawful profits."

Horse Meat Popular

EISNER says that despite United States generosity, fresh meat is still a delicacy to the average Viennese. Children "don't even know a candy when they see it." Most people are "crazy for horse meat." Powdered milk is a treat.

He reported that members of some political parties, especially the Communists, can overdraw their supplementary ration cards. "It is nicer to make gifts to political supporters from the American 'suckers,'" he explained.

About 64 per cent of Austria's food supply comes from this country, Eisner said, and a good 15 or 20 per cent winds up in the black market. This includes peas, flour, lard, meat, raisins and cocoa.

When supplies arrive, the United States turns them over to the government, which distributes them to the municipalities, he said. Wholesalers, institutions and others then apply for a share.

But needs are frequently overstated, Eisner said, and often the applicant "overdraws." Thus big sellers find it possible to divert supplies to the black market.

He said that virtually every week he found wholesalers or bakers with 8 to 10 tons of flour and other items "already set aside for the black market." He charged that the fat and cattle board of Vienna hoarded about 30 tons of canned horse meat.

The present system, Eisner said, provides a pretty thorough check of the "small people," but the "big people" need keener surveillance.

A Buchenwald Survivor

BEFORE the war, Eisner was a stock broker and bank manager. The Nazis confiscated his home and everything he had, and put him in Buchenwald. He exhibits the scars where they cut the muscles of his fingers, "just for fun."

For almost five years, spent principally in concentration camps, he was separated from his wife, who was hiding in Vienna under an assumed name. They were reunited through the help of a British officer.

Now Eisner's great goal is to become an American citizen—and work for the United States Government.

Piccard Will Dive Two Miles In an Underwater 'Balloon'

By Alfred Cheval
AP Staff Correspondent

BRUSSELS, Sept. 18.—Sixteen years after he soared 10 miles into the stratosphere in a balloon, Belgium's scientist-explorer, Prof. Auguste Piccard, is ready to plunge more than two miles under water to search the deep sea world.

Again he is using a kind of balloon, this time made of steel. He calls it "my bathyscaphe, a kind of submarine balloon." (The word bathyscaphe is derived from the Greek word for an underwater vessel.)

The professor has set 13,000 feet for his initial goal, but he told newsmen he hopes to dive as deep as 18,000 feet, almost 3½ miles straight down. Actually, he said, the bathyscaphe could go to much greater depths without harm. (The record dive is 3000 feet, established by the American scientist William Beebe in 1934).

Within the next few weeks Piccard and his assistant, Max Cosyns, expect to make the first great dive in the Gulf of Guinea off French West Africa from the government-chartered Belgian steamer Scaldis.

'Inflated' With Gasoline

LIKE A BALLOON, the bathyscaphe is composed of two main parts. The lower part, which in a balloon would be the basket, is a steel sphere 3½ inches thick and 6 feet, 4 inches in diameter. This is attached to a 7-yard-long float of ship steel (the "gas bag" of the balloon) containing lighter than water gasoline, used as a substitute for too easily compressible helium.

Completely equipped, the bathyscaphe weighs about 40 tons. The float is painted orange and the sphere white.

The Fond National de la Recherche Scientifique (National Scientific Research Fund) is sponsoring the expedition.

When the Scaldis reaches about 0 degree longitude west and 0 degree latitude north, Piccard's submarine "balloon" will be lifted from the hold and put into the sea. The submarine then will be sent down, unmanned, to about 12,000 feet, where its surface will be under a pressure of about 6000 pounds per square inch. If all goes well, an automatic device will bring it up again.

To make their dive, Piccard and Cosyns will enter the sphere through a porthole 16 inches in diameter. Piccard will start the descent by releasing gasoline from the float. At sea bottom a guide rope with a heavy block of concrete will keep it floating about 6 feet from the ocean bed.

Power to Maneuver

PICCARD AND COSYNS then will take the first look any human being has ever taken at such depths through two opposed portholes made of cone-shaped plastic glass. Floodlights of 3000 candlepower will permit picture-taking and a dictaphone will register the scientists' impressions. Two small engines will enable Piccard to maneuver the submarine in the deep sea world.

When it is time to surface, Piccard will release a ferroconcrete ballast held under the spherical cabin by electromagnets. The float will provide the necessary lifting power. If by accident the electric power is cut off, the ballast will be dropped automatically and the submarine will surface.

To determine whether he is going up or down, Piccard has placed a horizontal propeller above the cabin. The propeller turns one way or the other and sounds a signal in the cabin.

If all goes well, other descents will be made with Piccard or Cosyns accompanied by a geologist or naturalist. With the help of harpoons and other gadgets, they hope to bring back samples of the deep sea bed, fishes and plants.

It is known that the bathyscaphe also has been equipped to study cosmic rays. Piccard has been studying cosmic rays for a long time. It was one of the main reasons for his trip into the stratosphere.

All Risks Considered

PICCARD AND COSYNS are not taking any chances. They studied the technical problems of their expedition for two years. They subjected scale models of their cabin to tremendous pressure. They have taken X-ray photographs of every inch of their steel sphere, and Piccard said: "There are no risks left so far as a scientist thoroughly can check them."

Piccard, now 64, says he first dreamed of exploring the ocean deeps 40 years ago. He studied the theoretical aspects of the problem and used some of the information thus acquired to build the cabin of his stratosphere balloon.

"The problem is the same," he explained. "In a stratospheric cabin the pressure comes from inside; in a deep diving cabin the pressure, much greater of course, comes from the outside."

A thin man with a small, white-thatched head, wearing a baggy black coat with an old-fashioned stiff collar and string tie, Professor Piccard typifies so well the popular conception of a scientist that one of Belgium's comic strip artists has used a Piccard-like character as the dreamy hero of his daily cartoon.

But Piccard is anything but a dreamer. Friends and students say he can hold his own with anyone in a business discussion, although he may take out a slide rule to make the simplest calculation. Wearing double glasses of his own design, he lifts the front pair when he reads or eats.

Actually a Swiss

PICCARD came to Brussels from his birthplace of Zurich many years ago and is still a Swiss citizen, although he has been professor of physics at Brussels University for so long (38 years) that most people think he is a Belgian. In recent years he has devoted more and more time to his own research and experiments.

With his French school teacher wife, Piccard lives in a three-story house 10 minutes' walk from the university. They have five children, a son and four daughters, ranging in age between 17 and 27. All are students.

The professor has a twin brother, Jean, who lives in Minneapolis and who also has made trips to the stratosphere.

Ocean Barges A New Spur to Alaska Trade

By Daniel J. Marston
Associated Press Staff Writer

SEATTLE, Sept. 18.—Great covered barges ply the north Pacific these days like marine monsters caught on a strong fishline.

Lumbering vessels, converted from wartime Navy Yard freighters 260 feet long, ride to and from Alaska on the end of long tow cables.

The barging is a war-born innovation for common carrier freight service which has brought new competition into the Alaska trade. One Anchorage bakery reduced bread 5 cents a loaf in May because of "barging economies."

Through the twisting "inside passage" up by Vancouver Island, the barges wallow along like obedient dogs on a leash. "Outside," in Gulf of Alaska waters or stormy weather, they plunge like harpooned whales, a third of a mile astern the tugs.

In mid-August, the Portugbar and Capt. Chester F. (Chet) Thurness made the Alaska Freight Express Co.'s fifteenth trip north with steel barge 730 under tow. The service was started last December, partly as a test of winter conditions.

The 126-foot Diesel-powered tugs are the first such radar-equipped commercial vessels in Alaska waters. Radar is invaluable in the "inside passage" in such straits as Seymour Narrows.

That's where the tides run through as strong as 12 knots and where Ripple Rock, two sunken rocks near the surface in midchannel, threatens shipping. The barge tows are shortened here for easy handling.

The line, founded and headed by L. B. DeLong, Alaska businessman who headed Army construction in Alaska during the war, competes with the older steamship lines, which of course retain the tourist and passenger trade.

Seagoing Powerhouses

BARGING is new to Alaska because before the war this area's tugs generally were not ocean-going. Now the engines have trebled in capacity. The Alaska freight tugs are 1380-horsepower, which means lots of "shake" to the 14-man crews. Both tugs and barges are chartered from the contract firm of Ocean Tow.

T. A. (Tiny) Thronson, traffic manager, lists numerous advantages to shippers using barges. They boil down generally to cheaper rates, which were approved by the Maritime Commission over a protest.

Barging charges are based on weight only, instead of the old "weight or measure, whichever is greater," previously used in Alaska freighting.

Thronson cited, for an example of lower rates, a through rate on automobiles to Anchorage, 114 miles north of Seward, of $4.91 per 100 pounds. Another line which had been charging $7.41 announced a reduction to $6.41 last spring.

Such rates may stimulate more automobile traffic over the Alcan Highway, through Canada, in coming years, as motorists returning south are beginning to put cars on steamships and barges if they do not wish to drive back.

Beer in Berlin Has Crankcase Quality Today

By Richard K. O'Malley
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—Anyone who comes to Berlin expecting to find a cool mug of old-fashioned German beer is out of luck.

It just ain't here anymore.

Cabbage? There are heads and heads of it poking out of the fields.

Cucumbers? Yah, also; too many of them.

Apfelkuchen? It can be had.

But beer, and the gentlemen with bay windows who made it, seem to have parted company. It may have been the war, but old beer experts point out that some enthusiasm for the brew waned when Hitler scorned it. They say the Fuehrer drank a sort of weak imitation.

The people who helped teach the world the art of whiffing off a head of foam aren't doing well at it these days.

A man, wise in the ways of Berlin, said he knew where a heady draught of real old German brew could be had. The place was small, poorly lighted and a woman was behind the bar.

Beer? Yah!

She put a tall glass under a spigot and a stream of something almost amber trickled into it. She let it fill halfway, then waited five minutes for an evil foam to subside. Presently she set out the glass. It tasted like watered machine oil.

"Maybe it was a bad barrel," said the guide. "I know another place."

A young man with a waxed mustache stood importantly behind a bar.

Beer? Jawohl.

This time the beer flowed faster but looked worse. The cloudy stuff would have given an old German brewer a fit of the vapors. The glass was tall, the collar a tattletale gray. It tasted like unwatered machine oil.

"There's one more place near here . . ." the guide began hopefully. He had been downing the experiments with relish.

The beer was set out in small, opaque mugs. The beer couldn't be seen unless the drinker leaned over his glass like a man looking down a well. A beer fancier does not eye his beer like a biologist.

This last draught was something no brewer would have identified.

"I guess that's about all the places that have good beer," said the guide wistfully, "but it's not like it used to be."

The shades of thousands of German students must have sighed with him.

Britain Tightening Empire Defenses

By Arthur Gavshon
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Britain is tightening her air, land and sea defenses from her eastern Pacific outposts to the western approaches of the home islands.

She is doing so because her leaders regard the international situation as grave. Another reason is that policy makers believe a display of military preparedness might discourage possible aggression.

Cooperating with Britain in organizing the defenses of western Europe are her four Brussels treaty partners—France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. Actively backing their joint program is the United States.

Informants in touch with cabinet, Foreign and War Office opinion say government and military leaders have had to face the possibility Britain may be involved in a war with Russia over Germany.

These informants say the official view is that the chances of war are remote. But the country's rulers are taking every precaution in case they are proved wrong.

Breakdown of negotiations with Russia over Berlin almost certainly would transform Britain's peacetime economy to a full-scale rearmament program, in the view of many experts.

The government announced this week, at the opening of the special session of Parliament, that demobilization would be slowed by retaining conscripts an extra three months. Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison told the House of Commons that "we must accelerate the improvement of the equipment position, especially in the field of air defense, armor and infantry weapons."

U. S. Bombers in Test

IN THE meantime, air, land and sea exercises have been arranged to test the conntry's home and Commonwealth defenses. In one recent test, an imaginary continental power launched a full-scale air attack on London. All home RAF and Royal Auxiliary Air Force commands, as well as United States bomber squadrons based in Britain, took part in the biggest exercise since VE-Day. Army maneuvers took place simultaneously.

The home fleet will sail September 23 from Portland, led by the 35,000-ton battleship Duke of York. It will be "attacked" for three days by aircraft, submarines and motor torpedo boats as it heads for the Atlantic. Light fleet carriers, cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers will take part.

Many important naval operational units are now preparing for their autumn cruise to the West Indies and South Africa. Their programs will be curtailed or canceled as the international situation dictates, according to official sources.

One British official in touch with the War Office disclosed that a far more important exercise recently took place under strict secrecy in the London area. This was a joint paper exercise on the general subject of Arctic and Antarctic warfare conditions.

High United States military leaders took part. Britain's top army, air force and naval officers were involved, including, the source said, Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, chief of the Imperial General Staff. Observers from various dominion armies also attended.

Commitments Imperiled

THE SAME informant also reported that the general staff has informed the cabinet it will be impossible to carry out Britain's far-flung imperial commitments on the basis of the services' present manpower resources, let alone to meet any new emergency.

The crises in Germany and Malaya in particular have upset plans by making greater calls for reinforcements than were anticipated.

The British have also slated these moves in their tightening-up program:

They will double their Pacific fleet to a strength of two aircraft carriers, four cruisers, 12 destroyers and an undisclosed number of submarines.

In the biggest-yet Commonwealth conference next month, they will seek first to share common defense responsibility and, second, to secure specific Commonwealth military backing for the five-nation Brussels alliance.

They will intensify efforts to obtain a United States and Canadian pledge of military aid for the western European alliance in case of war.

They will announce their readiness to join in a plan for the internationalization of a big part of Antarctica by a number of anti-Communist nations in a bid to extend their sphere of strategic safety.

Disagree on Command

MEANWHILE, the military committee of the Brussels alliance—on which the United States and Canada are represented—has been concentrating on completing plans for the air defense of western Europe.

It has also been discussing proposals to create a unified western union military command, but differences have arisen between members in this regard, the sources disclosed. Neither Britain nor France is anxious to sacrifice its military independence to a wider alliance without insuring that it has an effective say in its direction, they said.

Britain has made formation of a unified five-nation general staff virtually conditional on the commander in chief being a Briton. France wants a Frenchman to hold the post.

Seeking a way out, the Benelux trio has suggested that an American be given the job.

If Britain gets her way on this issue, the sources said, Lord Montgomery almost certainly will be nominated. Montgomery has been visiting various British garrisons and defense installations in Austria, Trieste and Germany.

Canned Guns Will Save GI Much Grease

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 18 (AP).—Rifles—like rations—will come to American soldiers in cans.

Army spokesmen said use of steel in barrel-like containers eliminates the need for coating new or stored arms in the cosmoline grease of World War II. That material kept many a GI busy for hours as he sought to put his gun in operating condition.

In the future, GIs will get small arms the same way they get pork and beans—with a can opener. The opener is still in the experimental stage, but it apparently will look like a giant version of the familiar kitchen tool. Two circular cutting wheels will travel around the inside of the flange on the lid, exposing the stored pieces in seconds.

Army officials said the plastic envelope technique used to store cannon, airplanes and battleships would not do for small arms, since the latter must be able to stand rough treatment on trains and ships.

The Springfield (Mass.) Armory now is packing 3000 carbines and rifles a day in 300 barrels. To make them ready for instant use when the can is opened, the pieces are "cooked" in kilns which remove most of the moisture from the wooden stocks. Slings are dehydrated separately in another oven.

Carried on a conveyor, the rifles and carbines are bathed in a cleaning solvent of naphtha and in a rust-preventive. Packed in each can is enough of a dessicant (moisture absorber) called silica gel to drink up the moisture packed in the can with the rifles.

The can is welded closed and painted. Army officers say the two-hour process will insure perfect preservation of the weapons for at least 50 years.

Take the Show at Whyte's

When an Art Exhibit Relaxes

Carl Nyquist's "Canoes on the Potomac," which is among paintings by Washington artists now being shown at the Whyte Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

THE title of the new show at the Whyte Gallery, "Artists on Vacation," should not be taken too literally. Some artists don't take vacations. Others, engaged most of the year in pursuing a means of livelihood more prosaic and at the same time more lucrative, consider a vacation a fine opportunity to paint furiously and uninterruptedly.

The Whyte show is a small, informal summer report. Geographically, it ranges from the local and immediate to the remote, government-sponsored beauties of Jasper National Park. Plastically, it typifies both experience and promise.

Where the show lives up to the title is in the generally relaxed mood which prevails. If there is the slightest cosmic significance in these little paintings it is in restating the simple truth that nature is worth contemplating. Perhaps here more than in the more ambitious exhibits the consciously studied paintings lose by comparison with those where a little real feeling has crept in. Painting with theory is a sad substitute for painting with love.

Progress Report

OF the more established painters included, new work by Edward Rosenfeld and Herman Maril stands up well. Carl Nyquist's version of the much painted McSorley's bar in New York seems run of the mill in contrast with his somewhat impressionist composition of empty canoes clustered like shell-pods, more imaginative than most of the work by this firm realist.

As we see it, there is a progress report in the show. It comes from Jack Lewis, an erstwhile Corcoran student who is still in his early twenties. From the time he first exhibited, not so very long ago, Lewis' work has been worth watching. It has always shown sensitivity and a feeling for handling paint. His color used to be somber and there was a repetitive sameness about his use of it. This hurdle he seems now to be successfully overcoming. The still-life, "Summer Studio," is a conventional composition in the modern style with a nod in the direction of John Marin. But the fresh crisp colors and deft handling of the design and the paint surface make this little oil by Lewis a notable achievement.

Frank Alston, whose paintings are shown at the Barnet-Aden Gallery, is a realist. He paints with zest. At times his approach is so direct that his paintings seem to jump out of the canvas, as in "Christmas No. 3." He appears to be truly in his element when painting lowering skies or wind-swept trees. Occasionally in one of these paintings there is conveyed a sense of awe-struck wonder before the forces of nature. Then it is that merely competent painting is lifted out of the ordinary.

Although the exhibit includes work shown earlier this year at the Arts Club, there are some new paintings in Charles Shinn's one-man show at the District Public Library. Shinn, a resident of the District for many years, works in visual arts for the Government during the day, paints on his own in his few "leisure" hours. The present show includes a self-portrait in gouache, and three landscapes in oil.

The painting, as in Shinn's other show, appears facile and extremely able, without penetrating to any degree below the surface of things.

Tom Jones Tees Off '10 Greatest Novels'

THE HISTORY OF TOM JONES: A Foundling. Edited by W. Somerset Maugham. Illustrated by Harry Diamond. Winston. 374 pp. $3.50.

IN THE two centuries since Henry Fielding published "Tom Jones," the author and his greatest work have been the subject of violent controversy.

Fielding has been called: (1) A vulgar and lecherous fellow; a spendthrift; a godless man. (2) A loving and probably faithful husband who hated vice, hypocrisy and crime; a great magistrate and the era's finest moralist. (3) The father of the English novel, whose private life is nobody's business.

"Tom Jones," his best novel, has been called: (1) "A vicious book . . . I scarcely know a more corrupt work."—Dr. Johnson; "Dirty, dull and false"—Robert Louis Stevenson. (2) The work of a good-hearted moralist who sought to vitiate the evils of his age through sarcasm, irony and laughter. (3) The masterpiece of a vital and accomplished story-teller and plotsmith whose attitude toward morality is beside the point.

W. Somerset Maugham, a great admirer of Fielding, is irritated with critics who dwell on the morality of either Fielding or his novels.

He might have quoted Coleridge, who thought the plot of "Tom Jones" one of the three most perfect ever planned, or Graham Greene, who compared Fielding's "flashbacks" to the best of Conrad and his use of parody to the best in James Joyce's "Ulysses."

Curiously enough, Maugham feels that the coincidences (which occur before kind-hearted, sensuous young Jones overcomes the villainy of his half-brother Blifil to secure the heart and hand of his virtuous, beautiful and spirited Sophia) are rather severe flaws in the plot.

Happenstance, however, is less noticeable than sound architecture upon second reading of this classic. And Fielding was far ahead of his predecessors in the picaresque novel in tying up all the loose ends of his story.

Maugham finds Squire Allworthy (who took in the foundling Jones) to be a little too good; Blifil, the sneaky half-brother of Jones, to be a little too evil, and some of the other characters to be a trifle caricatured.

Actually, even the most caricatured protagonists in this story have rich nuances of personality. Sophia, for all her innocence, is no fool. Her blasphemous, violent and ignorant father, Squire Western, is also pitiful. Jones is a richly complex mixture of casual lechery, pure-hearted affection and gratitude, hot-blooded temper and high-minded love for Sophia. Some of the minor characters like the gamekeeper are captured brilliantly in a flash of penetrating insight.

No one will ever forget the inns, theaters and drawing rooms of London, nor the country houses and roadside taverns in 1745 as pictured by Fielding. The clarity and classic objectivity with which this author analyzed his era and his region makes this novel deathless.

Maugham, who has trimmed passages from this book for the sake of pleasant reading, should probably not have deleted the scene in which Jones takes Partridge to see "Hamlet." Although this incident adds nothing to the main line of the story, it is a favorite bit of satire which lovers of "Tom Jones" will miss.

But in general it must be said of this edition that it reflects good taste in typography, illustrations and editing, teeing off a series which should attract hundreds of thousands of new readers to what Maugham calls "The Ten Greatest Novels of the World."—S. N.

Psychological Warfare in Sports

Sew a Holster Onto Your Golf Bag

THE THEORY AND PRACTICE OF GAMESMANSHIP. By Stephen Potter. Henry Holt & Co. 121 pp. $2.50.

THE subtitle of this pleasing little book is "The Art of Winning Games Without Actually Cheating." The book not only is good for many a laugh—it actually can help you to down your opponent at sports simply by working on and aggravating his spirit.

As the publisher puts it, "Gamesmanship is as old as the competitive spirit in man. It is polite psychological warfare. It is the moral equivalent of assault and battery."

Stephen Potter, who is director of special features for the British Broadcasting Corp., is at great pains to explain in solemn British fashion myriad other terms stemming from gamesmanship: Clothesmanship (if opponent dresses elegantly, wear your shaggiest outfit, as if you don't really give a hoot); carmanship (telling opponent, who has picked you up, that he is really driving rather too fast—this after you have delayed him some moments looking for your racquet, clubs, shoes or whatever); nice chapmanship (convincing your young, gentlemanly opponent that "it would be rather a rotten trick to beat old G. by too much." This leads to the "letting up" which is his undoing); and "limpmanship," or "crocked ankle play." (This, of course, involves gaining an advantage by capitalizing on some injury, or, and more important, countering a similar maneuver, or gambit, as employed by your opponent.")

Potter has dotted his book with grave footnotes, like "Sub-plays, or individual maneuvers of a gambit, are usually referred to as 'ploys.' It is not known why this is;" and "Names impress according to the square of their initials." He also introduces from time to time efficient-looking charts, such as the one labeled, "Graph showing the relationship between Mean Bird Gamesmanship and Mean Game Birdsmanship."

On playing for money, Potter counsels that to your opponent's suggestion to play for the "usual half-crown" you return a hearty, "Come, let's play for the fun of the game." He offers, if opponent expresses a wish not to play for money, this counter:

Opp.: Half a crown on it? No, I'm not particularly anxious to play for money. What is the point? If one starts worrying about the pennies . . .

You: Exactly. If money is important to you, much better not.

Opp.: But I meant—

You (Friendly): Of course.

There are delights in this book much too numerous to catalogue here. Potter describes in detail "Simpson's Statue: You stand in the wrong place, i.e., in opponent's line of sight, etc. Then, when opponent has scolded mildly about it, you assume Simpson's Statue on every subsequent shot. That is, you leap, at almost the last moment, into the proper position and stand rigid, head bowed.

After making your contract at bridge, you confide in a low, but audible, voice to one of your opponents that "your heart lead suited me rather well. I think . . . perhaps . . . if you'd led . . . well, almost anything else" . . . This, of course, is your opening "ploy" in the gambit of splitting your opponents. At chess, after one of opponent's moves, possibly you murmur, "Your castle won't like that in six moves' time."

Whatever your game, there's a laugh and a ploy for it in this engaging volume.

Artists Lose a Witty Friend Through Death of Mrs. Force

THE recent death of Juliana Force, director of the Whitney Museum of American Art since its founding, has deprived American artists of one of their staunchest friends. Possessed of a keen intelligence and a ready wit, Mrs. Force enlivened many a meeting of art officials with humor while she drove home the points she wished to emphasize. She had the practical good sense to realize that the best way to "help" the artist was to buy his work. Through her position as head of one of the few institutions in this country dedicated specifically to American art, she was able to practice what she preached, building up the Whitney's collections year after year.

Hermon More, curator of the Whitney, has announced that the museum, which reopened to the public this week, will first show selections from the permanent collection. The 1948 Annual of Contemporary American Painting will follow, opening November 13.

The American University exhibition now on view at the Pan-American Union has been requested for display at the Edna Coll Academy of Arts in Santurce, Puerto Rico; the Lyceum Club in Havana, Cuba; the Academy of Fine Arts, Guatemala City, Guatemala, and by a group of progressive artists in Caracas, Venezuela. Some of the paintings were recently shown on a television broadcast. Galloway's "Child's Holiday" has been purchased by Romulo Betancourt, former president of Venezuela, and Calfee's "Birds" by Raul Nass.

An exhibition by faculty members of the Washington Workshop, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw., opens to the public next Sunday afternoon, and will continue through October 8. Exhibitors will include Jacob Kainen, Jack Perlmutter, Alice Acheson, Benjamin Abramowitz, Laura Douglas, Jane Love, Ernest Lothar, Lilli Gettinger, Maxin Elias. Registration for classes in the fall semester beginning September 30 starts Monday.

An exhibit of paintings by residents of northern Virginia, dedicated to the Safety Education Fund of Arlington, Alexandria and Fairfax Counties, is being held in Shirlington through September 25. Stores in the Virginia community shopping center have donated space for the display of oils, pastels, watercolors, ceramics, metalwork and textiles.

Farm Bureau Saga Brought Up to Minute

THE FARM BUREAU THROUGH THREE DECADES, by Orville Merton Kile. The Waverly Press, $3.50.

WITH farm policies of both parties coming up for review by their leaders this weekend, the history of the Farm Bureau proves of timely interest.

The author tells in detail of the fights over farm legislation and the growth of farm organizations in the last 30 years. He recalls many almost-forgotten incidents in the long fight by organized agriculture during the 1920s for an equal share in the Nation's prosperity. He tells of the Wallace regime in the Agriculture Department, and the drastic steps in the early days of the New Deal to meet the problems that beset the farmer.

The book is up to date. It records the last-minute maneuvering that finally brought about passage of the "compromise" farm-price-support measure at 4 a. m. in the closing hours of Congress last June. That day-and-night-long fight, in the conference committee, breaking up time after time only to be renewed again, saved at the last minute the price-support program.

It is an interesting book of research, although definitely slanted from the angle of the Farm Bureau. It should be invaluable to younger Farm Bureau leaders and others who deal with farm legislation in that it relates and relates well all that has gone before, and the bases upon which present farm policies are built. It is of especial interest at this time, when the issue of a permanent program for agriculture is receiving more widespread attention, perhaps, than at any other time.

It is the second book by Kile on the Farm Bureau. The first, "The Farm Bureau Movement," was written in 1921, when the author was Washington representative of the bureau.

It brings the history of the greatest of all farm organizations down to date and closes with a sketch of its new head, Allan B. Kline of Iowa, and an outline of the problems the bureau faces at this time of it greatest membership strength, as well as of its greatest importance in the Nation's affairs.

By Katharine Graham

HARVARD COLLEGE started a course three years ago on how to cope with the problems of human relations. It is written up by Howard Whitman for Collier's in "How to Keep Out of Trouble." Unfortunately, the course can't be completed in Collier's, but Whitman succeeds in giving an idea of the scope and importance of the work. It doesn't pretend to be a panacea for human ills or a short-cut to happiness so-called, but an indication of how to apply the principles of refined common sense to living.

Here are some capsules of wisdom that have come out of the first three years of experiment.

Beware of logic. Emotions are not logical and can almost never be changed by reasoned argument.

Steer clear of pat answers and snap judgments.

Watch for the "equilibrium" in situations. By rectifying one aspect of a given problem, you may be doing harm to another and more important one.

Many others are cited by Whitman with specific examples. But, in addition to warnings, the course gives a prescription for dealing with troubles that may come your way.

First, a clinical diagnosis is in order, say the professors. The situation must be sized up as it is, without moral judgments. The second step is action. In other words, when trouble comes don't say to yourself, "What shall I do?", but rather, "What is the problem, what are the facts?"

And keep your mind elastic. The Harvard powers that be did just that, and that was how the course was created, says Whitman.

* * * *

TROUBLE seems to be Whitman's specialty this week. In the Woman's Home Companion he turns his attention to "Where Do You Take Your Troubles?" That must be if, after reading Collier's, you still have them.

Actually it is a good story of the Prince Georges County (Md.) Mental Health Clinic, a sample set up by Congress in a typical rural community for the rest of the country to follow. Inaugurated in January, "it is staffed by the United States Public Health Service, financed by the Congress and aided by an advisory board of the county's leading organizations," reports Whitman.

He describes the kind of illnesses treated, how the clinic operates, the amount of good it accomplishes at what cost and at what savings to the community in paying for serious mental illnesses and in restoring citizens to greater usefulness.

"Give young doctors a break," pleads J. D. Ratcliffe, also in the Companion. While lawyers and filling station operators might like to keep down prospective competition, they cannot do so effectively. Physicians can and very often do do it by denying hospital staff appointments to younger and more promising men in their town, says Ratcliffe.

Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr., writes the story of the Democratic Party to follow the one last month on the GOP. He concludes with a defense of the two-party system as it operates today, rather than as some critics would like to see it realigned along liberal-conservative lines.

"BIG SHOTS Have Money Troubles, Too," in the Saturday Evening Post, is a story of our own Riggs National Bank. Light is shed on the private lives of many famous Americans by letters, checks and bank records, according to Authors Charles O. Gridley and Hugh Morrow. The story behind that story, incidentally, is told on page 6, Section II, of The Washington Post today.

* * * *

AS its election year contribution, Look runs the first of six picture stories on "The Presidency," adopted from a forthcoming book by Stefan Lorant. This installment traces the presidency from its conception in the constitutional convention through the inauguration and subsequent death of Harrison and the advent of John Tyler, first Vice President to become President without an election. It is admirably illustrated with cartoons, old drawings and paintings.

As part of its highly successful campaign for greater appeal to women, Look runs a cover story on Jinx Falkenburg, in private life, of which she must have very little, Mrs. Tex McCrary, "How to Have a Baby and Stay Attractive." Mrs. McCrary, who had a son in August, is shown in every month from February right through July, ice skating, skiing, marching in the Easter Parade with Jimmy Stewart, broadcasting, playing tennis and creating her own beautiful maternity wardrobe.

While this story is bound to have appeal to the minority of lucky women who also look attractive under similar circumstances, it only succeeds in arousing the green monster in the majority of those who don't. The author of this column, weary of such stories, would be delighted to contribute one (unillustrated) to some magazine designed to appeal to those kindred souls who look terrible and can do nothing about it.

* * * *

LIFE'S editors have resumed the pursuit of happiness, inaugurated a few weeks ago, by having Aldous Huxley bring his "Brave New World" up to date. Like Jules Verne, who in his scientific novels made what he thought were fanciful predictions that have since become commonplace, Huxley's picture of life in the twenty-sixth century has been almost realized today, both the mechanical inventions and the totalitarian state.

Technological advances do not in themselves constitute progress, says Huxley. But if we can find out what the good life consists of, they can be used to achieve it, a not entirely novel idea to be sure. But Life is so full of a number of things . . .

Another Great Indictment of War

By Sterling North

THE CRUSADERS: A Novel of Only Yesterday. By Stefan Heym. Little, Brown. 642 pp. $3.50.

AFTER the First World War it took the trembling and shaken world several years to compose its opinions and formulate a pattern for its disillusionment. The path of glory had run into a cul de sac, and centuries of romanticism had been assassinated in the mud of Flanders.

STEFAN HEYM

Then Dos Passos and Henri Barbusse and Remarque and other novelists began their full-throated roar of protest. By the mid-twenties war had been made to seem not so much jousting on the Cloth of Gold as pig-sticking in a filthy abattoir.

This time the "realists" have more quickly turned the chaos of conflict into the well-ordered substance of impassioned art. Unlike the soldiers of Warld War I, they went into the battle with few illusions. They waved few flags, sang few patriotic songs and did their dirty jobs with few heroics.

There is, therefore, something less of outraged innocence in the great war novels which are now beginning to appear. But there is no less fury at the senseless mass murder; no less bitterness at the corruption among officers and politicians and steelmakers; no less agony in the hearts of those sent in to die.

The year 1948 may well be remembered as the year in which America read three tremendous documents against war: (1) "The Naked and Dead," by Norman Mailer; (2) "The Crusaders," by Stefan Heym, and (3) "Stalingrad," by Theodor Plievier (coming in October but already a one million-copy bestseller in its native German).

Stefan Heym has come a long way since he wrote "The Hostages." He has mastered the American idiom. He has come to know Americans from privates to generals as few native-born Americans know them. And he has mastered the technique of the novel.

This vast chronicle, moving with the massive assurance of an armored division, carries the reader from St. Lo and the fall of Paris to Metz and Verdun and the Ardennes, the Battle of the Bulge, the crossing of the Rhine and through to final victory.

In so doing, it follows the lives and fortunes of a complete cross-section of the American Army, from swaggering General Farrish (noted for his hospital incidents and his riding crop) down to GIs broken by battle fatigue.

Between these extremes in rank lie the essentially descent but weary and frustrated Colonel De Witt; Major Willoughby, playing for big stakes with a French-German steel cartel; Captain Philipsohn, a psychiatrist; Captain Loomis, who does not hesitate at rape; Mess Sergeant Dondolo, deep in the black market; unimaginative but honest Corporal Abramovici, and assorted French and German characters ranging from heroic guerilla fighters to German spies and unreconstructed top Nazis.

The most important character in the book, the one with whom the author identifies himself and whom the reader most admires, is Lieut. David Yates of a Propaganda Intelligence Unit—one of the few protagonists in the drama who has any semblance of a crusader or any idea of what the war is all about.

Yates' conflicting emotions, his love for his wife at home and a young French girl nearer at hand, his almost personal feud with a skulking Nazi (villainous in the extreme), his attempts to sell democracy to the Germans and liberalism and morale to the American troops, makes the strongest theme in this cacophony.

The slow pace and vast scope of this novel may discourage light-minded readers. But the story gains momentum as it progresses, reaching a terrific peak of power and passion at its climax.

Keep your first edition. It is a book to give your great-grandchildren when they ask, "What was it like in World War II?"

EVERYMAN LOOKS FORWARD. By Lancelot Law Whyte. Holt. 78 pp. $2.

MAYBE we won't commit planetary suicide with an atomic war. Maybe science converging on the nature of man will help us to banish fear and thus banish aggression.

Possibly the American, the Russian and the European systems can slowly evolve and merge in an acceptable world system.

Perhaps without war and without any violent break in regional traditions, the entire planet can gradually approach a universal consensus.

That, at least, is the startling optimistic view of Lancelot Law Whyte, a scientist who can scarcely be accused of wearing rose-colored glasses in his analytical studies of Homo sapiens.

Whyte admits that the immediate future looks dark. The danger of a head-on collision between the United States and Russia is real and terrifying.

But granted a breathing spell (and world-wide attempts to eliminate the reasons for fear and want), the world may well discover its interdependence, its similar needs and even its similar ideals.

Whyte believes that all fear corrupts and permanent fear corrupts absolutely. He feels that man is not basically evil, sadistic or violent, but that fear brings out the worst in every man.

Almost no living human being wants war. But man feels trapped. He assigns his frustration to ideological opponents. He snaps and growls at the tribal enemy. He joins in a crusade to wipe out the imagined foe. And yet, all he has to fear "is fear itself."

Whyte feels that not until mankind accepts certain principles, certain joint aims, certain universal ends, can he begin to shake off fear and thus eliminate the danger of mass destruction.

Where can we seek those ends? In the core of all the great religions. In Science. In Humanism. Even in some aspects of Marxism. Balance, variety, equality and consensus of conviction are aspects of the new and universal faith. The individual must be given some chance for self-expression. But the community must help to plan against fear and want.

If there is any major flaw in the Whyte argument, it springs from his tacit acceptance of the dialectical approach to history. The crude Hegelian-Marxian triangulation of "thesis, antithesis and synthesis" seems to blind even a scientist of Whyte's caliber from clear thinking in the realm of social forces.

Whyte never calls Russia "Thesis" and America "Antithesis." Nor does he label a future peaceful world "Synthesis." But the subconscious logic behind his argument is this ironical application of the Marxian approach to the supra-Marxian problem of altering communism so it can live at peace with the democracies.

Obviously such perfect balancing of forces can only happen in the dream world of dialectical philosophers.

But a ray of hope is welcome from any source these days. And Whyte has written a profound little essay which may in itself affect the course of history.

NOBODY'S FOOL. By Charles Yale Harrison. Holt. 300 pp. $3.

EVERY year we pick Miss America and Mrs. America and Miss Pin Up Girl and Miss Tootsie Wootsie Snackle Crackles. But so far I know we have never before picked America's Common Man.

This probably means that the Public Relations Boys (in their London tailored suits and shoes you bone rather than polish) aren't quite as smart as they seem to be behind their 12-foot modernistic desks in their leather upholstered offices at 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

C. Y. HARRISON

Charles Yale Harrison, who is so bitter that he makes Red Lewis sound like Louisa May Alcott, has written himself a very superior version of "The Hucksters" dealing with the press agents (who don't like to be called press agents) who can make any millionaire look like a philanthropist by teaching him how to give away dimes.

They are the snide, weasel-minded, smart, sharp, conscienceless lads who, if necessary, could make the Arabs seem public benefactors of the Jews or could make a chiseling steel firm which rooked the Government out of millions seem to be the liberal lover of labor, blind widows and infantile paralysis victims.

For a quarter of a million, cash on the line, Jefferson Clarke and Associates agree to make the Marshall Committee (investigating wartime graft) love Iroquois Metals, whose war record (despite large "E's") compared favorably with that of Axis Sally and Tokyo Rose.

The story is told from the viewpoint of Jack Sherrod, who isn't averse to the 3-inch steaks, champagne and $100 a night strip teasers who seem to be part of the pay of any good "Public Relations" counsel.

Sherrod came up the hard way—copy boy, cub reporter, Greenwich Village (and Dianna) and finally the benzedrine-barbiturate circuit where you earn $2000 a week (but earn it) pulling clients out of various cesspools of public indignation.

Jeff Clarke, senior partner of Sherrod's firm, whose streamlined train is derailed in Jackson City, Mo., finds Alan Barbour, America's Common Man.

Barbour fits all 250 pages of Clarke and Associates' elaborate survey, which tells just what the average American male is like—(10,000 copies on antique paper bound in morocco, costing $5 a throw and distributed free to all clients and prospective clients).

But Alan Barbour is nobody's fool. He lives up to what Thomas Jefferson and Tom Paine and Walt Whitman suspected all along. He is, in fact, more than a match for the public relations racketeers who bring him on to New York.

This is a tough, sizzling vituperative, caustic, fast-moving, ugly and compelling expose of big-time public relations by a man who has been around and knows his press agents. It is also a tender, humane, perceptive, hopeful defense of the average Joe who is trying to pay off his morigage, make up for the years lost in World War II, and see his way through the frightening decade just ahead. It is satire at its best.

Fortunately for America, there are many more Alan Barbours than Jeff Clarkes. And if the moral of this tale means anything at all, it means that in the end the Alan Barbours will win and the Jeff Clarkes won't. Swift, Fielding and Thackeray would recognize Charles Yale Harrison as one of their boys.

Gandhi Autobiography A Colorless Narrative

GANDHI'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY, The Story of My Experiments With Truth. M. K. Gandhi. Public Affairs Press, Washington. 640 pp. $5.

WHEN the sainted Gandhi died some months ago, his assassination focused attention again on the tremendous moral force contained in the frail little body.

Informative and useful as is this translation of his autobiography up to 1941, the secret of Gandhi's moral force is nowhere disclosed in it. Written in brief chapters designed for weekly publication, the book is a pedestrian sketch of the facts of his life with certain moral observations that barely escape being platitudinous.

Gandhi's parents, according to his sketch, were people of considerable strength of character, and one of the threads that is apparent in his story is the lasting influence they exercised in the development of his character.

Of the influence of his wife—they were married as children—Gandhi's story reveals little, probably because she was pretty well possessed and dominated. He must have been an uncommonly hard man to live with, however, with his exacting moral ideals and high sense of duty; perhaps one whom only a woman bred in a tradition of patience and submission could have endured.

Gandhi's preoccupation with spiritual problems in very early youth would appear to be much like those of others of his age, and his promotion of vegetarianism while a law student in England would seem like the acts of similar high-minded young men. It is only when this devotion to the spiritual, with its vegetarianism and other facets, is considered in the light of his mature life, that it assumes any special significance.

When most men in middle life would be tempering their idealism, Gandhi was going on to the extreme of continence.

This spiritual drive, with its self-sacrifice, naturally inclined him to sympathy with the underdog, and since he was of a quietly forceful character it readily led him into politics instead of contemplation under the Bo Tree. The fact that he had no aptitude for being a lawyer aided this transition, and South Africa became the preparatory school for his later work in India.

Gandhi said of his book that it was not his purpose to attempt a real autobiography, but to tell of his experiments with truth. That these experiments must have involved soul searching struggles is obvious, but in this flat, colorless narrative, translated from the Gujarati by Mahadev Desai, there is no feeling of struggle, or any emotion. The result is a book that is informative, but certainly not pleasurable reading.

Modern Light Is Thrown on Joshua

JOSHUA, a Biography, by Rogers MacVeagh and Thomas B. Costain. Doubleday, $3.

THIS is a book based upon scholarly research in which the light of modern knowledge is thrown upon the Bible story of a man, a system of justice and the Promised Land.

Joshua, walking in the steps of Moses, was perhaps, after that great and almost legendary figure, the key personality in the early history of Israel. Trained personally by Moses, he became a great warrior, administrator and statesman. To him belongs this story of a great human achievement—the conquest of Canaan, which opened up the Promised Land to the Jews and brought to the hard-bitten descendants of the Exodus a measure of peace and prosperity.

This volume does not dispute the biblical record of the life and work of Joshua, or the history of the Israelites. Rather, an exacting scholarship is employed to determine exactly what the Bible does say. By careful reference to other documents, such as ancient folksongs and poems, drawn on by the biblical writers, as well as archeological research, the book reveals meanings which lay hidden for centuries.

MacVeagh and Costain handle the Scriptures with deep respect and reverence and say:

"Out of our study has come no atheistic or irreverent aspersions upon Divine power, but a perfectly credible and logical story of an entirely human and credible performance." — DAVID TAYLOR MARKE.

What happened when Roosevelt replaced the "nine old men"?

The new Supreme Court justices would be "yes-men," the conservatives predicted, nothing but a rubber stamp for the New Deal. Yet the Roosevelt Court turned out to be the most ununanimous in American history. They have issued dissenting opinions on a mass-production basis, at a rate to make lawyers, as well as laymen, dizzy.

In THE ROOSEVELT COURT, Professor Pritchett of the University of Chicago analyzes thoroughly for the first time just what the Supreme Court has been up to in the decade since 1937. He describes its decisions in such important fields as labor, federal regulation of business, taxation, civil liberties—and shows how the various justices have disagreed on these issues, and what attitudes and beliefs have caused their disagreement. He traces the personal and political influences which have determined the Court's policies and doctrines.

THE ROOSEVELT COURT is a book for everyone interested in the New Deal, pro or con, and for everyone looking for enlightenment on the functioning of our constitutional democracy.

I Can Make You a MASTER OF ENGLISH give me only 15 minutes a day

THE mastery of English is one of the greatest assets in the business world. It gives you a tremendous advantage over others who lack it.

Words are most valuable tools. To those who know how to use them skillfully go rich rewards—money, power, position. For words are the foundation of all thought, all speech, and all writing. You think in words, and it is impossible to think in words you do not possess.

To broaden your thinking and strengthen the power of your mind you must first increase your vocabulary. A limited vocabulary usually means limited thought, limited power, and limited authority.

People judge your mental ability by your use of English. If your language is stiff and stilted, if your speech is slovenly, if you make obvious mistakes in grammar and pronunciation, you are under a serious handicap. If your speech is clear and precise, your expressions varied and interesting, you are recognized as a person of culture and ability.

The BIG JOBS usually go to men who are able to express themselves in fluent, convincing, clear-cut English. People have confidence in such men—but never in those who are always groping for words and whose thoughts are hazy and indistinct.

A PERSONAL PLAN FOR SUCCESS

As we all know, right now business and industry are working at top speed—planning new ways to step up production and increase efficiency, planning to meet the needs of the new and exciting age that is opening up. Are you planning, too? Are you, personally, going to be ready to take your place in the coming era? Are you going to be prepared for the limitless opportunities of a new, a hustling, and a vastly different business world?

LATER MAY BE TOO LATE

Right now is the time to prepare for success. Don't put it off. Whatever your present job, whatever your future prospects, one thing is certain, a command of English is all-important—it's a "MUST" in any practical success plan. Grenville Kleiser, originator of the famous course in Practical English and Mental Efficiency can help you—as he has helped thousands of others—obtain the goal you have set for yourself. This world authority will teach you how to use words with ease and confidence—if you will give him JUST 15 MINUTES OF YOUR SPARE TIME EACH DAY. # Church Anniversary Also a Milestone in Religious Liberty

By a Post Reporter

NEXT Sunday, September 26, will be the 150th anniversary of the dedication of one of America's most historic churches, the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola at St. Thomas Manor near Bel Alton, Md.

FR. STORCK

The celebration will mark more than the dedication of a church. It will also round out the third century of religious liberty in Maryland. For the history of St. Thomas Manor is closely linked with the history of that freedom of worship.

It was in southern Maryland that the Act of Toleration—sometimes referred to as the Act of 1649—was proclaimed. That was just 15 years after the first Lord Baltimore expedition landed at St. Clement's Island, now Blackistone Island, down the river from St. Thomas.

Three members of the expedition were Fathers Andrew White and John Altham and a lay brother, Thomas Gervase. This expedition had left the civil and religious turmoil of England to establish in the New World a province where there should be civil and religious liberty for all Christians.

A Resident Historian

ABOUT seven years ago the Rev. Herman I. Storck, S. J., became pastor of St. Ignatius Church, and took up residence in the impressively aged St. Thomas Manor House adjoining. He has made a study of its history.

Father Storck recently wrote an article about St. Thomas and the Act of Toleration for the magazine Jesuit Missions.

"In actual practice," he wrote, "the guarantee was not limited to Christians. Especially under the wise, generous and genial rule of Gov. Leonard Calvert, younger brother of Lord Baltimore, persons of different faiths lived together prosperously and amiably."

But toward the close of the seventeenth century the strife between King, Parliament and church in England—with the rise of the Puritans under Oliver Cromwell—was reflected on the American shores.

"Puritan, then Anglican Church, ascendancy disturbed the Marylanders," Father Storck wrote, "and in 1692 the union of state and Anglican Church in Maryland held down or abolished the chartered civic and religious rights of Catholics."

Catholics were forbidden to hold mass and administer sacraments. But the Jesuits held services in secret and braved court citations and fines for nearly a century.

Some 'Free' Periods

THERE were periods, however, when enforcement of the restrictive edicts was lax or even nonexistent. It was in those lulls that southern Maryland's Catholic churches were developed—and that St. Thomas was built.

The priests of St. Mary's City, St. Inigo's, Newtown and St. Thomas Manor worked together, counseled together and interchanged stations. They set up chapels in their residences.

But those were merely bright spots in a century that saw the eclipse of the religious liberty the first settlers had brought with them.

Then came the Revolutionary War. Young men from Maryland joined with their compatriots from the other 12 colonies against the tyranny of George III. Catholic and Protestant, they fought side by side against civil intolerance.

Three of Maryland's great men, John, Charles and Daniel Carroll, Catholics, aided the able James Wilson, the Scotch-born Presbyterian signer of both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, in his successful battle to include the Maryland-born idea of religious liberty in the Bill of Rights.

The Catholics of southern Maryland celebrated the rebirth of religious liberty under the First Amendment by erecting St. Ignatius' Church. As Sunday marks the 150th anniversary of the church, so did its construction mark the 150th anniversary of religious freedom as enunciated in the Act of Toleration.

Perhaps St. Ignatius is the oldest Catholic church in what were the original Thirteen Colonies. But the only claim Father Storck will permit in this regard he has worded himself:

"In the Thirteen Colonies, St. Ignatius' Church is the oldest extant Catholic church used as such by continuously resident pastors."

The services at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola next Sunday will start at 3 p. m., Washington time. How to get there:

The route from Washington is Route 5 to U. S. 301. Turn right on 301 to Route 427 at Bel Alton, a village about 8 miles south of La Platta. Route 427 leads directly to St. Thomas Manor.

THE physical history of St. Thomas Manor goes back to the three Jesuits of the Lord Baltimore expedition.

In the old country the church was state-maintained. But the Calverts, although Catholic, believed that religious liberty meant separation of church and state.

Baltimore offered the churchmen grants of land, as he did the other colonists. The amount was 500 or 1000 acres, depending on the individual's position. So as "adventurers"—a term the priests chose for themselves—they settled on an extensive tract near the juncture of the Port Tobacco and Potomac Rivers. Most of this land is still in church possession.

Waterways were the chief highways in those days, which accounts for this choice of a site in what is now an out-of-the-way location east of Bel Alton. One chapel was built near the water and the bathing beach there today is known as Chapel Point.

About 1662 a chapel was built on a hill overlooking the confluence of the two rivers—one of the most impressive views in the area. St. Thomas Manor House was built adjacent to this chapel in 1741. It is believed that its construction may have resulted from a royal edict permitting the observance of Catholic mass in chapels attached to residences.

The steeple of the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, near Bel Alton, Md.

In this 207-year-old structure, much history has been made. Within its walls in 1794, John Carroll was named the first Catholic bishop in America. It thus became the first American See. A few years later Carroll laid the cornerstone for St. Ignatius' Church alongside it.

25 Years' Suppression

ABOUT 1780, the Order of Jesus was ordered suppressed by the Pope. The Jesuits of Southern Maryland, however, remained at their posts as secular priests until, as Father Storck wrote:

"Maybe it was just their reward from God that within these very walls was first read and promulgated in our country in 1805, the document announcing the viva voce restoration of the Society of Jesus."

The parish at St. Thomas was established in 1641 as a mission by Father Andrew White of the Lord Baltimore expedition. The two ships of the expedition, the Ark and the Dove, are commemorated in one of the windows of St. Ignatius'.

The parish has had a resident priest since the first chapel on the hill was built in 1662. The chapel still stands.

The chapel at the foot of the hill was built about 1710 by Father William Hunter, the author of "Liberty and Property," a powerful work against the persecution of Catholics just after 1700.

Father George Hunter, pastor from 1747 to 1779, was a friend of George Washington. St. Ignatius' was built during the pastorate of Father Charles Sewell, who later built the first Catholic church in Baltimore.

Attended Mrs. Surratt

IN THE late days of the Civil War, Father Bernadine F. Wiget was pastor. He attended Mrs. Mary Eugenia Surratt during her trial and execution following the assassination of President Lincoln.

Father Storck, a native of Baltimore and a graduate of Loyola College there, entered his novitiate at Frederick, Md., 50 years ago, and was ordained a priest in the Society of Jesus in 1912.

He was professor of chemistry at Fordham and Georgetown Universities before he entered laymen's retreat work in 1923. He was director of the Loyola House of Retreat at Morristown, N. J., from 1927 to 1940.

St. Thomas Manor House, at left, was built in 1741. The chapel between it and the rear of the church, at right, was built about 1662.

The old priests' burying ground of St. Thomas Manor is on a hilltop commanding a magnificent view of the river and the countryside. Many of the simple headstones have stood there more than a century. The one nearest is dated 1805

An 'Ad' Idea Strikes a Lode of National History

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

IT ALL began so innocently.

Roland T. Carr and Hulbert T. Bisselle, Riggs National Bank officers, were trying to get a new slant for an advertising folder one day late in 1945. They came up with the seed of an idea. Why not use a historic theme? Something along the line of "footnotes to history?"

Carr started digging. In dusty ledgers dating back a century and more, he found a wealth of material. Fifteen of the 23 Presidents of the Nation since 1840, he learned, had had accounts with Riggs. Other famous personages had been depositors. Here, in faded ink, were their records, correspondence and idiosyncrasies.

Only one advertisement? Shades of Abe Lincoln!

The idea mushroomed into a series of 18 advertisements. Published in Washington newspapers, they attracted national attention.

One ad contained a copy of a Lincoln check with the simple inscription, "Pay to Colored Man With One Leg . . ." This bids fair to become a classic in the advertising profession.

The ads were too widely read to need repetition here. It's the story behind them that we're interested in.

They Struck a Gusher

WHILE the ads were appearing monthly, Riggs' officers found they had stirred up a hornets' nest. So Riggs was interested in historic documents! Antiquarians throughout the East started searching their collections.

What they uncovered defies description. They offered bales of ancient paper bearing on the bank's relationship with illustrious persons and historic events.

On Assistant Vice President Carr fell the task of sifting out the few scraps of real importance to the bank. The job is a never-ending one. Although the series of ads ended early this year, he is still delving through piles of paper. By now, he is also an avid antiquarian.

Much of his spare time is devoted to arranging relics of Riggs' early history in chronological order. Carr has completed seven volumes and is still going strong.

The "footnotes to history" ads were a joint inspiration of Senior Vice President Hulbert T. Bisselle (left) and Assistant Vice President Roland T. Carr, but Carr has been the archivist of the mass of material that resulted.

The material dates back to April, 1834. First document is a handwritten prospectus of the proposed bank of the District of Columbia. When this project fell through, a young man named William W. Corcoran rented a 10 by 16 foot store on the north side of Pennsylvania ave. near 15th st. and opened an exchange and brokerage house. His father, Thomas Corcoran, had been Mayor of Georgetown.

In 1839 young Corcoran moved to the northeast corner of 15th and F sts. This building, still standing and now housing a cigar store, was once a tavern. It was there that the British generals supped while they watched the burning of the White House in the War of 1812.

Sailing Close to the Wind

ABOUT a year later, Corcoran went into partnership with George Washington Riggs, jr., scion of a prominent Eastern banking family. Thus began the firm of Corcoran & Riggs. It soon attracted the deposits of many notables, including President Tyler, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and Francis Scott Key.

Tyler apparently had financial troubles. On February 4, 1843, he wrote to the bank:

"Gentlemen: Above you have an order for my month's salary due this day. Will you do me the favor to redeem the note . . . amount, $1,195.48."

Webster also seemed to spend before he earned. In a letter dated June 30, 1843, he appealed to the bank:

"I have drawn on you today for $500 . . . In the meantime I should be glad if you would allow me to draw some little checks on you, not exceeding a thousand or 12 hundred dollars, the amount to be settled at that time . . ."

At the bottom of the letter is the bookkeeper's terse comment: "Bal. to his credit $364.77."

Francis Scott Key figured in what is probably one of the most delicate "duns" in history. An importer wrote to Key:

"Respected Friend: Annexed thou will please receive a printed text of my superior medicines . . . I also forward a copy of the invoice of mine sent to thee amounting to $24.50, for which thou can at thy leisure forward to me thy check payable in current funds. Thus thou will see I do not want specie . . ."

Communications Pioneer

IN 1845, Corcoran & Riggs bought the old home of the Second Bank of the United States at 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave., site of its present imposing structure.

About the same time the firm figured in two historic events.

It financed the first telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore. Originals of two of the earliest telegraph messages, both to Corcoran & Riggs, are in the collection.

The collection also contains a letter from John C. Fremont, explorer and soldier, asking for a $6000 draft on the bank. This was just prior to Fremont's expedition to Sutter's Fort in California, where he helped wrest the area from the Mexicans.

A sad footnote to history is uncovered next. Famous Dolly Madison, widow of the President, apparently was without funds in 1847. Learning of this, James Y. Mason, Secretary of the Navy under President Polk, inclosed a deposit to her credit with this cautionary note to Corcoran & Riggs:

"It is understood between us, and you need not advise her of the deposit, except by giving her credit, without specifying by whom made." For the sake of the record, Congress a year later appropriated $25,000 for her care and she died comfortably fixed a year later.

Another human touch is in a series of "Dear Father" letters. But first, more background.

In 1854, Corcoran retired and purchased the residence at 1611 H st. nw., which had been occupied by Daniel Webster. He enlarged it to provide a gallery for paintings which became the nucleus of the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Upon Corcoran's withdrawal, George W. Riggs formed a new partnership with his young half-brother, Elisha Riggs, jr. The new firm was known as Riggs & Co.

Needed a Pick-Me-Up

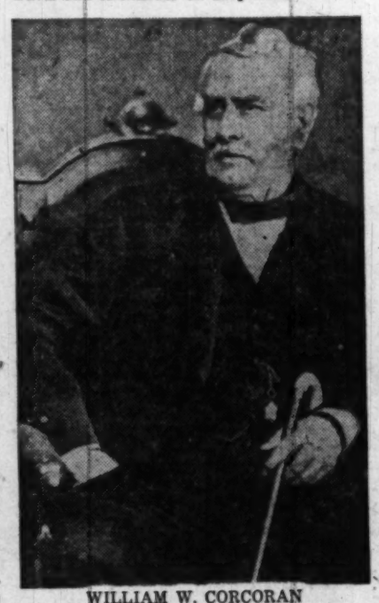
YOUNG Elisha's tribulations, as related in letters to his father in New York, bring sympathetic chuckles from today's bankers, who find that some working conditions haven't changed much in the past century. Here are a few excerpts:

"Your advice with regard to dining at 3 o'clock it is impossible to carry into effect. I have not been able to leave the office for the last week till after 6 o'clock p. m. . . . At present the work of the office if conducted properly is more than I can attend to. At every instant I am called off from what I am about, to sign a check or attend to a customer . . . If you could send me a box of claret or sherry it would be most acceptable. Am obliged at present to drink cold water, which, after a hard day's work, is rather tasteless. . . ."

Riggs & Co.'s books for the Civil War period show the closed accounts of many prominent Southerners, including Jefferson Davis and Alexander H. Stephens.



WILLIAM W. CORCORAN
. . . His first bank was 10x16

A significant letter of April 18, 1861, contains mobilization instructions from the Assistant Secretary of Treasury as follows:

"In case of an alarm at night the clerks and messengers of the Treasury Department will make the best of their way to the Treasury Building and Corcoran's Building (Riggs & Co.) and will report to Captain Shiras and Captain Franklin, who will see that they are supplied with arms and ammunition."

President Lincoln opened his Riggs account April 10, 1861, about a month after his inauguration. His initial deposit of $2083.33 was probably his first salary as President. His cash balance when he died, April 15, 1865, was $1373.53.

Handled 'Seward's Folly'

IN 1868, Riggs & Co. turned over $7,200,000 in gold to Baron von Stoeckl, the Russian envoy, and the purchase of Alaska was consummated.

First typewritten letter in the volume was written in 1881 by George Bancroft, who had established the Naval Academy while serving as Navy Secretary under President Polk. The letter requested Riggs to collect the coupons on some bonds.

In 1881 George Riggs died and Charles Carroll Glover became the dominant figure. In 1896, the firm became a national bank, with Glover as its first president.

Shortly before the turn of the century, ground was broken for the edifice at 1503 Pennsylvania ave., which, with many extensions and improvements, today houses the main office of Riggs National Bank. Glover continued as president until 1921, when he was succeeded by Milton E. Ailes. Ailes died in 1925. During Ailes' tenure, the first four of Riggs' branches were established.

Robert Vedder Fleming became president November 9, 1925, climaxing a meteoric rise begun as a messenger 18 years before. The bank's progress since 1925 is best attested by these figures:

Deposits of 36 million dollars in 1925 have skyrocketed to more than 300 million dollars, while capital funds have grown from $4,500,000 to $16,500,000. Riggs is now Washington's largest financial institution by a big margin and ranks fifty-fourth in deposits in the Nation.

We shall leave the recording of Riggs' history from 1900 to date for a later writer. Carr and Bisselle are still poring through mountains of records for the more significant events of World Wars I and II. A start has been made, however.

There is a personal note from General MacArthur, written February 23, 1942, from Corregidor, requesting Riggs Bank to safekeep a trunk of "valuable records and documents from my personal files." Another note written by MacArthur from Tokyo, November 3, 1945, requests the bank: "Please deliver to General Diller of my staff the foot locker from Corregidor you were so kind as to hold for me."

Stamp Collector's Discards

ASKED about unusual places where Riggs' documents have turned up, Carr told of one "gold mine."

A retired physician in Syracuse, N. Y., was injured in an auto accident. Fearing that death was near, the old doctor started putting his papers in order. He discovered a bundle of about 200 documents and letters which he had purchased many years before at a New York auction, intending to salvage the ancient postmarks and stamps. The papers had belonged to Elisha Riggs, father of George W. Riggs, partner in Corcoran & Riggs.

The doctor wrote to Riggs Bank, Carr hotfooted it to Syracuse and purchased the entire lot.

While the series of historical ads was still appearing, a fire broke out last New Year's Eve in a stable back of 219 Randolph pl. ne. Bales of old papers were tossed out, some splitting and scattering over the ground. Old Riggs' checks were among the litter.

Felix de Weldon, sculptor, tipped off Riggs about the canceled checks and Carr investigated. Not only did he find papers of interest to Riggs. Some of the documents dated back to the 1760s and included an original George Washington letter.

Library of Congress experts now have five truckloads of ancient papers to examine.

Emil Hurja, former publisher, was the source of a dozen valuable items, including a "new" Lincoln check payable to "Mr. Johns (a sick man)."

But mostly, Carr says, the material came from tedious digging through old ledgers stored in the basements of the main office and the old Farmers & Mechanics Bank of Georgetown, established in 1814 and taken over by Riggs as a branch in 1928.

The Riggs Library at Georgetown University was another good reference point, and Carr found several old portraits and got leads to other material in second-hand book stores.

This building at 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., home of the Second Bank of the United States until it went out of business in 1836, was occupied by the firm of Corcoran & Riggs from 1849 to 1896. Then it was razed and the present Riggs National Bank Building was erected. Many improvements have been made since

'D. C.' Is Durham Country

By Frances McStay Adams

WASHINGTON, D. C., England, Sept. 18.—No, George Washington didn't sleep here, but his far removed ancestors did.

People in Washington, D. C.—Durham County—England, point out to the visitor that theirs was the original city of Washington. They tell you that the first mention of Washington occurs in an Anglo-Saxon charter, dated 973 A. D., and that the name Washington is derived from Wassa or Wessa, an Anglo-Saxon family name, plus ing, the children of,—plus ton, a farm: Wessington, "the farm of the children of Wessa."

In succeeding centuries the name varied. In 1183 it was Wessyntona; 1197, Wessington; 1211, Wassington; 1280, Wassynton; 1311, Wasshington; 1340, Wessington, and 1507, Weshington.

The Wessingtons were lords of the manor in the feudal days, and parts of the manor house which they occupied from 1183 to 1376 are believed to have been incorporated in the Old Hall which still stands and which a committee of local residents hopes to restore as an international shrine honoring the family of Washington.

In the Durham Cathedral Library is a deed transferring title of the old manor house and bearing the Washington seal of "three stars and two stripes." The people of Durham County think it no coincidence that the American Flag incorporates the same pattern of stars and stripes.

"We realize that Sulgrave Manor, Northamptonshire, has the claim on George Washington's immediate ancestors," say members of Washington's local committee for the preservation of Old Hall, "but we have a relic of the first of the Washingtons to bear the name."

Washington is a mining town of some 20,000 population, located just outside Newcastle. Many of its schools proudly display the Stuart portrait of George Washington as well as the American Flag, both gifts of children in the public schools of Washington, D. C., USA.

During the war, when American soldiers were stationed at Newcastle, they visited the Old Hall and the schools. Some of them saw the yearly Fourth of July program directed by former Schoolmaster Frederick Hill and honoring the United States.

Hill tells the visitor that the ancient manor house of the Washington family was pulled down in 1613 and rebuilt by William James, Bishop of Durham, but that the present building contains some of the original walls.

People of Washington, Durham County, feel a kinship with people in the Capital City of the United States.

"And we are going to make this old building a tangible link between the people of America and the people of Britain," says Hill.

Pasquariello 1-Man Gang In Scoring 3 Touchdowns

By Leo H. Petersen

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (U.P.)—Ralph Pasquariello, a big, burly, hard-driving fullback, led an ambitious Villanova College football team to a 34 to 14 victory over the Texas Aggies today in an important early season intersectional game.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of 35,000, sitting in Franklin Field this hot, partly sunny September afternoon, saw the black-haired 225-pound pile-driver spark a come-from-behind attack that left the Southwest Conference eleven wondering what had hit it.

It was all Pasquariello. For one day at least—the opening day of the 1948 big time college football season—he was a composite picture of Doc Blanchard, Norman Standlee and Bronco Nagurski.

He combined the best of all of them as he led the Wildcats to victory in the first of a ten-game schedule designed to put Villanova in football's big time—and to beat Army next Saturday.

Notre Dame of East

And if the good-looking, black-haired Italian lad—6 feet 1 inch of football dynamite—continues to play like he did today, Villanova could well reach its goal—a sort of Notre Dame of the East.

It was an individual performance which long should rank with the best.

Here is the picture: with Villanova driving after receiving the opening kickoff, Ray Whittaker, a tall lean Texas A&M end, leaped into the air and intercepted a short forward pass which Andrew Gordon had intended for Pasquariello.

Neither Pasquariello nor any of his teammates had a chance as Whittaker set off down the sidelines for a touchdown. With Herbert Turley converting, it put Villanova in the hole, 7 to 0.

Some Key Blocks, Too

That looked pretty good because midway in the second period the Aggies were on the march again, but were halted when Turley's attempted field goal from the Villanova 10 was blocked.

Then Pasquariello—whose day's work added up to three touchdowns, 112 yards in 19 tries and any number of key blocks—went to work.

On the next play he went 28 yards around his right end to put the Wildcats in motion. That momentum carried to the 13. Then the Villanova fullback hit for 5, 7 and 1—that last 36 inches being a touchdown.

'Skins Face Another Shelling In Clash With Bears Today

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Don't expect another 73-0 game, but it's safe to predict a pretty thorough thumping for the Washington Redskins today when they wind up their '48 exhibition season in a meetng with the Chicago Bears at Baltimore's Municipal Stadium.

Sponsored by the Variety Clubs of Washington and Baltimore, the affair is expected to attract thousands of local fans and a crowd of well over the 18,000 which turned up at last year's pre-season showing in Baltimore. Starting time is 2:30.

The Bears, by all signs, are just too deep and strong for the Redskins. They've won four of their five exhibitions so far and go into the brawl, a preview of the teams' November 28 league clash, in a healthy and mean state after their recent upset by the New York Giants.

Washington's club, on the other hand, will be lacking the services of four first-line backs, including their expensive but battered All-America from Alabama, Harry Gilmer. It has lost its last two outings, 46-20 and 43-0, and has only a triumph over the Los Angeles Rams to show for its exhibition efforts.

With three of the country's greatest quarterbacks to choose from, Owner-Coach George Halas of the Bears has decided to start Johnny Lujack today. The Notre Dame All-America star will be spelled by V[illegible] Sid Luckman and Rookie Bobby Layne, while most of the Redskin offensive quarterbacking falls on the shoulders of Slingin' Sammy Baugh and his only replacement, Tommy Mont.

Briefly—Today's game will be televised over Station WMAL-TV and broadcast over Station WMAL, which will keep many Washington fans at home . . . But, surprisingly enough, owner George Marshall isn't worried about the inroads the two mediums will make on attendance . . . "We've always got more fans than we can handle, anyway," he boasts. 'Eventually we'll be giving away tickets to our games and selling radio and television rights for millions . . ." Marshall yesterday refused to comment on whether he'd like to rehire Ray Flaherty, deposed New York Yankee coach, merely saying he was 'stunned" by the news of Ray's ouster.

Part of today's halftime entertainment will be provided by the Fort McNair Third Infantry drill team, Lieut. F. J. Archibald, commanding, as they say in military circles . . . Special B. & A. trains leave Union Station at 12:30 and set you down within walking distance of the stadium

Newhouser Checks Yanks For Tigers, 4-3

Detroit, Sept. 18 (AP).—Hal Newhouser put a crimp in the New York Yankees' flag bid today, stopping the Yanks with six hits as the Tigers took a 4-to-3 decision, splitting their four-game series.

The costly defeat dropped the Yanks two full games back of front-running Boston, which slapped St. Louis, 11 to 6.

Newhouser, starting slowly and yielding four hits and all three Yankee runs in the first two innings, faced only 22 batters, one more than the minimum, in the last seven.

No Yankee reached second base after the second inning off Lefty Hal, who took his 18th victory at the expense of Ed Lopat. Bill Johnson singled in the third and was rubbed out in a double play and Phil Rizzuto singled in the seventh and was out trying to stretch it. Only other New Yorker to get on base during Newhouser's effective finish was Tom Henrich, who walked in the eighth.

Henrich doubled in the first in-

Bosox Beat Browns 11 to 6, Hike Lead to Two Games

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox came from behind and made much of a fine opportunity this afternoon, defeating the St. Louis Browns, 11 to 6, thereby increasing their lead in the American League to two games over the New York Yankees. The Yanks lost to Detroit, 4 to 3.

At the end of four innings the Browns were in front, 4-2, but then the boys from Boston opened up, scoring five in the fifth and tacking on four more in the sixth.

The game bristled with double plays, with four on each side.

Bobby Doerr, Boston's second baseman, set a major league record by playing his seventy-second consecutive game without an error, a string in which he has handled 404 chances, adding 8 of them today.

Doerr also was the big gun of the Boston batting attack on three Brownie pitchers. He got a three-run homer in the fifth and singled another in the sixth, in addition to his two-base hit in the fourth frame. His home run was the first for the Sox in 14 games since September 4.

Nats Make It 18 in Row, Lose To Tribe, 10-1

Cleveland, Sept. 18.—The Nats stumbled a step closer to a new major league losing streak record here today by dropping their eighteenth straight hame. The Indians caved them in for a third straight time, 10-1, to close the 1948 books between the clubs.

The Nats could do little with Sam Zoldak, who won his eleventh victory, and three Washington pitchers could do nothing with the Indian sluggers.

Early Wynn started in the box and was followed by Dick Welteroth and Milo Candini. Welteroth was hurt least.

The Nats were first to score, tallying in the third on singles by Mickey Vernon and Al Evans and Wynn's infield roller.

The Indians tied it up in their half and then turned the game into a shambles with two runs in the fourth and four in the fifth. Hegan got his fourteenth home run of the year with one aboard in the third and Boudreau snapped out of a deep slump with his fourteenth homer in the fifth, also with one man on.

The game was witnessed by a ladies' day crowd of 24,380, of whom 13,921 paid. The Indians very probably will break the American League attendance record tomorrow in a doubleheader with Philadelphia. The Tribe now has drawn 2,225,511.

Washington's season record against the Indians ended at 16 defeats and 6 victories.

The Nats, therefor.., will have a chance to tie the modern major league record of 20 straight defeats tomorrow in Chicago where they play the White Sox in a doubleheader.

Longhorns Find Another Bobby Layne In Campbell

Austin, Tex., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Texas Longhorns gave early notice today that they were a football power to be reckoned with when they toyed with Louisiana State, winning 33 to 0 in a game in which the teams had been rated on virtually even terms.

The Texans punched over two touchdowns in the opening period, then turned to the air the rest of the way to stamp themselves as possible worthy successors to last year's Longhorn crew which won the Sugar Bowl game from Alabama.

More than 44,000 fans, who hadn't expected quite so much out of the Texans, were delighted with what they saw.

10 Out of 19 Passes

Fear that the Texas air attack would be grounded by the loss of the great Bobby Layne was practically dispelled today as his successor, Paul Campbell, performed well as the key man in the Texas "T" attack.

Campbell and Rookie Billy Allen teamed to give Texas a passing record of 10 completions in 19 tries for 185 yards. The Texas running attack generated 206 yards and the veteran forward wall held LSU to a mere 38 yards aground and 81 in the air.

Two touchdowns came in the third period and another in the fourth.

Campbell's 42-yard aerial to End George McCall set up the third touchdown, moving the ball to the LSU 28, from where Sprinter Perry Samuels skipped over.

An LSU fumble on the 2 and a weak kick out to the 34 set up another score minutes later. It took the Texas juggernaut nine plays to score, with Billy Pyle plugging over the final 2 yards.

Richmond Wins Opener, 33 to 0

Richmond, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Thomas (Cotton) Billingsley, 175-pound junior tailback from Fredericksburg, stole most of the offensive show here tonight as the University of Richmond Spiders crushed Randolph-Macon's Yellow Jackets, 33-0, before 8000 persons in City Stadium.

Billingsley went to work in the first period spearheading the Spiders to their first touchdown. Four other Richmond players tallied touchdowns, but Billingsley figured in most of them.

Musial, Boudreau Cited

St. Louis, Sept. 18 (AP).—Manager-Shortstop Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians and Outfielder Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals were named by the Sporting News tonight as the outstanding players of their respective leagues.

Deacs Get Two Quick Scores in 4th Period

Wake Forest, N. C., Sept. 18.—Overpowered and undermanned, George Washington was also outscored, 27-13, here today but not before the Colonials threw a four-alarm scare into the Wake Forest Deacons in the season's opener.

To the amazement of 10,000 spectators, the Colonials entered the final period trailing by only 14-13. Then, in less than four minutes, the Deacons struck for two quick touchdowns to break the resistance of a George Washington team doped to lose by 27 points.

With their single-wing offensive sputtering ineffectively most of the sweltering afternoon, the Colonials muffed two scoring opportunities in the second quarter. Had either been successful, Coach Bo Rowland's first GW team, a surprisingly well-drilled club, could have easily scored a stunning upset.

Davis, Kline Shine

Freshman Andy Davis, former McKinley Tech backfield star, and Jimmy Kline, Minersville, Pa., sophomore, combined to execute the most dazzling play of the afternoon, a maneuver which delivered George Washington's second touchdown.

Trailing 14-6 after Halfback Bill Gregus of Wake Forest had climaxed a 37-yard drive by going over from the 2-yard line, the Colonials pulled the ancient sleeper play.

Before the Deacons and almost everyone else in the stadium knew what was going on, Kline had scored a touchdown for G. W.

With the ball on the Wake Forest 36-yard line early in the fourth period, Kline hid out near the sideline. The Colonials huddled quickly, without Kline. All of a sudden Kline was streaking down the field, all alone. When he reached the 12-yard line, he hauled in Davis' perfect pitch and romped across for a touchdown.

Frank Cavallo, who missed a first-quarter conversion, connected on this one and GW trailed by only one point.

Deacons Rally

The Colonial play which bamboozled them also seemed to jolt the Deacons out of their lethargy.

Four plays following the next kickoff, the Deacons scored their third touchdown. Two minutes later, they produced their final tally.

California Crushes Santa Clara With Display of Power, 41-19

Berkeley, Calif., Sept. 18 (AP).—University of California, the West Coast's popular choice to go to the Rose Bowl this season, unveiled its powerhouse football eleven today with a crushing 41-19 victory over the University of Santa Clara Broncos.

An opening-day crowd of 45,000 saw Coach Lynn Waldorf's Bears drive to touchdowns in every period.

Coach Waldorf, with rival scouts in the stands, used only a few running and passing plays. He brought out nothing that was not seen last season when his initial team won 9 of its 10 games.

Among the rival scouts present to view the game were "Hawkshaws" from the United States Naval Academy. Navy tackles California in Baltimore next Saturday. Last year the Bears beat the Middies, 14-7.

Coach Waldorf will lead the Bears eastward about the middle of next week. California alumni of Washington, D. C., and from other Eastern points also will converge for the big battle, with various pre-game celebrations planned.

The Bears merely overpowered the Santa Clarans. They piled up a net yardage total from rushing of 412 yards and 118 yards from passes. Santa Clara gained 183 yards from scrimmage and 70 for passes.

California scored 2 minutes and 35 seconds after the game opened. On the first offensive play, Fullback Jackie Jensen raced 62 yards for the score.

The blond 152-pounder also broke away for a 61-yard touchdown run in the third quarter and his 63-yard gallop set the stage for one of his team's two touchdowns in the second period.

Promoter's Pleading Brings Joe Louis Back Into Ring

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It's rather difficult to write why Joe Louis has changed his mind and announced the he will fight again. The champ himself doesn't seem quite sure.

Louis checked in at Liberty's Ninth st. gym yesterday and did a little sparring to sharpen up for his exhibition with Pat Comiskey at Griffith Stadium Monday night.

He immediately was besieged by a couple of radio men with their portable mikes, reporters, newsreel men and news photographers. It didn't seem like a good time to ask him what was really behind his surprise move.

A better opportunity presented itself after his workout. That was when Trainer Manny Seamon industriously was rubbing him down. The crowd had disappeared, so had the noise it had been making.

Louis was reminded of his enviable past record for meaning what he said. More than any public figure, Louis could be depended on for straight stuff. Looking back on his record in print, it's hard to remember him giving any bad steers.

Now it's different. After knocking out Walcott last June, he announced his retirement to his mother on a coast-to-coast hookup. Since then, he's reiterated a dozen times that he definitely was through. Suddenly, on Friday, he said he would be willing to defend his title if either Charles or Joe Baksi prove worthy contenders.

How come?

Louis said, carefully, thoughtfully, "It's hard to answer that. And I want to give a good answer. As much as anything, I think you can say friendship has a good deal to do with it.

"I've always gotten along real good with Twentieth Century. I think they've treated me good. They asked me for one more fight so I'm going to give it to 'em.

The champ, looking as smooth and powerful as he ever did, shifted his lithe body and Manny started rubbing his other leg.

"One thing sure," continued Louis, "money didn't have anything to do with it. Don't get me wrong, I'll want plenty if I step into the ring. But I mean I don't have to fight for the money. I

With Considine

By Bob Considine

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (INS).—Sportin' around:

Anybody in the house remember any pitcher (except Bucky Walters) who became a big league playing manager?

Considine

Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Ted Lyons and Bolly Grimes are a few of the throwers elevated to managerial jobs, but all were past their pitching days. Bucky still can work and apparently is not blinded to his limitations despite his new-found authority. He yanked himself out of a game recently, and without consulting anybody except himself.

Funny thing about managerial timber. It flourishes chiefly in the infield. Its nominees from the catcher's position have been failures by and large. Outfielders are usually oversnubbed by the front offices of the majors.

In kid baseball, oddly enough, the pitcher is traditionally the best ballplayer on the team and almost invariably the leader of the club. But maturity makes a pawn of him, a tool operated by the catcher or the man on the bench.

But maybe he was the pitcher for his kid team only because he owned the ball.

J. ARTHUR RANK'S Technicolor film of the 1948 Olympics—winter and summer—is infinitely better than a seat in the first row of the press box at either event.

I saw a preview of this long, exciting film at an Eagle-Lion projection room the other day and learned more about the games than it was possible to learn while covering them.

As was pointed out here a few times during the games, it was impossible for any reporter to see more than a fraction of the show. Wembley Stadium was a seven-ring circus in itself, but similar shows were going on at six other places in England at the same time. One had to look over the day's far-flung agenda, pick out something that looked like a good story, go there and stay there.

But Rank had half a hundred cameras grinding everywhere and his men have pieced together a film that is beautiful beyond description, often as exciting as a murder mystery and, in spots, downright poignant.

The film reaches its peak in its remarkable recording of the Marathon. Cameras mounted atop cars and trucks paced the runners through the whole torturous 26 miles . . . a tale of broken hearts and busted arches of historic proportions.

To see the pace-setting Belgian go to pieces in front of your eyes, but hold the lead until after he returned to Wembley to make that last desperate circuit of the track is a lachrymose heart-crusher that has no need for violins in the background.

To see the bouncy Argentinian overhaul and then pass the staggering man, so few yards from home, is to see an embodiment of death and taxes, and the fierce grin on the face of the little needle-nosed Englishman who also passed the Belgian in the last dregs of the homestretch is to learn, at least, the essence of the phrase "rubbing it in."

Ted Husing and Bill Stern do a good straight-forward job with their end of the commentary.

It's a must for every sports fan.

---

THE RAPACIOUSNESS of Louisville's innkeepers during the Derby weekend has often been told by the sports historians, though things are never as bad as they have been pictured in some quarters.

But if you grant that some of the raps at this rash of Southern inhospitality have been warranted, Louisville had better look to its dubious laurels.

Boston's hotel men, their senses of perceptibly sharpened by the impending World Series, have come up with a dodge that would bring a blush of shame to the cheeks of a Louisville room clerk selling you a plank in a linen closet for $20 a night.

The Boston boys have decided that out-of-towners who want a room for the series must sign up for the full run of what they confidently expect will be an all-Boston series, but if only one Boston team gets into the big play-off, the out-of-towner must still pay for his room in Boston for the whole series though half of it is being played in New York or Cleveland.

A DELIGHTFUL history of the Army-Notre Dame football rivalry (born 1913, died 1947), compiled by Jim Beach and Dan Moore for Random House, will soon be on the stands. It will stir a lot of dusty memories, dispel a lot of quaint legends, including the treasured one that Army knew nothing about Notre Dame before the first game.

Notre Dame had beaten Michigan in 1909 and had been named Western champion. Its 1912 team was rated on a par with Wisconsin, Big Ten champion, by the Spalding record book. Its game with Army grew out of its difficulty in scheduling games with Midwestern teams as sorely frightened of the Irish as they are today.

P. S.—Look for a resumption of the classic rivalry in two or three years.

Braves Take 6-Game Edge, Beat Pirates, 2-1

Spahn Spins Four-Hitter, Wins in 9th

Boston, Sept. 18 (AP).—Playing in pennant-winning style the Boston Braves today defeated Pittsburgh, 2-1, as Lefty Warren Spahn, pitching with two days' rest, limited the hitherto pressing Pirates to one hit until the ninth inning.

In that final frame, the Pirates, who now are in third place 6½ games in back of the Tribe, got their other three hits and scored their solitary run.

The victory, achieved before 21,085 paid fans, gave the Braves a commanding lead of six games over the now runnerup Brooklyn Dodgers, who slipped into second place by shading the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2.

The Braves, who haven't won the National League flag since the "miracle team" of 1914 finished first, can clutch the pennant by winning 8 of their 13 remaining games.

Eight decisions would give the Braves a total of 91 victories which Brooklyn couldn't equal even if it should win all its remaining 13 contests.

The Pirates were jittery today while the Braves played steady, alert baseball.

Spahn scored the first Boston run in the third inning. Attempting to sacrifice Sibby Sisti, who had singled, the Boston flinger forced his teammate at second.

Tommy Holmes slapped a line single into left field which rolled through the legs of Ralph Kiner for an error and Spahn went all the way to the plate.

Bob Elliott singled in the sixth and took second when Center Fielder Wally Westlake's relay to the infield rolled to the stands.

A wild pitch put Elliott on third, whence he trotted home on Frank McCormick's lusty triple to right center.

Spahn pitched one of his better games of the season. He walked three, but two of these Pirates who were given free trips to first base were erased on double plays and the other never advanced beyond first.

Wendel Gains Golf Final

William H. Wendel got even yesterday for the pasting he took in last year's finals at the hands of Billie Shea, by smothering Billie, 6 and 5, in the semifinals of the Congressional Country Club golf championship.

Wendel's spectacular win puts him in the 36-hole final against M. Parker Nolan, who whipped A. G. Dezendorf yesterday, 1 up. They'll tee off this morning at 10.

Wendel was on par or under for every one of the 13 holes played in his match against Shea. Birdies on the second, third, and thirteenth holes put him 3 under par for the distance while Shea went 3 over.

The kind of game Billie was up against was amply demonstrated on the thirteenth green. Here, Wendel was trapped near the green in three and blasted out for a birdie four. Shea, on in three, took two putts and was out of the tournament, 6 down and 5 to go.

Bums Hurdle Into 2d on Reiser's Hit

Brooklyn, Sept. 18 (AP).—A dramatic ninth-inning pinch single by Pete Reiser sent Peewee Reese across with the winning run as the Brooklyn Dodgers jumped from fourth to second place in National League standings by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2, today.

The loss dropped the Redbirds six and a half games behind the pace-setting Boston Braves.

With the count two and one on Carl Furillo, Reiser was sent in to hit. He did, smacking the first ball to right center for the game-clincher.

Paul Minner, who replaced Starter Carl Erskine in the fourth inning, permitted only three hits in the last six frames to gain credit for his third victory. Ted Wilks, who relieved Alpha Brazle in the seventh, was the loser.

The victory gave the Brooks the season's series, 12 games to 10. It marked the first time since 1932 that the Dodgers had topped the Redbirds over a full season. They played the Cards even in 1941 and 1947.

Giants Outslug Redlegs, 12-7

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—Johnny Mize's thirty-sixth home run of the season, coming in the sixth inning with one aboard, snapped a 7-all tie and sent the New York Giants on their way to a 12-7 victory over the Cincinnati Reds today.

Trading of 3 Key Players Hurt Yanks, Flaherty Says

By Norman Miller

New York, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Ray Flaherty complained today that the New York Football Yankees gave away some of his best players and then ousted him from his job for losing games.

"You can't give away players like Eddie Prokop, Nate Johnson and Dick Barwegan and expect to have a winning team," said the deposed Yankee coach, who resigned yesterday "under pressure."

Prokop, a hard-running halfback; Johnson, who was awarded a tackle berth on the All-America Conference's 1947 all-star team, and Barwegan, a second team guard choice, were among 10 players given away by the Yankees to strengthen the weaker clubs in the league. Prokop and Johnson went to the Chicago Rockets and Barwegan to the Baltimore Colts.

"I think the poor showing of the Yankees this season can be traced directly to the loss of those three men," said Flaherty, who guided the club to Eastern Division championships during the first two years of the conference's existence.

Flaherty said that he had not even been consulted by club officials in the transfer of the three stars last winter.

"I consented to giving away the other players, but the first time I knew that Prokop, Johnson and Barwegan were gone was when I read about it in the papers."

Flaherty said that on the day after the Yankees' 27 to 14 defeat at the hands of Baltimore, Thursday night—their third setback in four starts this season—Owner Dan Topping told him that the team needed a change in leadership and asked him to resign. Flaherty was paid off on his contract for the remainder of the campaign.

Flaherty said he had no plans for the immediate future and that he would return home to the West Coast and "take it easy for a while."

Topping, meanwhile, held a meeting with the Yankee players and gave them the next three days off from practice until Norman (Red) Strader, backfield coach under Flaherty, returned on Tuesday from a scouting trip to Los Angeles and took over the guidance of the team.

Promoter's Pleading Brings Joe Louis Back Into Ring

can get along all right. Oh, I admit I won't be able to live as high. But I can be comfortable."

He added, with a chuckle, "If I don't fight, I guess a lot of other people won't be able to live as high either."

Most fight fans would hate to see Louis lose the title he's defended so well. They'd rather see him quit undefeated. So would he.

"But I don't think I'll be taking too much of a gamble right now," he said. "Maybe a year from now it will be different. I guess it's hard not to fight when I feel this way."

Louis did say Sol Strauss was a "pretty good talker." And that's probably the tipoff. Joe's had his fill of fighting, training, adulation and all the other things that go with the heavyweight title. No doubt, he'd be just as happy to step down. But Twentieth Century is anxious to drive home a few more telling blows against the rival Tournament of Champions. And when Mike Jacobs and Strauss got through pleading, Joe just couldn't say no.

One thing's sure, Louis is a great champ. More than 300 fanatics, to use the longer, more appropriate word, stood in Goldie Ahearn's sweltering gym for more than two hours just to see Louis step into the ring.

The temperature was well over 100. Funny thing is that Louis looks good even in a practice ring. He sparred playfully with Matthew Daniels and George Brooks and the crowd loved it. Louis all but broke his arms trying to pull his punches but Daniels still emerged with a bloody nose.

Speaking of his foe Monday night, Louis said, "I think Comiskey is a good puncher and you always have to respect a good puncher. I'll be ready for him."

The Louis-Comiskey exhibition will be a six-round affair. In addition, Smuggy Hursey is scheduled to go 10 rounds with Al Wright. Two sixes include Elkins Brothers vs. Tiger Roy Taylor and Jerry Meckler against an opponent to be named. In four-rounders Holly Mims faces Garland Edwards and Gene Harley meets Buck Jones.

Devitt Eleven Boasts Size; Central, Tech Clash Saturday

By Herb Heft

Post Reporter

Defending Champion McKinley Tech and runnerup Central square off in their 1948 Interhigh Football League opener next Saturday, and Central rooters are brooding because its a non-title affair.

Tech has lost the innards of its powerhouse machine of last year, but Central still has its two key backs, and one of the biggest high school lines in the area.

The forty-eighth renewal of the ivy-hung Central-Tech series won't have the glamorous night-game Griffith Stadium setting of last year's titular game. But it is expected to pack Central Stadium with upwards of 8000 fans.

Central hasn't beaten a Tech eleven since 1942, and their series is even. Each has won 20 games, and seven have resulted in ties.

Center of attention will be Central's versatile Jimmy Pantos, whose brilliant touchdown sprints and passes carried the Vikings to the finals last year.

Jimmy has a new and tougher assignment in Coach Jan Jankowski's 1948 plans. Jan is mixing more "T" plays with his single wing, and 155-pound Jimmy will be hopping from halfback to quarterback and back again to halfback, depending on which offense the Vikings are employing.

Jack Wert, the best defensive back in the league last year, is back, as are John Roman, Conrad Wine and Jerry Murphy.

Central's strongest line positions are at center and at the two ends. Bill Dunker, 6 foot 4, and Frannie Gleason, 6 foot 2, both basketball stars, and excellent at catching footballs, are at the flank positions. Gene Million, the lightest lineman at 170, is playing his third year as regular center.

Jankowski claims he has the best schoolboy tackle in the city in swarthy 210-pounder Fotis Karousatos, and he's pleased with Guard Lew Glickfield, 180-pounder, who moved to Washington from Long Island last summer.

However, he's not overly optimistic about the other line spots, even though the candidates pack a lot of weight. Bill Weaver, a 200-pound tackle has great potentiality, says Jan, but isn't developing fast enough.

A pair of tenth-grade 195-pound tackles, Jack Daniels and Lew Kresin are pushing Weaver in the fight for a regular berth. Rudy Jones, George Berman and Dick Wooten are the other guard aspirants.

For the first time, Devitt Prep this season is allowing only high school undergraduates to play varsity football, and Coach Bob Killen is'nt lacking for material.

Devitt decided on the change during the summer after pondering the increasing unwillingness of local high schools to play a team using college freshmen.

Since the change in policy, such smaller teams as St. Albans and Georgetown Prep have graciously accepted invitations to play the former big lad Devitts.

Devitt's team is largely untried. The kids out this year, were overshadowed by the older bruisers last year and relegated to bench warming.

But under the new setup, new younger candidates have turned out, and the size would make Coach Bo Rowland of George Washington University turn green with envy.

For example, Killen has at his disposal a pair of 15-year-old tackles, Garry Jawish and Dave Bryon, who displace 480 pounds between them. They're excellent prospects, and surprisingly, little of their avoirdupois is excess.

He has two other "fair" sized tackles in Jim Reinhold, 215, and Wesley Wilkins, 190.

They more than counterbalance Killen's two lightest guards, Johnny Dennis, 155, and John Oliva, 145. George Strong, 180, Don Firor, 162, are two other guard candidates. Devitt is light at center with scrappy Nick Pallis, 145, holding forth at the snapback.

There's lots of height and speed at the flanks with 6-foot 5-inch Bob McNeill at one end, and 6-foot 2-inch Bob Wolfarth at the other.

Killen expects his backfield power to generate from 5-foot 11-inch Francis Bates, left halfback, whose dad is Representative George Bates (R., Mass.), of the House District Committee.

At the other halfback spot will be Tommy Hunt. At quarter will be Ralph Wilkins. John Neuman, succeeds his older brother, George, at the fullback post. George graduated last year.

Devitt had a big time at training camp for two weeks up at Camp Najonjay, Md., 50 miles from Washington. They've been back at Hearst playground for a week now, and expect to be in top form for their opener in two weeks against Richard Montgomery High at Rockville.

Interest Lags Here

Outlook Dim For College Grid Sellouts

This is the time of year many colleges are busily engaged in sending back with regrets ticket requests for games in October and November that already are sold out.

Although there will be at least 11 good collegiate games at Griffith Stadium this fall, sellout prospects now—or on the days of the games—are dim. The unhappy truth is that college games here don't draw as well as they should in a metropolitan area with a population of more than a million.

What's the reason for poor support of college football in Washington? Well, there are almost as many theories as there have been empty seats in past years. But one dominant theme is developed by nearly everybody.

This is a cosmopolitan city. Comparatively, there are few natives and thus less interest in local schools. Too, universities in the area draw a large number of students from out of town. This means their alumni bodies here aren't large enough to wield the powerful support of those at other schools.

Georgetown's Rome Schwagel thought that lack of concentrated newspaper publicity had an adverse effect on the college gates.

"People know every player on the Redskins or on the Nats," Schwagel said. "They're reading about them every day. Naturally, they get interested in the teams and go to see them play."

Schwagel said that in the past good teams weren't brought in because the colleges were afraid they wouldn't draw the crowds. And that brings up an age-old problem—you have to be assured big gates before you can pay big guarantees, but you can't build up top crowds without carding top teams.

Horse Racing Hurts

Father Matthew Kane, treasurer of Georgetown and former faculty director of athletics, explained why four of Georgetown's games will be played on Friday nights.

"I think there's a keen interest in horse racing in this area. Especially on Saturdays in October lots of the sporting fraternity flock to the nearby tracks," he opined.

But Georgetown apparently isn't discouraged. The Hoyas will play five games here this season and that's more than they have in recent years. Schwagel's convinced that people will come out to see Georgetown if the team plays well and the schedule's attractive.

That's why he's booked powerful Boston College for October 1; Denver, well-regarded in the Rocky Mountain area, and Fordham and N. Y. U., good local drawing cards.

Big Jim Tatum, athletic director as well as head coach at Maryland, has some sound ideas on what makes college turnstiles click.

"Briefly, I'd say a team should have a good schedule, an outstanding name back and keen college rivalry," Tatum informed.

The Terrapins have an ambitious football program mapped out and Maryland is the one local school that hasn't the drawbacks of the others. By next year, Tatum's team expects to be playing in its own stadium at College Park—a big help in scheduling the top teams.

Kansas a Drawing Card

Max Farrington, George Washington's chief, thinks professional football has hurt college attendance here. "Frankly, I'll say the pros seem to play the brand of football the people want to see," Max said. "Certainly, we're competing for the sports fan's dollar."

Farrington, though, maintains that there are enough people interested in GW to patronize its games sufficiently. "We haven't been winning, you know," he said, "and, naturally, can't expect to draw well without having a good team. If we start clicking, we'll do all right."

LaFond Can Smile

Eddie LaFond, athletic director at Catholic University, says he's "not too concerned about the gate." LaFond smiles and admits he's in a unique position. The Cardinals have de-emphasized football and continue it solely for the students. Not one athletic scholarship is granted at C.U.

U.S. Amateur Golf Swept By Lenczyk

Pebble Beach, Calif., Sept. 18 (U.P.).—Long hitting Grace Lenczyk, who gets in the mood to play golf by listening to classical music, won the Women's National Amateur Golf championship today with a smashing 4-and-3 victory over little Helen Sigel of Philadelphia.

The Connecticut girl, who already holds the Canadian Amateur and U. S. Intercollegiate titles, thus became the world's outstanding Simon-pure golfer in the feminine ranks.

Terrific off the tees and deadly with her chipping iron around the greens, the relentless Stetson College junior from Newington, Conn., went five-up at the end of the first 18 holes of the 36-hole final round and, although her game faded somewhat on the back nine, she never was in serious danger of losing her leadership.

Miss Lenczyk, who is 21 years old, played only good enough to win. Her medal for the morning round was 37, 41—78, two over women's par. This afternoon she was out in 41 and two over for the six holes played on the back nine—with the aid of a couple of long-distance gift putts.

During the 32 holes played, Miss Sigel won only seven. Miss Lenczyk won 11, and the rest were halved.

The clowning Philadelphia miss, who got in trouble this morning upon poor advice from her caddy, made a fair comeback on the afternoon round for the first nine holes.

She won the first and third of the afternoon round to cut the margin to 3 up, as Miss Lenczyk frequently got into traps.

The new champion, who succeeds Louise Suggs, the Lythia Springs, Ga., gal who turned professional, ran the margin back to 4 up on the tenth when Miss Sigel got down on the cliff facing the ocean for the third consecutive day.

The match was closed out on the fifteenth with a halve on par five.

Charlie Keller Night Will Be Next Saturday

Ever since Charlie Keller of the New York Yankees insisted that money for his "Day" at the Yankee Stadium, September 25, be used for a Maryland University scholarship fund, Terrapin alumni have been scurrying about trying to carry out his wishes.

They already have enough for one scholarship but won't be satisfied until they can set up a permanent endowment.

Dr. H. C. "Curly" Byrd, president of Maryland University, and Burt Shipley, Charlie's old baseball coach at Maryland, will lead a local delegation to the Yankee Stadium. Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland will be on hand to make the presentations.

The Yankees' opponents next Saturday night will be their hot pennant rivals, the Boston Red Sox, and tickets will be scarce. The Maryland Alumni Club of New York has reserved a block of tickets for contributors to the scholarship fund. Inquiries should be addressed to Sarah E. Morris, Empire State Building, 350 5th ave., New York 1, N. Y.

Sub Pac Blasts Quantico, 10-4

Quantico, Va., Sept. 18.—A rejuvenated SubPac nine lambasted two Quantico pitchers for 11 hits and a 10-4 win in the third game of the Navy's "World Series" here today and drew their first victory in the tournament for the All-Navy baseball crown.

The hits included a homer by Ray Petinak, Sailor catcher, in the third with one on and another by Third Baseman Lou Townes in the eighth with two on. Rusty Gates, Marine from Pearl Harbor and playing with the Navy nine, slapped out a double in the lead-off slot in the first inning and scored on Bob Myers' single over second. Myers also poled a double against the fence in the third and scored on Petinak's homer.

The Marines collected two runs in their half of the third on two singles, an error, a wild pitch, and a passed ball. They staged a rally in the eighth when the first three batters to face Johnny Quattlebaum knocked out clean singles.

Bob Groves went on the mound for the Sailors, replacing Quattlebaum, and gave up a double to Les Veigel, Marine first sacker, that scored two runs. The right-hander put a damper on the rally by striking out the next batter and forcing the next two hitters to ground out.

The next game in the series will be played tomorrow when the two teams will meet again here at the Marine Corps School's diamond.

Schools Ask Armory for Special Rates

Local high schools and colleges have been asked to furnish information on ability to pay for rentals at the National Guard Armory for staging athletic events.

The schools have declared that the present rate of $500 a night or 15 per cent of the gate is excessive and have asked for a special rate. The commercial rate is $1000 a night or 15 per cent of the take.

After receiving the additional information, the three-man Armory Board will consider proposals for a rate change.

Armory Manager Arthur J. "Dutch" Bergman has been authorized to hire a $7500 a year publicity man. Twelve have applied for the post, but selection is being delayed for a month, Bergman said.

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics blasted 12 hits in routing the Chicago White Sox, 11-3, today to sweep the two-game series. Joe Coleman, although he failed to finish after falling in rounding third base during the A's six-run eighth, gained his 14 victory.

Falls Church Loses, 25-7

Winchester, Va., Sept. 18 (AP).—Handley High School opened its 1948 football season under a blazing sun today by defeating Falls Church High School, 26 to 7.

The nearly 3000 fans scarcely had been seated when Wolverton climaxed a sustained drive by racing 12 yards for the first score. McIntire's conversion attempt was wide.

Midway in the second quarter Handley scored again when Quarterback Keller skirted his left end on a fake reverse and crossed the goal line standing up. This time McIntire's placement conversion was good.

Several plays later an intercepted pass again gave Handley the ball deep in enemy territory, and this time it was Semples who galloped across after taking Keller's pass on the 15-yard stripe. McIntire again missed the point.

A Keller-to-Bush pass completed the home team's scoring early in the third quarter. Semples' kick was low.

Cloud, a standout for Falls Church throughout the game, crashed over for the visitors' only score late in the final period. Borges kicked the extra point.

Women Play Mid-Atlantic

The women's Middle Atlantic Golf Tournament, with a field reading like a "Who's Who" in the Washington area, gets under way tomorrow with a qualifying round at Congressional Country Club.

Led by Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Kenwood, three times Middle Atlantic winner, the list of entries contains most of the top notch linkswomen in Maryland and Washington.

Considered most likely to succeed after Mrs. Meckley is Mrs. Walter Stokes, of Manor, who has worn the Middle Atlantic crown twice. Mrs. Stokes recently carried off the Manor women's title.

Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, who beat Mrs. Meckley in last year's Middle Atlantic final, is out on the West Coast and will not participate.

Entrants will be permitted to practice on the Congressional course this afternoon after 1:30. Post entries will be accepted.

Women are requested to bring their own caddies. Match play begins on Tuesday.

Pairings and starting times:

9:00—Mrs. Roland Cable, Ken.; Mrs. E. V. Brailsford, Cong.; Mrs. F. W. Yager, Ken.

9:05—Mrs. F. L. Geddes, Cong.; Mrs. David Weir, Cong.; Miss Elizabeth Garber, guest.

Short Shots

Terps, Duke Won't Renew Grid Series

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Sept. 18.—Sundry stuff for Sunday.

Atlantic Christian College of Wilson, N. C., has a professional playing end for its football team this fall. He's Charles (Chuck) Ehlman of Washington's Roosevelt High School, who just completed a season catching for Wilson in the Class D Carolina League. Under Atlantic Christian's rules, Ehlman is ineligible for baseball only . . . The Maryland-Duke football contract expires this year and will not be renewed. The Terrapins are angling for a game with another Southern Conference powerhouse to replace the Blue Devils.

NEGATIVELY SPEAKING, the Nats are acquiring a reputation. The other day a Durham radio announcer said, "The ticker shows Washington leading Detroit, 3-0, but I'm sure that's wrong." He was right, it was Detroit leading Washington, 3-0 . . . The greatest single contributor to the Variety Club's Jimmy Bivins-Ezzard Charles fight last Monday was Clark Griffith. He donated his ball park, a contribution of almost $5500 . . . Jack Nichols, University of Washington basketball star whom the Caps drafted, turned down the Washington offer to remain an "amateur" in a fast California league . . . Maryland athletic business manager, Bill Coby, reports the largest advance sale of football tickets in the school's history.

DUKE FOOTBALL practices are so secret that not even Ted Mann, Duke publicity manager, knows when they'll be held. "And that's something," he quipped, "because when I was in the Navy I knew in advance when we were going to invade Guam, Iwo Jima and Okinawa" . . . Bob Duncan, former George Washington publicity man, has turned promoter in Tar Heelia. His latest production matches a "tough Stokes County mule against a boa contrictor in mortal combat" . . . Sometimes a little sickness helps, as Fighter Ezzard Charles will say. Charles was signed to fight in Washington for $2500 last July, but became ill and had to twice postpone his bout. Later, when he recovered, he signed for the Boston fight and walked off with a check for over $11,000.

Art Devlin Dies; Ex-Hoya Great

One of Georgetown University's greatest gridmen of all time, Arthur Devlin, died yesterday in Jersey City, N. J., after a long illness at the age of 68.

Devlin, a brilliant third baseman with John McGraw's New York Giants of 1904 to 1911, will be buried in Washington where his wife, who died only a month ago, is also interred.

A graduate of Central High School, where he was a three-sport star, Devlin played fullback for Georgetown in 1899 and 1900. He sparked a Hoya eleven that amassed a record of 10 victories, only three losses and four ties over a two-year period. He played against such old-time stars as Emory Land, now an admiral heading the Air Transport Association; and Andrew "Cy" Cummings, later chairman of the Maryland Racing Association.

With the Giants Devlin helped win the 1905 World Series and hung up a record that still stands, accepting 13 chances in a single game without an error. In 1912 he was sold to the Boston Braves, and later was connected with the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League, Montreal, Rochester and Norfolk of the Virginia League. His connection with organized baseball ended in 1934 when he resigned as a scout for the Giants.

Filly Turns In 12th Win In 19 Tries

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Sept. 18.—J. N. Barnes' Miss Prime, referred to as "Prime Ribs of Horse" in some quarters, showed 10,000 Bel Air fans her stock in trade—speed and more speed—today. The 4-year-old filly turned in her twelfth victory of the year in 19 tries to win the Water Vale Purse, featuring the weekend program.

Miss Prime, who began her winning ways at Charles Town, finished a length and a quarter ahead of J. J. Ring's Dainger Girl, with E. P. Price's Stanley, third, in the field of eight.

Installed the favorite, Miss Prime paid $4 and was clocked in 0:59 2/5, four-fifths over the track record for 5 furlongs, set by Annie's Dream last summer.

Stanley Sets Early Pace

Stanley set the early pace under the riding of Freddie Kratz, but Stanley Austin had Miss Prime close up from the start. In the stretch, Miss Prime turned on the heat and took command but Austin had to keep her to a drive because of a threat by Dainger Girl.

The latter mare came to the inside in the stretch and closed with a bold rush that would have made it embarrassing for Miss Prime had not the distance into the wire run out. Apprentice Jimmy Ulmer was aboard Dainger Girl and lost his whip leaving the back stretch. Stanley tired from Early useage and was an "all in" horse at the end.

Miss Prime, as usual, was saddled by Mrs. George A. Saportas, jr., of Monkton, Md. This was her thirty-first winner of the year and makes her the leading woman trainer, in the number of winners, for the Nation.

Valcoeur Triumphs

The Country Life Farm purse, the day's secondary feature, went to the Wild Goose Farm's Valcoeur Aime, a $20.60 shot. This filly had a good lead, ran out and was headed by Gay Rocket. However, Jockey W. Carroll finally put Valcoeur Aime o.. the beam again and she came on to win going away. Gay Rocket was second in the colors of W. B. Hill, while Mrs. H. S. Grinder's strongly backed Country Dude was third in this field of 10. The winner was clocked in :59 2/5, the same as the feature, for the 5 furlongs.

The first race, as usual here, was a tight photo with R. O. Butts' Dot A nosing out Kohinoor to pay a $25.60 mutuel.

There was a $178.80 pay-off on the daily double after A. Finley's New Book survived another camera finish to win the second event at $16.20.

Metro Plays All-Star Games

The Metropolitan Amateur Football Leagues, 160-pound and unlimited, today introduce their first annual East-West All-Star games at Gonzaga high school's athletic field at 1 p. m.

Northeast Body Works and Arrow Linen will represent the east, and Southwest Merchants and Riverside Rollers the west in the 160-pound game. Car Credit and Falls Church Garage will be grouped in the east and Anacostia Eagles and Alperstein's Department Stores in the west in the unlimited attraction.

Number Five Winner In Police Boys Feature

Number Five defeated Number Twelve, 20-0, in the feature game of the 140-pound class of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club yesterday. In the other game in the same class, Number Four downed Number Ten, 13-0, and Number Five and Number Twelve battled to a scoreless tie.

Orme Scores Two Wins As Sailing Regatta Opens

A 24-year-old Washington skipper, who handled his craft like a veteran, stole the show as the annual President's Cup Regatta sailing races opened yesterday over the Hains Point course of the Potomac under ideal conditions, with a record field competing.

He was Robert Orme, who piloted Blue Water to a double triumph in the Chesapeake 20s class, to outstrip a crack field of 16 starters and install himself as a sure-fire favorite to capture the coveted trophy in this division in this morning's finals.

With 188 boats competing in the morning and 178 in the afternoon—the largest in the history of the regatta—Orme showed the way in the morning to beat Smarock, skippered by Delbert Zang of Galesville, Md., while in the afternoon he worked his way around the 5-mile course to another victory, this time outlasting Ernest H. Hartge's Chesapeake.

Finals will start this morning at 10 o'clock.

William Nagle, Scarsdale (N. Y.) ace, won the afternoon Star Boat race; Herbert Hild of City Island, N. Y., won the opener in the morning, but dropped to third in the second, as Nagle took over the lead. Nagle's boat was Finagle, while Hild's craft was Charybdis.

Texas A. & M. Routed, 34-14, By Villanova

score was tied. That's the way it still was at the half.

But shortly after the second half started, Pasquariello took over again. From the Aggies' 15 he took a handoff from Bill Doherty and went to the 5. Then, without a hand being laid upon him, he went right through the middle on his sheer power alone, for the touchdown which put the Wildcats ahead.

That, it turned out, was the ball game.

Pasquariello wasn't satisfied with that—even though it added up to a good day's gridiron work. For the Wildcats started rolling on a 95-yard touchdown, and who carried the ball over—Pasquariello. He took a handoff from Doherty on the Aggie 25 and went the distance.

It looked then like it was going to be a rout, for early in the fourth quarter Andy Gordon passed from 6 yards out to John Bogan for another Villanova touchdown.

93-Yard Texas Score

It wasn't Pasquariello's fault that he wasn't the point-maker again. On the play before, he had gone over from the 1, but his line was offside and Villanova was penalized 5 yards—only to set up Gordon's pay-off pass.

The Aggies came back for another score, but it didn't matter except to the fans. Charley Royally, playing his first intercollegiate game, took the ensuing Villanova kickoff on the Texas A. and M. 7-yard line and weaved and threaded his way 93 yards for a touchdown.

Soon the Wildcats got those points back when Gordon tossed an 18-yard pass to Joe Rogers for the final Villanova tally. Rogers was penned in at the 10-yard line by three Aggies but Pasquariello took them all out.

It was, all in all, a Pasquariello day. It was a Villanova day, too, because Pasquariello was playing for them.

Villanova hoping to get off on the right foot, had borrowed Franklin Field from the University of Pennsylvania for the day, for the Wildcats' home stadium only seats 14,000.

Now Penn probably will want to borrow a fullback from Villanova—a fellow by the name of Ralph Pasquariello.

Tech Defeats Blair, 19 to 0 In Grid Debut

McKinley Tech High defeated Montgomery Blair High, 19-0, yesterday in the season's opener for both teams at the new Blair stadium before an estimated crowd of 2000.

After a scoreless period, the Trainers broke the scoring ice on the sixth play of the second quarter when Fullback Bob Stewart plowed over from the one-yard line, climaxing a 57-yard drive. Eddie Herbert place-kicked the extra point.

Only five plays elapsed before the Trainers scored again. Harry Mowl took the ball on a reverse and ran wide around right end for the second Tech score in as many minutes. Herbert's kick was low.

Tech lost no time in getting their final tally. On the first play from scrimmage of the second half, Billy Rogers went from his own 35 to the Blazer 13. On the next play, Rogers carried it over on a beautiful sidestepping run. Again Herbert's kick was no good.

The closest Blair came to scoring was in the final quarter when Ray Luckett gave the ball to Bobby Mess on a Statue of Liberty play that went to the Trainer 38. But the attack bogged down and Tech took over.

Navy Holds Lengthy Drill

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 18 (AP).—Setting the mood for autumn Saturday afternoons a week early, Coach George Sauer whipped his Navy footballers through their longest practice yet today.

The Midshipmen drilled for the better part of three hours, running through plays and scrimmaging the Jayvees. They up anchor on the season against California in Baltimore next Saturday.

This was a football day at the Academy. While the varsity worked at one end of Farragut Field, Johns Hopkins' squad came down from Baltimore to scrimmage the Plebes in Thompson Stadium. The Jays and Academy beginners mixed it up for two hours.

Reaves Baysinger, five pounds lighter after his week-long siege with a fever, directed first-team operations at quarterback, and kept hitting Ends Harrison Frasier and Phil Ryann plus his backfield mates, with passes.

Bob Horne, with his game leg improving, quarterbacked another unit, but Al Sinclair, third-string quarter, stayed on the sidelines. He hurt a leg two days ago.

Bill Powers, fleet halfback, had one shank taped up, but it did not affect him noticeably.

$175,000 Worth

War Assets Makes Surplus Sports Equipment Available

The Government is ready to give away $175,000 worth of darts, backgammon games, checker sets and other sports equipment.

But it doesn't mean that you can stock up your game room. The equipment will go only to State and city governments, schools, charitable institutions and other non-profit outfits, under the surplus property law.

The War Assets Administration said yesterday that it has picked Sports America, Inc., a new charitable sports foundation to supervise distribution.

Sports America is made up of sports writers and broadcasters all over the Nation who have been assisting in a national campaign to make more sports and recreation facilities available to boys and girls.

Sports America will serve in an advisory capacity in investigating applications and making recommendations as to the amount and kinds of equipments to be given to various groups.

The only obligation on any group applying for such equipment is to defray the cost of handling and transportation.

The WAA stocks include 100,000 dart games, 78,000 backgammon games, 60,000 checker games, 6300 parchesi games, 1400 punching bags, 1600 head protectors for boxing and other smaller lots of sports equipment.

This surplus equipment is warehoused in New York, Atlanta, Minneapolis and Denver. It will be distributed from those locations."

Bowling Notes

Plaza Sport Shop League (formerly Penn Commercial) opened action last week at Penn Recreation Center with 10 teams, but Manager Lou Kramer is looking for two more fives. Opening-night honors went to Ralph Goldberg of Kogod & Dubb with a 423 set, and Artie Ball of Sollers Plumbers, with a 168 high game. Interested teams should contact Kramer before tomorrow night.

Six more teams are being sought for the Columbia Merchants League, which opens round two tomorrow night at Columbia alleys. Manager Doc Gartrell says that added starters can make up last week's matches.

Additional teams are also being sought for the 575 Monday League at Fort Davis, which holds an organization meeting tomorrow night at 7:15. Contact Larry Vassallo at Fort Davis.

A weekly "duckpin derby" will be launched at Spillway alleys next Sunday afternoon, with Station WBUZ to air the action at 2:15 p. m. Five people will be chosen from the field to compete for prizes from $10 to $2, plus merchandise.

Ten-year-old Frances Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Black, who rolls at Hi-Skor, hopes to boost her 90 average of last year to 100 this season.

Brookland Sunday Night Mixed League holds its organization meeting at Brookland alleys tonight at 8 o'clock, and opens its season at the same time next Sunday. Teams are formed by three men and two women with a 525 team average. There are openings for teams and individual players.

Record 64 Marks Tacoma Golf

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 18 (AP).—Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, smashed the Fircrest course competitive record with a 64 today. He failed by a single stroke to catch steady Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, in the third round of the $12,500 Tacoma open golf tournament.

Haas racked up a badly needed eagle on the par five 16th hole to stay in front with 201 at the end of 54 holes. His score today was 67.

Trojans Rout Utah, 37 to 0

Los Angeles, Sept. 18 (AP).—Southern California's Trojans opened their 1948 football campaign last night with a 37 to 0 shutout over a stubborn but outmanned University of Utah eleven before 55,211 fans in Memorial Coliseum.

The Trovs bulled their way on drives of 66 yards and 55 yards for their first two touchdowns. The third came on a punt blocked on the Utah 4-yard line, and the fourth touchdown was set up by a pass interception on the visitors' 14.

Feerick, Scolari Sign Cap Contract

Capt. Bob Feerick and Fred Scolari, veteran standouts, yesterday signed their contracts with the Washington Caps of the Basketball Association of America.

Another West Coaster in town was Dick O'Keefe, who came into his own late last season. O'Keefe hasn't signed yet, but plans to confer with Owner Mike Uline this week.

Lone holdout on the Caps is Sonny Hertzberg. Others in the fold include Matt Zunic, Jack Tingle and Leo Katkaveck.

Stanford's Late Scores Trip San Jose, 26-20

Colonials Fight Hard But Wake Forest Wins

Nation'e tenth best passer last year, hit End Ed Hoey with a 14-yard pass and Hoey rambled 65 yards to the GW 8-yard line to set up touchdown No. 3. Harry Dowda slipped through tackle for the score.

Knocked back on their heels three straight times after the kick-off, the Colonials punted out to the Wake Forest 48. The Deacons required only one play to score this time. Sophomore Halfback Bob Jones found a hole between tackle and end, darted through, veered to his left and raced 52 yards for the score.

Gregus Goes 67 Yards

Wake Forest's first touchdown, scored in the first five minutes of the game, was another contribution by Gregus, a 20-year-old junior from Toledo.

Taking a wide handoff from Quarterback Fetzer, Gregus skirted left end and breezed 67 yards to the GW 2-yard-line, where end Dick Close knocked him out of bounds. Dowda bucked over for the touchdown.

Center Charlie Grinnell, who along with Tackle Hank Bartellom hounded the Deac backs all day, paved the way for George Washington's first score which came within three minutes of Gregus' long run.

Grinnell broke through and collared Fetzer, back to pass. The ball squirted out of the hands of the Deacon quarterback and into the arms of End Bill Szanyi, who traveled 30 unmolested yards to score for the Colonials.

Back in the ball game again, the Colonials almost took undisputed possession of the contest early in the second period. Guard Charlie Gunner blocked a Fetzer punt and Tackle Fred Samuelson recovered for the Colonials on the Deacon 15-yard line before the second period was 60 seconds old.

2 Chances Fizzle

Sophomore Joe Buell, teammate of Davis at Tech high, essayed four straight passes and all four failed.

The Colonials, however, were to have another chance to dent the Deac goal line a few moments later. This one came when Bill Spangler quick-kicked 47 yards to the Deacon 18. Safetyman Bob Jones, hit hard by Close, fumbled, Close reclaiming the ball for G. W. on the 15.

Once again, however, the Colonials couldn't punch it over. A penalty set 'em back 5 yards, one pass failed and the attack came to an inglorious end when End Jim Duncan spilled Buell for a 12-yard loss on fourth down.

The Colonials got one more opportunity to score midway the third quarter when a Davis passing attack, plus the running of Dick Koester, moved the ball to the Deacon 13-yard line.

The drive died when Dowda made a Joe DiMaggio catch of a Buell pass intended for Dick Close standing all alone on the 3-yard line.

West Virginia Romps Over Waynesburg

(U.P.)—The remodeled Mountain-

(U.P.)—The remodeled Mountaineers of West Virginia University started on the road back today under their new coach, Dudley DeGroot, by steaming over Waynesburg for a 29-to-16 victory.

Scheduled as an opening-day breather, Waynesburg surprised the crowd of 10,000 by scoring after a pass interception in the first four minutes of the game. A field goal, two minutes later, gave the visitors a 9-to-0 lead.

Vic Bonfili scooted 17 yards around right end near the end of the first quarter for the initial West Virginia score. In the second quarter, Gene Simmons booted a 19-yard field goal.

It remained for Jimmy Walthall, Mountaineer passing star, to provide the winning spark. He threw three touchdown passes and handed off the ball for a fourth. Walthall connected with John Murphy for his first touchdown-pass. After a scoreless third period, Walthall hit Clarence Cox standing unguarded in the end zone. A few minutes later Cox snagged another Walthall heave and scampered over from the 10.

With 65 seconds of play remaining, Charlie Hrutkay arched a pass to Dill Lane over the goal line for the final Waynesburg score.

Underdog Dons To Face 49ers

San Francisco, Sept. 18 (AP).—Coach Jimmy Phelan brings his underdog Los Angeles Dons to Kezar Stadium tomorrow to meet the unbeaten San Francisco 49ers in the All-America Professional Football Conference.

Local odds makers gave Phelan's men little chance to avenge a thumping administered by the 49ers in an August exhibition game. The 49ers will be seeking their fourth straight conference victory. The 49ers begin an Eastern tour next week.

Gonzales, Sturgess Gain Finals

By Oscar Fraley

Forest Hills, Sept. 18 (U.P.)—Power-hitting Pancho Gonzales, a Los Angeles lad who didn't know when he was licked, prevented an all-foreign final in the United States amateur tennis championships when his upset triumph today put him in the title flight against South African Stylist Eric Sturgess.

Gonzales, swarthy problem child of American tennis, dropped the first set of his semifinal match against favored Jaroslav Drobny, Czech Davis Cup and Olympic hockey star, and then roared up from behind to win, 8—10, 11—9, 6—0, 6—3.

Sturgess, a former fighter pilot who spent eight months in a German prison camp and paid his own way here to "find out if I was a tennis player," convinced everybody else that he was as he routed young Herbie (Little Yogi) Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., 9—7, 6—3, 6—2.

That made him the first foreign player to reach the United States finals since 1937, when Baron Gottfried Von Cramm of Germany lost to Don Budge. Sturgess and Gonzales will battle it out for the crown tomorrow and Louise Brough, the blasting blonde from Beverly Hills, will defend her women's title against Mrs. Margaret Osborne Du Pont of Wilmington, Del.

Gonzales, 20-year-old National clay court champion, who yesterday dumped the top seeded Davis Cup star, Frankie Parker, continued his sensational advance with a comeback victory over Drobny which thrilled the crowd of 12,000 wind-swept spectators.

Both reached the finish yesterday.

Oregon Rolls Over Santa Barbara Eleven by 55-7

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 18 (AP).—Oregon warmed up for the football season with a 55-7 opening victory over Santa Barbara here today.

Santa Barbara dominated the first and last minutes of play. Everything in between was Oregon's, and a string of hard-running Oregon backs churned to eight touchdowns.

The passing ace, Norm Brocklin, appeared only briefly, and completed but three of seven tosses.

Santa Barbara's touchdown came on the opening kickoff. Halfback Sam Cathcart took the ball, handed it to Ken Duddridge and he sailed 82 yards for the score.

Lanham Racing Ends on Friday

The 1948 midget automobile racing season will be brought to a close at the West Lanham Speedway Friday night when a 100-lap, or 25-mile, Capital Championship terminates a sevent-event program.

Twenty-eight outstanding drivers will compete, and 16 of these will qualify for the championship grind.

Twelve Offenhauser and 16 Ford V-8 pilots already have entered, and Mike Joseph, veteran Philadelphian who is setting the point-scoring pace and has won two 50-lap events at Lanham thus far, will be one of the outstanding favorites.

Kerr Captures Skeet Crown

Las Vegas, Nev., Sept. 18 (AP).—Alex Kerr of Beverly Hills, Calif., won the high over-all handicap National Skeet championships today by scoring 489 out of a possible 500.

Grant Ilsemg of Houston, Tex., was second with 488, and Joe Frost, jr., San Antonio, was third with 486.

Twenty-four shooters tied for first place with perfect 100s in the all-gauge handicap.

Five Play Centers Open Doors Today

Five after-school play centers will open tomorrow under the sponsorship of the Recreation Department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Catering to youngsters up through the high school level, the five parks through which the program will operate are Jesup Blair, Rock Creek, Bethesda Chevy Chase, Pinecrest, and Kensington.

Designed principally to provide competitive activity for other-than-varsity athletes, the program this year will provide for a full football schedule, including an unlimited league.

McCoy-Sharkey In Rassle Feature

Bulky Bibber McCoy, a familiar old meanie to Turner's Arena customers, comes to grips with former champion Babe Sharkey in the feature wrestling bout on Wednesday night's card.

McCoy will be out to break Laverne Baxter's reputation as the meanest man in the Turner stable. Baxter will have an opportunity to defend it in a special bout against Hans Kampter on the same card.

Lutheran Victor

Northfield, Minn., Sept. 18 (AP).—Pacific Lutheran College launched an aerial attack today to outdo St. Olaf College, 14-6, in a football game.

26,000 See TCU Beat Kansas, 14-13

Lawrence, Kans., Sept. 18 (AP).—A beefy Texas Christian University football team outlasted Kansas' Jayhawks for a 14 to 13 victory today in a game marred by fumbles and blocked kicks.

An estimated 26,000 fans, largest crowd ever to attend a Kansas University home opener, watched the lighter Jayhawks battle the big Horned Frogs furiously before dropping their first regular season loss in 15 games.

The sweltering heat took the edge off offensive play and both teams appeared spent after the first half.

Blocked punts accounted for two touchdowns—one for TCU and one Kansas—and a fumble set up another marker for the Texans.

The Horned Frogs, after twice being stalled deep in Kansas territory got a break on the last play of the first quarter that set up the first touchdown. Randy Rogers pounced on a Kansas fumble 10 yards from the 'ayhawks goal line. Bud French, halfback had dropped a lateral from Quarterback Dick Gilman.

It took TCU only four plays to score after the turn of the quarter. All-Southwest Conference Fullback Pete Stout cracked through cetner from the 1-yard line. Homer Ludiker's place-kick put the Texans ahead, 7 to 0.

Neither team scored in the second period.

Kansas got back in the game three minutes after the second half kickoff. End Dave Schmidt blocked Leon Joslin's punt on the TCU 29-yard line. Hugh Johnson, Kansas tackle, scooped up the ball and sprinted for a touchdown. Forrest Griffith's attempted placement was wide.

Moorman Blocks Kick

The next blocked punt for a touchdown went to the Texans' five minutes later. Joslin had kicked out on the Kansas 5-yard line. Frank Pattee had to boot from the Jayhawks' end zone. End Bill Moorman blocked the kick and Wayne Rogers covered the ball for a score. Ludiker's placement gave TCU its fourteenth and winning point.

Kansas scored the only untainted touchdown of the game on a 51-yard drive midway of the final period. Griffith, aided by a couple of Gilman-to-Bryan Sperry passes, placed the ball on the 2-foot line, from where Pattee scored through center. Griffith kicked the point to end all scoring.

Terps Improve In Scrimmage With Penn

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 18.—A rugged Maryland football squad scrimmaged here today against the University of Pennsylvania. While no score was kept, Coach Jim Tatum expressed satisfaction in the improvement of his Terrapins.

Maryland's offense was much more potent than it was against William and Mary last week. Tatum thought he had found his starting backfield quartet in Vic Turyn, Johnny Idzik, Joe Kuchta and Harry Bonk. Turyn's passing was sharp and Hubie Wernet turned in some clever running.

Penn's Dave Coulson got off for a 75-yard run for the best gain of the day. Red and Blue backs who performed well included Al Sica, Carmen Falcone, Harry Injaian and Coulson.

Penn Coach George Munger said he was "disappointed" in his team's pass defense and added, "Maryland's punt-returning certainly should set a lot of teams crazy."

Maryland's only casualty was Idzik, who suffered a slight knee injury. Penn Tackle Jim Conway was the victim of a shoulder separation and Back Bill Talarico bruised a heel.

The Terps open their season next Saturday night at Richmond University.

York Downs Eastern, 12-6

York, Pa., Sept. 18.—York High opened its 1948 football season here tonight by defeating Eastern High of Washington, D. C., 12-6 before 4200 fans.

The winners scored in the first and fourth period. Inners' pass to Brown set up York's first touchdown. With the ball on the 11-yard line, Inners went over after three plunges. A pass, Inners to Brown, put the ball on Eastern's 2-yard line in the fourth period from where Brown went over two plays later on another toss from Inners.

Eastern counted in the second period when Adriani passed to Viqueira, who was stopped at the 7. DiGiovanni went over standing up on the next play.

Oregon State Wins, 27-12, on Passes

Corvallis, Oreg., Sept. 18 (U.P.)—Oregon State displayed a sparkling pass attack to defeat Idaho today, 27 to 12, in the opening Pacific Coast Conference game for both teams before a crowd of 8500.

Idaho held Oregon State to six points in the first half and threatened once from the 12-yard line, but the Beavers rebounded in the second half, making one touchdown in the third quarter and two more in the fourth.

Grid League to Meet

The Alexandria Night Football League will hold an organization meeting tomorrow night at the Alexandria Recreation Center, 1605 Cameron Street in Alexandria. All teams wishing to enter the league are invited to attend.

Grid Dodgers Face Charlotte Today

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 18 (AP).—The Brooklyn Football Dodgers of the All-America Conference arrived here by plane today for their exhibition game with the Charlotte Clippers tomorrow.

For Head Coach Carl Voyles it was a homecoming to Southern Conference territory where, a few seasons back, he assisted Wallace Wade with some of Duke's greatest teams. Later, he became head coach at William and Mary, piloted the Indians to a Southern Conference championship and tutored William and Mary Guard Knox Ramsey to a post on an All America team.

Tribe Trails At Half, 13-0, Then Rallies

Palo Alto, Calif., Sept. 18 (U.P.)—Stanford University's football team ushered in its 1948 season today by staging a second-half comeback and scoring three touchdowns in the final period to down little San Jose State College, 26 to 20.

The Stanford Indians, beaten in every game last year, got their winning score with less than 3 minutes to play. Jack McKittrick, 6-foot, 197-pound guard from Huntington Park, Calif., spoiled what earlier looked like a sure bet for San Jose to win its first game since 1900 against Stanford.

With the score tied at 20-all, McKittrick snagged a pass out of the hands of Chuck Hughes, San Jose quarterback, and sprinted 35 yards for the tally. In five previous games with Stanford, San Jose had never scored a point.

San Jose piled up a first half lead of 13 to 0 largely by capitalizing on breaks. But Stanford, after a half-time talk by former Notre Dame star, Coach Marchie Schwartz, came out to hold their neighbors on the peninsula to a lone tally while scoring once in the third and three times in the fourth.

Newhouser Stops Yanks

ning, took third on John Lindell's bouncer and scored after Joe DiMaggio lined deep to center.

Singles by Rizzuto and Lopat, followed by George Stirnweiss' double, helped the Yanks to two more in the second, but that was all.

Detroit came from behind twice, tying the score at 1-all in the first on Johnny Lipon's double and Vic Wertz's single and knotting it again at 3-3 in the third with two runs on three singles, by Newhouser, Neil Berry and Hoot Evers.

Newhouser's perfect squeeze play bunt in the fourth scored George Vico from third after he had doubled and advanced on Bob Swift's sacrifice.

The game was interrupted twice briefly in the eighth inning by showers.

Split of the last four-game series gave the Yankees a season edge of 13 victories to Detroit's nine in their 22 meetings.

The loss was the 10th against 16 wins for Lopat, who gave nine hits in six innings before giving way to a pinch hitter. Joe Page finished for the Yanks.

Newhouser now has won 18 and lost 11.

Miami Routs Marshall, 38-6

Oxford, Ohio, Sept. 18 (AP).—Miami University's 1947 Sun Bowl champions opened their 1948 football campaign today by routing Marshall College of Huntington, W. Va., 38-6.

Marshall held the favored Ohioans to a 6-6 half-time tie, but lacked reserve strength, and the Redskins ran wild in the second half. Miami rolled up 19 first downs to Marshall's 6, and never punted once during the game.

Langdon Lions Win Grid Opener, 18-0

Cards Scout Burned

Arkansas Wins; Scott Is Star

Little Rock, Sept. 18 (AP).—Arkansas' Razorbacks, though sluggish at times, outclassed little Abilene, Tex., Christian College 40 to 6 today as they opened the 1948 football season and dedicated the State's $1,250,000 War Memorial Stadium here before a sun-blistered crowd of 27,000, largest in Arkansas history.

With Clyde Scott, their great tailback, setting the pace but turning the scoring over to lesser lights, the Razorbacks flashed a powerful running attack which netted 307 yards. Scott, who netted 119 yards on 10 rushes, passed for one touchdown and set up three.

Queen for a Month

GERY is not the only beautiful blonde in the Clifford family, or the only one with a singing voice either. At home, she and her sisters like to gather around the piano for an evening of song. Standing, center, is Joyce, 14, and at right is Randall who at 8 likes music as well as the other Clifford girls.

Mrs. Byron Bids Friends To House Christening; Farm to Be Dream Home

By Marie McNair

WEDNESDAY is moving day for Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams, and today Mrs. William D. Byron is asking a few friends to christen her new house on Williamsburg lane. Mrs. Harold Walker has jumped the gun on the traditional October 1 and is already settled in the John M. Cabot house on S st., which she has leased while Mr. Cabot's duties as Counselor of the American Embassy in Nanking will keep him abroad.

General and Mrs. Adams are like a couple of school kids about their farm near Fredericksburg, Va., which they've just bought. The house itself is tiny, but there are broad acres where a pair of Dobermans, now confined to a little Georgetown garden, may romp, and a gurgling stream which may be harnessed later for a swimming pool.

Unlike the Blandings, the Adams' dream house seems to have been made to order. Within commuting distance from Washington, Adams Farm is to be the typical country house. Madeleine has been scurrying around town for weeks picking up old pieces, old lamps and dozens of pairs of crisp white organdy curtains for every window in the house.

Kerosene lamps have been wired for mazdas and quaint hooked rugs will cover the floors.

Katharine Byron, wearied by the housing situation, is looking forward to her first Washington home built to her own taste. The former Congresswoman from Maryland has been assured she'll have Thanksgiving dinner in her new house, but the preview today will be only from picnic tables in the garden, as the floors are just about to be laid. If it's warm enough today, guests can take a dip in the blue-lined pool.

Of Colonial architecture, the house boasts tall white columns to the roof, a long drawing room looking out to the garden, a sun porch, dining room and library, all on the first floor. There's a recreation room below, where her five sons can make hoopdedo.

Only the two younger boys, David and Louis, both in prep schools, will be at home this year. Bill, eldest of Katharine Byron's offspring, is soon to be off for his sophomore year at Maryland University; James will be a senior at Princeton and Goodloe will begin his sophomore year at the University of Virginia this month.

MEMORIES OF A NEW ENGLAND VACATION:

Fields of yellow goldenrod in the sun, like a golden blanket spread upon the green earth . . . The majesty of Vermont's Green Mountains rising heavenward from meadows dotted with grazing herds . . . A glimpse of a rushing brook through deep and fragrant pines . . . The overwhelming longing to rest on its bank, to be a child again and dip your toes in the cool water.

Everywhere trim, white New England cottages surrounded by emerald green velvet lawns, and beds of featherlike phlox in a riot of shades of pinks and purples . . . A picture postcard beauty effected only by patient fingers and a love of the fruits of the earth.

The stately elms which line the streets of quiet villages where gentle old ladies sit on porches of expensive hotels . . . waiting . . .

Home on the Base

Air Force Plans 'The Good Life' For Its Families

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TODAY IS AIR FORCE DAY. At Air Force bases throughout the country aircraft will be on exhibition, there'll be parades, exhibitions of flying, while groups of huge B-29 planes are timed to return from special overseas missions, flying 4500 miles or more without necessity of refuelling.

Backing this exciting panoply of defense are the home bases, the complex organizations set up by our Government to care for aviators, make military life more easily agreeable for their dependents.

Recently this department stopped over at Davis-Monthan, the home base at Tuscon, Ariz., of two Strategic Air units, the Forty-third and Second Bomber groups. It was a wonderful experience. The "gypsy" units at Davis-Monthan work under what practically amounts to wartime conditions. Hours are long, uncertain. Pilots, crew, mechanics are liable to be ordered off at a few hours' notice, to return a month, six months perhaps a year later.

The Second Bomber group, for instance, was sent to England in early summer supposedly on a 30-day assignment. They're still overseas. No one knows when they'll be ordered back. Meanwhile their wives continue to live on or near the base in a worrisome quandary whether to return home or risk renewing a yearly lease. So, for these strategic units, pleasant living is especially vital as morale sustainer. For if an airman's family is unhappy, dissatisfied the service eventually will lose many of its experienced, badly needed personnel.

Keeping Them Happy

AT DAVIS-MONTHAN 25 per cent of the enlisted men, 90 per cent of the officers are married. There some 6000 military and civilian employes who, plus their dependents, swell the post's population to around 15,000.

Here's what our Government is doing to keep them happy. First for the kids (and the birth rate's terrific)—there's a hospital which provides obstetrical services for a minimum amount, there's a clinic especially for dependents. Schooling's excellent, a nursery school, kindergarten, regular grade school right through the sixth grade and, as nifty help to mamma, a pick-up and return service. On Saturday morning there's a free movie show, a serial, and a couple of comedies, for all the children. At the Officers' Club there's a shallow swimming pool with competent supervision for toddlers and up.

But nicest of all, to our thinking, is the Stork Club! This is a cute cottage surrounded by a picket fenced lawn (and in the Arizona desert a real lawn entails sprinkling all night and considerable loving attention) decorated with gay wallpaper, filled with toys, supplied with cribs and other juvenile paraphernalia. For $7.50 a month a child can be left there anytime—when parents go to movies or out playing bridge—put to bed at designated hours and for an additional 25 cents fed a nourishing meal. Protection against communicable diseases and colds is effected by temperature taking, even the slightest rise tabus admittance. Some of the Stork Club employes are enlisted men's wives who supplement their incomes nicely.

Housekeeping Made Easy

WIVES, BOTH ENLISTED and officers, scarcely need to leave the post. There's self-help laundry where an ordinary week's wash can be done for a quarter. A commissary, where

'Gery' Clifford Likes Sports, Music, Dancing

By Peggy Preston

THE LIFE of a queen can be exciting, glorious. But when "Her Majesty" is 16 and beautiful, a senior in high school and a favorite with her crowd, her reign can be just plain fun.

"I'm having a wonderful time," is how Margery Pepperell Clifford describes her month-long role as queen of the 1948 President's Cup Regatta. Gery, as she is always called, was appointed early this month and will reign until the conclusion of the Gold Cup races September 25 and 26.

Each weekend finds her on the Potomac, where she presides at the various sports events, awards prizes, and adds to the general beauty of the scene. The rest of the week she is a school girl with classes, clubs, dances and dates crowding her life to its limits.

At home, things are usually popping also. Gery is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford. Her father is special counsel to President Truman. She has two equally blonde and graceful sisters, Joyce, 14, and Randall, a bewitching little girl of 8. Topper, a white and black spotted dog, is an established

Recollection of Having Told Her Mother "Shut Up" Just Before Latter's Death Recurs to Woman and Worries Her Terribly

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column daily, and you seem so wise and help so many people that I thought perhaps you might be able to help me. Here is my problem:

Ten years ago my mother died. She was not of very sound mind and it was hard for us children to get along with her at times. On the evening of her sudden death (we hadn't expected it), I said to her, "Shut up," when she was yelling at my father.

Two years ago I started to worry about this and it has been preying on my mind ever since. I can't throw off the despondency I feel. What is the reason for this? What's wrong with me?

I have lost all my friends because I don't want to go any place or do anything. I don't feel worthy of anyone; and I lose days from work because at times I feel that I just cannot go on. Is there any help for me? Please advise. R. B.

Woman's Anxiety Has Other Origin

DEAR R. B.: I have discussed your story with a specialist who confidently says that your despondency isn't really related to the fact that you happened to tell your mother, "Shut up," just shortly before her sudden death.

He says that rueful recollection just happens to coincide with your first conclusive worried awareness of your own sickminded state.

Your dejection has to do with feeling unworthy of human society, you say; and the doctor says this is a typical confession of a schizoid personality,—i. e., one who tends to shun social relationships, owing to a life-habit of misconstruing the meaning of others' attitudes towards him.

The schizoid personality is lonely and withdrawn, also gentle and sensitive as a rule, and to compensate for lack of trustworthy, affectionally-satisfying companionship, he deals too much in introspective thinking, the burden of which is self-accusatory, usually.

Schizoid Drift Dates Away Back

IN GENERAL, the origin of this unhappy trend is to be found in a neglected childhood, in an unfortunate family background; unfortunate in the sense that it afforded the patient little, if any, sympathetic warmhearted maternal advocacy, a form of love-nurture that is indispensable to the development of robust self-confidence.

Denied such mothering, a child will grow up without emotional roots or anchorage; haunted by an unconscious shadowy conviction that he doesn't belong; isn't accepted, anywhere; that he is outcast and merits rejection for guilty cause that he can't quite fathom. Which is somewhat the gist of your worry, I gather.

It is a dangerous drift in adult years, if allowed to go untreated; but the schizoid patient who recognizes his need of specialist help—and you do—is in most cases permanently restored to healthy activity of mind, when given clear insight into the dynamics of his sick anti-social, anti-self attitudes. So, for advice, take this problem to the psychiatric clinic of the finest hospital in your city, and ask steering-information on how to get help. M. H.

Footwear Has Feminine Trend

All signs point to a new era of femininity in footwear. You can see it in the trim leather soles that bestow youthful lines and a youthful gait, in the variety of soft colors, in the way shoes hug feet snugly, even when partly open through cutouts or wide-open shanks. A strictly-after-5 shoe will be the opera pump with slender arched heel and a latticework treatment of the instep. Pumps with detailed vamps are emerging as fashion leaders. For the cocktail hour you may wear a pump-like shoe with a lattice of broad straps climbing high up the instep. For strolling and shopping there's a midheel shoe built on a clean-edged sole of natural leather, with a double-x strap for snug fit.

The slim, feminine look has come to wedges, too. Since style depends on shape, look for wedges with leather bottoms that will keep the shoe—and your foot—in line. One model is seen in forest green suede with two thin bar cutouts on the vamp. Many wedges appear in moccasin slip-on styles, or strapped across the instep and brightly buckled at the side.

BROWN is an ideal fall color and Jacques Heim, the Paris couturier,, uses it delightfully in this two-toned costume from his Jeunes Filles collection for exclusive reproduction in this country. The skirt is of striped worsted in brown and tan. It is topped by a brown velveteen jacket with little boy collar and nipped-in waist. Brown velveteen beret completed the ensemble. Available in Debutante Shop at Julius Garfinckel & Co.

Buttonhooks and Spats Return to Favor

Spats kept grandma warm but they're giving glamour to daughter—and to mother! The spats are generally three-buttoned, lend a high-riding effect with pumps that are delicate and slim-toed, on graceful curved heels. In grey, black or beige suede, or even checked tweeds, they'll adorn many pretty feet. And though they're to be worn over slim tapering pumps, the leather soles the shoes are built on will insure steadiness underfoot.

Maine's New Senator Has Feather in Bonnet As Expert Vote-Getter

By Genevieve Reynolds

HANDSOME Margaret Chase Smith's phenomenal landslide victory in the Maine elections not only turned her into a United States Senator but an expert in vote-getting. Old-time male politicos, sage in piling up ballots, now are beating trails to her Skowhegan home to inquire, "What's your technique?"

Trim-figured, alert Mrs. Smith had never been defeated since she was first elected to the House of Representatives on June 3, 1940 to fill the unexpired term of her husband, the late Clyde H. Smith. Still when she polled 75 per cent of the vote over her Democratic opponent, Dr. Adrian A. Scolten, last week even the national politicians were impressed.

Smilingly, the first woman Senator from the Pine Tree State, who is the second of her sex ever to be elected to the office, pointed out that she avoided "mudslinging tactics" and refused to mention any opponent's name during campaign speeches. She could have cited an excellent House record for the duration of her eight years service, too.

Now in addition to answering posers on how to be elected though a woman, fair complexioned Margaret, spends at least 10 hours daily receiving congratulatory missives. When the excitement dwindles a little, she hopes to get a little rest before returning to the Capital around October 1. She'll have to pick a new office and move over to the Senate side before Congress reconvenes. Just which office she lands in depends on who is returned and who is defeated in the forthcoming elections across the Nation.

FOR the record it will be recalled that Mrs. Smith has chalked up many firsts in her 47 years. She was the first woman sent to Congress from her native State. Now she's the first from her State to be elected to the Senate and the only woman from the Republican Party (to date) to win that post. The first woman, however, to be elected to the Senate was Hattie W. Caraway (D., of Ark.), now a member of the United States Employes Compensation Commission.

Other premieres for the Lady from Maine include: Only woman ever chosen permanent chairman for State Republican convention in Maine; first woman to be appointed to the House Naval Affairs Committee—an assignment which sent her with a subcommittee of 10 on a 25,000-mile inspection tour of the Pacific war theater back in 1944 and she is the first woman ever to sail on a United States destroyer in wartime.

The Maine Congresswoman is a member of the important House Armed Services Committee. She was particularly active in legislation affecting the Waves, introducing bills raising their maximum rank

Gen. Spaatz's Daughter Married to Walter Bell

By Norma Lanum

THE WEDDING of Katherine Spaatz and Walter Bell, culminating an Anglo-American romance, is the service set's most talked-about news today.

The pretty daughter of Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, recently retired Chief of Staff of the Air Force, and Mrs. Spaatz, and Mr. Bell, son of Canon George Fancourt Bell of England, were married at 4:30 yesterday Col. Charles F. Carpenter, chief of Air Force chaplains, officiated.

There was no time for elaborate preparations for the ceremony, since the bridegroom, private secretary to Britain's former Ambassador here, Lord Inverchapel, had so much trouble getting passage from London. He was finally able to get reservations on a Dutch steamer out of Rotterdam and arrived here Wednesday.

The Lyle Wilsons' Massachusetts ave. residence was the scene of the wedding, attended only by members of the families, and the reception following. General and Mrs. Spaatz had hoped the redecorating job on their Georgetown house would be completed in time for the ceremony, but the latest estimate on the rehabilitation date for their place is October 1.

The Wilson house was filled with seasonal white blossoms—glads, chrysanthemums, dahlias, etc. Escorted to the improvised altar by her father, the lovely bride wore an ankle-length frock of white taffeta and carried a white bridal bouquet. Her maid of honor was Miss Virginia Sherwood of New York. Frederick Payne of New York served as best man.

The couple left the reception for a few days at Rehoboth Beach before sailing Friday on a Polish liner for southern France. They will honeymoon for a month in France and then make their home in London, where Mr. Bell is with the British Foreign Office.

Mrs. Spaatz tells us that the newlyweds have a furnished apartment awaiting them in London which is really quite a treat since the housing shortage there is supposed to be worse than ours.

Among the out-of-town guests here to congratulate the newlyweds were Mr. and Mrs. William Ballard—she's the former Bettina Wilson, fashion editor of Vogue—Miss Rhoda Dawson and Miss Julia Townsend, all of New York.

Prenuptial parties for Mr. Bell and his bride included a supper Wednesday given by Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Ruddock; Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Hopper's luncheon Thursday in the garden of their Georgetown house; Mrs. Lyle C. Wilson's cocktail party the same day, and a party Friday evening given by Helen Kirkpatrick, William Walton and John White at Mr. Walton's house.

REAR ADMIRAL and Mrs. Edward C. Ewen are back at their Wardman Park apartment after two weeks vacationing in Chicago, where they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. The Navy public relations chief and his wife had been stationed in Chicago for two years before they came to Washington last winter and were honored at several parties given by their service friends there.

COL. and Mrs. Emil W. Leard have asked several guests in for a housewarming party this afternoon at their new place on Western ave. They've been stationed in the Capital for more than three months now, but could not find a place to live until just recently.

Other Army persons boasting new houses are Col. and Mrs. John T. Westermeier—theirs is on Kanawha st.—and Col. and Mrs. William E. Carraway, who have just moved in at 6409 31st st.

Col. and Mrs. James C. Kimbrough entertained at a cocktail party Friday at their quarters at Walter Reed.

Miss Lanigan Mr. Symmes Are Married

IN a gown of ivory lace, Miss Margaret Anne Lanigan and Courtland Symmes were married yesterday at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase. Mrs. Symmes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Lanigan of Chevy Chase, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Matthews Symmes of Wilmington, N. C. The Rev. E. Carl Lyon officiated at the ceremony at 4 p. m., and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. Lanigan gave his daughter in marriage. Her gown was fashioned with tight bodice, long sleeves, and long train. Her fingertip veil of ivory illusion was held by a Juliet cap of seed pearls, and her shower bouquet was made of bride's roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Lanigan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Miss Katherine Lanigan, another sister, was junior bridesmaid. Mrs. Thomas Rixey and Miss Mary Catherine Welch were bridesmaids.

Andrew Symmes served as best man, and the ushers were John Symmes, Weddell Harriss, John Christian, Jasper Hiers and William Shoemaker.

The bride attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. The bridegroom is in his senior year at George Washington University. He is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Symmes will honeymoon at Virginia Beach and after October 1, they will be at home at 1731 New Hampshire ave. The couple will move to Wilmington, N. C., in the summer of 1949.

Mr., Mrs. St. Lewis To Give Circus Party

YELLOW giraffes, a striped circus tent and flying balloons decorate the informal invitations sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Roy St. Lewis for a circus party at Rancho Mio, their country home in Maryland, on September 25. The invitations also serve as a road map with directions from the 16th st. District line to "Cuff's Store" and Ednor Postoffice.

Miss Nancy Davis Is Married To Mr. Williams at St. Alban's

IN ST. ALBAN'S CHURCH yesterday afternoon Miss Nancy Ellicott Davis became the bride of Frank Bass Williams. The Rev. Alexander C. Zabriskie, dean of the Virginia Theological Seminary, performed the ceremony with the Rev. Malcolm Marshall assisting.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Jefferson Davis of Washington. Mr. Williams' parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pardee Williams of Alexandria, Va.

Dr. Davis gave his daughter in marriage. She was costumed in white satin with an heirloom applique lace veil and heirloom lace handkerchief. She carried gardenias and ivy.

The bride's honor attendants were her sisters, Mrs. Robert Ryan Crowder, jr., and Miss Mary Ellen Davis. The bridesmaids were Misses Laura McGehee Davis, Marguerite Douglas Davis, Patricia Francis Davis, sisters of the bride, and Miss Athlynn Cecelia Williams, a sister of the bridegroom. Miss Edith Fry Darlington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McCullough Darlington of Chevy Chase, was flower girl, and the ring bearer was Robert E. Latham, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Latham of Alexandria.

Richard Pardee Williams 3d was best man for his brother. Guests were seated by John M. Daniel, jr., a cousin of the bridegroom; George H. Waterhouse, Chester F. Surba and Walter C. Imrie. The wedding reception took place at the Chevy Chase Club.

The couple will reside in Baltimore, Md., following a Southern wedding trip. Mrs. Williams attended Potomac School and was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary. She made her debut in Washington and has been associated with Eastern Air Lines in Washington and in Boston, Mass. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Douglas of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the great niece of Jefferson Davis and the great-great-great-grandaughter of Andrew Ellicott who surveyed the City of Washington.

Mr. Williams attended St. Paul's School, Baltimore, Md., and the University of North Carolina.

World Monetary Meeting Opens Socially at Cocktail Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

FINANCIALLY SPEAKING, most of the important people of the world will be in Washington next week attending the International Bank and Monetary Conference. The conference will open socially at a cocktail party on Monday, September 27, at the Shoreham Hotel. Dinners and luncheons will follow throughout the week.

The British Embassy is preparing for the visit of their Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, and the Belgians will be represented at the conference by their Minister of Food and Imports, Moens de Fernig, and their Minister of Finance, Gaston Eyskens.

Mme. van Kleffens, chatelaine of the Netherlands Embassy, has started the fall season in a whirl. No sooner had Juliana ascended the throne, than the new Dutch Foreign Minister, Derk Stikker, arrived in town, and there were more parties. Next week she and the Ambassador will be hosts again at parties given in honor of P. Lieftinck, Dutch Minister of Finance, who will attend the Monetary Conference.

THE INDIAN Embassy has done more than its share in supplying beauties to grace diplomatic functions. Thursday afternoon it outdid itself when the Maharani of Jaipur was presented at a reception held at the Embassy between 6 and 8 o'clock.

The Maharani is slim, dark, in her early twenties and has a very sweet face. Her dark beauty was set off by a salmon pink sari, delicately embroidered in seed pearls and silver thread. The Maharani likes to wear pink, powder blue or pale green, and she changes her jewelry with her costume. Thursday she wore at least 100 dazzling sapphires set in many more diamonds.

Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, attended the reception, looked at the Maharani in surprise and said, 'Why, I knew your mother when she was a girl.'"

Another guest at the party was the much-traveled Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde, who will make a trip to the Philippines next month. It will be his third time across the Pacific this year. The Ambassador has also made a trip around the world this year, but he likes home port at Annapolis best. There he keeps his boat, Limbas 3d, for weekend relaxation.

A few guests at a time are invited on the boat, as the Ambassador claims too many are too much work. "When you give them tomato juice for breakfast," he explained, "they ask for orange juice. And when you give them orange juice, they ask for tomato juice."

INDEPENDENCE DAY for Chile was celebrated yesterday at a reception at the Embassy. The Ambassador and Senora de Nieto del Rio were there to receive.

Chile was one of the earliest to break away from Spain, declaring independence on September 18, 1810.

There is a rumor that Dora Tarchiani's wedding may take place in Washington some time in December. Her parents, the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, will return to Washington the 1st of October.

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, has gone to New York to attend the opening of the Ballet de l'Opera at City Hall on Tuesday evening. The Ballet will be at Constitution Hall October 6 and 7.

Eliahu Epstein, Special Representative of the State of Israel to the United States, has changed his name to Eliahu Eilat, an old Hebraic name.

Crans Welcome Guests to New Home

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell Crans invited about 200 of their friends for cocktails yesterday to see their new house in Bradley Hills Grove near Bethesda.

The Crans moved in in April but since then Mrs. Crans, the former Doris Beckwith, has been at Tidewater, Va., for the summer months and is only just now beginning to enjoy her home.

Mrs. Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith was there yesterday to assist her daughter, and among those whom they greeted were Mr. and Mrs. William Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vincent, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Titus, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin.

Motor in Maine

Col. and Mrs. James V. Hunt and their son, J. V. Hunt, jr., are on a motor trip in Maine and after a visit to Dr. and Mrs. Charles Anthony Robinson at Poland Spring, will go to Castine and Bangor. They will visit Miss Marion Martin there.

STOP- loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST!
You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting modern skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve the tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally possesses.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths!—it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Betty Bowen Is Married In New Jersey

MISS BETTY BOWEN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cary Bowen, formerly of Washington, now of East Orange, N. J., was married yesterday to Gordon West of Halifax, Yorkshire, England. The ceremony took place at the First Presbyterian Church in Orange and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

After a wedding trip in Canada and New England the newlyweds will sail on the Queen Elizabeth late in October for England, where they will make their home.

The bride attended Washington schools and is a graduate of Swarthmore College and Pratt Art Institute. She is the author and illustrator of several children's books. Her latest, "Jan's Victory," will be published in the near future. Mr. Bowen, her father, has been state representative of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for the past two years.

Jno. Kuhn and Miss Jones Wed

Miss Anita Coxe Jones became the bride of John Lucien Kuhn of Washington yesterday at the Church of St. Peter in the Great Valley, Paoli, Pa. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Milton Jones of Phoenixville, Pa., and her husband is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William S. Kuhn.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore heirloom rosepoint lace over tulle with a veil of matching lace. She carried stephanotis and bouvardia. Miss Elise Latrobe Jones was maid of honor for her sister and Misses Nancy C. Gross and Susan N. Coleman were bridesmaids. Miss Barbara Warden Morris, niece of the bride, and Miss Sally Hooker, niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls.

Wendel S. Kuhn was best man for his brother and John A. Wilson, Robert J. Hooker 3, Maj. Henry Ashton Crosby and Samuel W. Morris were ushers. A reception was held at the bride's home.

The couple will reside in Washington where the bridegroom is with the State Department. He attended Leland Stanford University and served as a lieutenant in the Navy during the war. The bride served with the Marine Corps' Women's Reserve.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. JAMES KEITH of Fairfax Court House, Va., and their daughter, Maria Keith, and their son, John Keith, are visiting at Virginia Beach.

Bryson Wood, jr., of Baltimore, left there on Sunday to accompany his brother, William M. Wood, to Charlottesville, where he has entered the university.

Mrs. Hilda Shaw of Warrenton is visiting in Bermuda. She will return to her Warrenton home the middle of September. Her daughter, Miss Yolande Shaw, who is visiting in Florida, will also return to Virginia the middle of September and will leave soon after for Bryn Mawr College.

The Church of the Advent in Westbury, Long Island, was the setting on September 11 for the wedding of Miss Theodore Winthrope, daughter of Mrs. Archibald Cary Randolph of Grafton, near Upperville, Va., and of Robert Winthrope of Long Island, to Thomas L. Higginson, son of Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, jr., of near Marshall, Va., and of the late James Jackson Higginson.

Mr. Winthrope gave his daughter in marriage and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Amory Winthrope, was maid of honor. Other bridal attendants were another sister of the bride, Miss Cornelia Winthrope of Upperville; Mrs. Anthony Briggs, jr., and the Misses Laura Leonard, Elizabeth Wade, Patty Gabelman and Mimi Foss. James J. Higginson was best man for his brother and the ushers were G. Norman Bacon, William W. Bodine, jr., John E. D. Irving, William R. Frothingham, Thomas Gardiner, Endicott Peabody, Richard G. Blaine, R. Fulton Cutting 2d, Dr. H. Clay Frick, Charles R. Leanard, jr., Gordon R. McGrath, Augustine G. Paine 2d, Anthony L. Villa and Joseph Walker, jr.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home in Westbury of the bride's father and stepmother. The bride was a debutante last winter and is an alumna of the Foxcroft School and has been attending Radcliffe College. Mr. Higginson was graduated from the Groton School and Harvard, and is now studying at Harvard Law School. During the war he served with the Army overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville D. Church will return to Washington from Middleburg early in October, where Mr. Church will assume his duties as attorney in the Patent Division of the Department of Justice.

Gen. and Mrs. George C. Marshall motored to Berryville on Saturday for the wedding of the late Gen. "Billy" Mitchell's daughter, Miss Lucy Trumball Mitchell, when she was married to Kenneth Gilpin, jr.

Adm. Richard Evelyn Byrd was also present at the wedding and entered the church with his mother, Mrs. R. E. Byrd of Winchester. Gen. Carl Spaatz of the Air Force also attended.

The Turner family held their reunion September 12. They met at the parish house at the Episcopal Church in The Plains, later motoring to Kinloch, the Turne home in this section. (Here large tables were set up in the front lawn for serving.)

Peeling Apples Improves Sauce

Although it may take more time to peel apples before cooking them for applesauce, studies at the New York State Experiment Station show that the flavor of the sauce generally is better. When apples are cooked unpeeled and then strained, the sauce may have a bitter taste from the peel.

Flavor and color both are better if the apples are cooked rapidly in a covered pan. Long slow cooking destroys the delicate apple flavor and may darken the sauce. A tight cover on the pan helps hold in some of the volatile flavor or bouquet of the apple.

Party Rallies Engage Interest at Rehoboth

By Virginia Cullen

REHOBOTH BEACH, Del., Sept. 18.—This section of "the first State in the Union" is becoming more and more politically conscious as election time approaches, with some big party leaders centering their activities hereabouts.

Next Tuesday at the county seat of Georgetown, some 15 miles distant, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, will speak at a rally at noon, one of his three appearances over the State, that include the capital at Dover, and at Wilmington.

Governor Dewey's campaign manager, Herbert F. Brownell, brought his family here over the past week-end, where they were the guests of former United States Senator John G. Townsend, chairman of the United States Senate committee. The former Senator's son, Julian E. Townsend, honored them at a dinner at the Townsend summer home here.

Some "inside Washington" information was given out this week by a veteran White House correspondent and radio commentator, Earl Godwin, who is vacationing here at his summer cottage. The Rehoboth Chamber of Commerce corraled him for a talk on Tuesday night and last night he addressed the Delaware Bankers Association at its first postwar convention, held at the Rehoboth Beach Country Club.

Speaks on Economy

Mr. Godwin counseled the Chamber of Commerce members to forget partisan politics and look to such organizations as their own to set the spark for any economy reformation. He believes there is "no vicious spending done down in Washington," and that the "powers that be are sitting up nights trying to find out what to do." He further cautioned that "partisan politics stifles any attempt at economy." Then in a lighter tone he advocated a "common sense party," saying that once when he made that suggestion on the radio, people took him seriously and wrote him letters by the hundreds.

Rehoboth is having the usual influx of early autumn vacationists, while many cottage owners have decided to remain a few weeks longer to enjoy the pleasant fall weather that still permits ocean bathing.

Mrs. Y. V. Allnutt of Chevy Chase, Md., has returned to her cottage here after a two-week trip to Lake Kezar, Me., and Saratoga, N. Y.

Guests this week of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel G. Conant at their apartment on Maryland ave. were Mr. and Mrs. Bosley Ensor of Baltimore. The Conants' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Gilbert Conant, jr., who were married last Saturday at Chevy Chase, are spending their honeymoon at Virginia Beach, and this weekend will arrive here for a short visit with Mr. Conant's parents.

Art Exhibit Shown

The permanent collection of works of art of the Rehoboth Art League was hung on Thursday with new additions this year, including a striking water color painting by Thornton Oakley of Villanova, Pa. On Sunday at the studio tea when the collection goes on display for the winter, Mrs. Howard S. Schroeder of Lewes, wife of a league art instructor, will be hostess, assisted by Mrs. G. Herbert Orton, jr., of Lewes. Mrs. Howard Aydelotte Pool of Middletown, Del., has been named cohostess for the following Sunday tea with her daughter, Mrs. L. S. Dail of Cambridge, Md.

An increase in number of planes attending the round-up here last weekend of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association was disclosed by the Rehoboth Airport Monday. Instead of the 250 planes that arrived by the skyways, as first reported, they continued to come in from all parts of the East, bringing the total to 412, breaking all previous round-up flights of the A.O.P.A. They came from 19 States.

Miss Frances Oler of the Rehoboth Art League was a patient this week in the Beebe Hospital for treatment of an injured foot. Her injury has delayed her departure for Succasunna, N. J., where she will teach art the coming semester.

Gives Stag Party

Thomas Frost of Warrenton, Va., has been entertaining 17 friends at a stag house party at the Frost cottage. Mr. Frost invites his Virginia friends each September for fishing and swimming.

Other Washingtonians who have arrived for autumn vacations are Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. White, who wil be at their Henlopen ave. summer home until the early part of November.

Mrs. Fenton Leith of Washington was the weekend guest of her sister, Mrs. W. W. Chiswell, at Hemlock Hedge.

Open house for their friends was held Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sterritt, jr., also of Washington.

Dr. Robert D. Russell, who has just returned from Venezuela, and Mrs. Russell, have arrived to occupy their Columbia ave. cottage until October.

Col. and Mrs. Henry Berliner have returned temporarily to Washington, but expect to be back at their Rehoboth summer home later on.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fehr of Whitemarsh, Pa., are now occupying their cottage, Captain's Walk, and have been entertaining Mrs. Fehr's brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. John Watson and daughter, Gail, of Baltimore. The Count and Countess Jacques de Ferluc of Washington were among their house guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Koones of Bethesda have returned home for a few weeks and plan to come back for an October vacation at their new cottage in Henlopen Acres.

Bicycle Tours

Miss Creech was graduated from Meredith College. Her fiance, a veteran of three years' service in the armed forces, attended Virginia Military Institute and George Washington University.

The wedding will take place this winter.

Mrs. Preu Returns

Mrs. Fred Lee Preu, who signs her paintings "Bobbee", is back from Dark Harbor, Me., where she spent the summer at Faholo, her cottage at the resort.

At Homestead

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. O'Donoghue, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Alan Mills are at the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va., for a brief stay.

Capt. Sullivan Engaged to Miss Burgard

Mrs. Crawford Burgard of Columbus, Ga., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Annette Crawford Burgard, to Capt. John Stephen Sullivan, jr., USA, of Fort Benning, Ga., and Washington. Captain Sullivan is the son of Col. John Stephen Sullivan, USA, retired, and Mrs. Sullivan of Washington.

Miss Burgard was graduated from Duke University, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, and was presented to society in Columbus at the Cotillion Club's 1946 Christmas Ball. She is a member of the Junior League.

Captain Sullivan was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., with the class of 1944. During the war he saw service overseas with the Sixty-ninth Division.

The wedding will take place in November.

Academy Women's Club To Hear Adm. Holloway

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 18.—An address by Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, will feature the first meeting of the Naval Academy Women's Club to be held Tuesday, October 5. Plans for the new season were formulated at an executive meeting, held in the home of the president, Mrs. Rollo N. Norgaard. Admiral Holloway will speak on "Problems of Command." At the board meeting the program chairman, Mrs. Elmer M. Jackson, jr., assisted by Mrs. Paul R. Heineman, discussed future programs including the fashion show to be held in November.

The meetings of the club will be held in the lounge of the North Severn Officers' Club the first Tuesday in each month. Those eligible for membership are the immediate families of active, retired, reserve, deceased Naval, Marine and Army officers, and the civilian instructors of the Naval Academy and Postgraduate School residing in Annapolis and vicinity.

Weddings Announced

Several interesting weddings were solemnized in Annapolis last Saturday.

Miss Margaret Garcia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Modesto Garcia, of Tampa, Fla., and New York, and Lieut. (j. g.) Clifford Eugene Hunter, USN, were married in the Naval Academy Chapel in the presence of a large group of relatives and friends.

On the Thursday before the wedding, Mrs. Edward F. Gallagher entertained at a party in honor of the bride, who was her house guest. Mrs. Arthur M. Carter and Mrs. Max Harnish poured, and Mrs. Edward Bankworth assisted in service.

Prof. and Mrs. Homer B. Winchell of Round Bay, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Nancy Winchell Hutchins, to Allen Parker Arnold, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger David Arnold of Kunming, China, on Sunday afternoon at Silver Bay, on Lake George, New York. The Rev. Nevin Kirk of Philadelphia performed the ceremony, and Frank Lendrim of Oberlin Conservatory was the organist. A reception for more than a hundred guests followed the ceremony. After October 1, the couple will reside in Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Edna Irene Rand, daughter of Edward S. Rand and the late Mrs. Rand of Concord, N. H., became the bride of Richard Gardiner Chaney 3d, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. Gardiner Chaney, at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Annapolis, September 10. The Rev. Burrett E. McBee performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate family. Attending the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Chaney, twin brother and sister-in-law of the bridegroom, who were married recently in St. Anne's Church here. The bride is on the nursing staff of the Emergency Hospital.

Come for Wedding

Dr. and Mrs. C. Howard Darrow came here from Pacific Palisades, Calif., to attend the wedding of their son, Paul, and Miss Bernadette Baldwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Baldwin of Annapolis, which took place Saturday morning at a 9 o'clock nuptial mass in St. Mary's Church here.

Capt. and Mrs. John Leslie Melgaard of the Naval Academy have announced the engagement of their daughter, Carol Joan, to Lieut. Daniel William Wildfong, USN, son of Mrs. Eugene Lemke of St. Louis, Mo.

The wedding will take place on December 18 in the Naval Academy Chapel.

Miss Melgaard is a graduate of Holton Arms and has been attending Wheelock College in Boston. Lieutenant Wildfong, who is currently attached to the postgraduate school here, is a graduate of the Naval Academy with the class of 1943.

Mr. and Mrs. George Charles McGuckian of Annapolis announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Elsie, to William Arthur Hibbard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Adams Hibbard of Lynn, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Terwilliger of Eastport announce the marriage of their daughter, Janet, to Charles Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Howard of Annapolis, on Saturday in the College Avenue Baptist Church here. The Rev. W. C. Wood officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

Greenacres Arrive

Mrs. Alvord J. Greenacre, wife of Captain Greenacre, USN, with her son and daughter, William and Catherine, arrived here on Wednesday from Newport, R. I., to take up residence at 92 Duke of Gloucester st., where they will spend the winter while Captain Greenacre is on sea duty in the Mediterranean. They were joined over the weekend by the Greenacres' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. James N. P. Lawrence, who will make their home here with Mrs. Greenacre while Mr. Lawrence attends Johns Hopkins University.

Leesburg Party Honors Miss Monroe and Fiance

LEESBURG, Va., Sept. 18.—Miss Jean Stewart Monroe, daughter of Charles S. Monroe, principal of Leesburg High School, and Mrs. Monroe, has chosen Saturday, September 25, for her marriage to Robert Gilliam Porter, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gilliam Porter, of Hyattsville, Md. The wedding will take place at 7 in the evening at the home of the bride's parents in Ashburn. The Rev. Henry L. Willis, Presbyterian minister, will performer the ceremony.

The announcement of the wedding date was made at an informal party on Friday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Monroe entertained for their daughter and her fiance.

Miss Monroe wore a floor-length gown of light blue taffeta, with a corsage of pink rosebuds, and her mother was dressed in a black lace floor-length frock with a corsage of red rosebuds.

Miss Mary Porter Evans, who has been spending the summer in Washington and Leesburg, left Monday to spend a week with her mother, Mrs. Alice Robinson Evans at Intervale, N. H. She will return to Leesburg to visit in the home of her fiance, Alfred L. B. di Zerega 3d, before going to Winston-Salem, N. C., where she will finish her senior year at Salem College.

Reenters College

Miss Mary Howard left Sunday for Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., where she has enrolled for the coming session. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Herbert Howard, and other members of the family who motored to Fredericksburg for the day. On Tuesday, Miss Mary Jane McIntosh and Miss Anna Cobb left for Fredericksburg to reenter Mary Washington College this fall.

Miss Patricia Jackson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James T. Jackson, has entered St. Catherine's School, Richmond, where she will be a junior in the high school. Miss Mary Page Hutchison left this week for Decatur, Ga., where she will be a sophomore at Agnes Scott College. Miss Jane Atwell will return to Averett College, Danville. Arthur H. Fulton 3d, James Walker Fulton, Frank P. Scott, jr., and Joe Zimmerman left this week for Randolph-Macon Academy, Front Royal. Robert A. Orr, who has been spending a short vacation with his brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. William P. Bodmer, returned this week to the College of William and Mary, where he will complete his senior year. He will then enter the Richmond Medical College for the study of medicine. Robert Fiske returned this week to the College of William and Mary.

Sister Is Visitor

Mrs. B. Powell Morrison, who returned this week to Knox House, Leesburg, after visiting in Charlotte and Winston-Salem, N. C., has as her guest her sister, Mrs. Robert S. Lanier of Charlotte.

Miss Miriam Tittman of Washington and Miss Mason Castleman of Washington visited here over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Ashbrook, jr., and children of Cambridge, Mass., who have been spending several months with Mrs. Ashbrook's mother, Mrs. A. L. B. di Zerega, will return to Cambridge on Monday. Mr. Ashbrook, an instructor in English at Harvard College, will contnue his work for a Ph. D. degree.

Miss Lucy di Zerega, student at Graduate Hospital, Philadelphia, arrived Friday to spend the weekend with her mother, Mrs. A. L. B. di Zerega.

Mrs. Walton Saffer, Mrs. Eva G. McCabe and Mrs. C. R. Ahalt were hostesses to the Woman's Auxiliary of St. James' Church on Monday afternoon. The meeting was held in the parish hall.

Latin American Dance Class

South American members of the International Student House, 1825 R st. nw., conduct classes in their native dances each Friday at the clubhouse for members and their guests.

Another feature of the clubhouse this season is a series of foreign films shown every other Saturday. Plans for a new lecture series are also under way.

More information on activities at the International Student House may be obtained by calling Michigan 9411 or Michigan 4007.

Eleanor McGowan Is Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bachelor McGowan of Harmony, R. I., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Bachelor, to Horace Franklin Byrne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Byrne of New York City. The wedding will take place in November at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride-elect was graduated from the Mary C. Wheeler School of Providence, R. I., and attended Mount Holyoke College. She was a member of the Free French Delegation in Washington from 1941 to 1946. Since March 1947, she has been a member of the United Nations secretariat.

Mr. Byrne was graduated from Choate School, Wallingford, Conn., and attended Union College. During the war, he was connected with the United States Government in Washington and Ottawa, Canada. He is now with the United Nations at Lake Success.

Marshall-Seaman Betrothal Announced

The Rev. and Mrs. William C. Marshall of Bedford, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Page Meredith Marshall, to Henry Frederick Seaman, son of the Rev. Cecil E. Seaman of Phoenix, Ariz.

Miss Marshall attended Stuart Hall, at Staunton, Va., and St. Mary's Junior College, Raleigh, N. C. Mr. Seaman was graduated from the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., and served in the Navy as a Lieutenant. He is now a student at the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

Miss Jean O'Brien Honored at Tea

Mrs. John Hall Axford and Miss Sarah Lipton of Memphis, Tenn., entertained at tea yesterday at the Army and Navy Club in honor of Miss Jean O'Brien, who is leaving soon for The Hague.

The occasion was a gay reunion for a number of the guests who have recently returned from assignments at American embassies abroad. Miss Lipton is just back from Brussels, where she had been stationed for the last two and a half years.

Mrs. John Morrison Kerr was among those presiding at the tea table which was decorated with flowers in shades of blue, lavender and rose. Others taking their turn at the tea table were Mrs. Sidney Harrison, Mrs. Wingrove Bathon, Mrs. George Fiske Dudley, Miss Virginia Jones and Miss Katherine Wilke.

The Air Force at Home

every imaginable kind of food is sold almost wholesale, is supplemented by two Post Exchanges stocked with an extraordinary variety of goods including clothing and furniture, all very much below regular store prices. There's a filling station, a barber shop, a lending library, two movie theaters where brand new films are shown for a modest 24 cents admission.

To round out community existence the post has a regular post-office, Catholic and Protestant churches, a legal office where service men can make a will, get power of attorney or advice all for free. For the sportively inclined there are tennis courts and a gym sponsored by the Special Services, a military unit which uses any profits from movies and Post Exchange to finance these sports.

One of the most remarkable features of post life is the educational program, run by T. I. and E. (Troop Information and Education). Any serviceman on the base can get a high school diploma or college degree by correspondence course. Besides, four evenings a week instructors come out from Tucson to give courses in English, History and Public Speaking. It costs $2 to enroll, all sorts of equipment is furnished and anyone is privileged to take two courses at a time. He can keep studying indefinitely without paying an additional enrollment fee.

Luxury at the Clubs

BOTH THE ENLISTED MEN'S Service Club, the non-Commissioned Officers' Club and the Officers' Club are the heighth of luxury. Both enlisted men and officers have their own swimming pools. There are lounges, terraces, restaurants where delicious food is served (we lunched on veal cutlet, French fried potatoes, iced tea, chocolate ice cream, rolls and such extras which tasted far better than food served in some expensive Washington restaurants we could name!)

The social program is staggering. Officers wives meet every second and fourth Wednesday afternoons, give a monthly tea, run a little theatre group, sew for hospitals, send flowers to the sick. There's dancing to juke box music every night and on Saturday's different squadrons sponsor dances at which "name" bands are imported from vast distances.

Friday is stag night, with free cocktails for the gents while the little women foregather to play bridge. A buffet of magnificent proportions is given weekly and there's a bingo evening at which the most extravagant prizes we've seen in years are given away.

The hitch in this otherwise idyllic existence is, of course, housing. On the base there are only 117 "sets" or apartments for officer families when fully 500 are needed. Most of these are in barracks which have been reconverted to apartments at a cost of about $5000 apiece. With four "sets" to a building, the total cost is $20,000 and the materials are so flimsy that within a few years another $5000 will be needed to rehabilitate each one.

Meanwhile many of the troops are quartered in tar paper barracks, and though a wartime-commenced building project will soon provide an additional 137 "sets"—a total of 1500 is needed to house them properly.

Housing Problem Is Intense

ENLISTED MEN and officers who can't obtain quarters on the base are forced to pay intown rents so exorbitant that their military rental allowance is entirely inadequate. A small one bedroom, furnished house in Tuscon costs about $150 a month.

What the commander at Tuscon wants to do is to have reliable neighborhood contractors build permanent housing units which could be paid for in time by officers' and enlisted men's rental allowances. The contractors are anxious to undertake this if the government will guarantee amortization over a specified period. Should the base shrink in personnel the houses could be easily sold. However, Congress has so far refused any guarantee and has made insufficient housing appropriations. Not only at Davis-Monthan but at every other base we visited the situation was similar and with so much effort devoted to satisfying dependents it is a shame to risk losing so much on housing.

Coming Events

D. C. Red Cross Launches Drive For 1186 Volunteer Workers

Mrs. David E. Finley, chairman of the District Red Cross Volunteer Services, has announced that in order to meet growing demands for Red Cross services in the District of Columbia area, an intensive drive for 1186 new volunteers will get under way Monday.

The additional Red Cross workers are needed for work in Federal and civilian hospitals, for the new District Blood Center, to serve in disaster and other emergency situations, and for other chapter activities, Mrs. Finley said.

The new District Blood Center alone requires dozens of nurse's aides, staff aides, canteen and motor service workers monthly, she pointed out.

Mrs. Finley said the needs of the chapter's volunteer services at this time can only be met adequately by the recruitment of 300 additional Gray Ladies, 121 nurse's aides, 56 arts and skills workers, 350 staff aides, 200 motor service drivers, 20 canteen workers, 30 social welfare aides, and 125 surgical dressings workers.

She added that numerous clubs and organizations are needed to provide recreation and entertainment for hospital patients, as part of the Red Cross entertainment and instruction service.

"The success of the Red Cross depends to a large extent on the skills and willing efforts of thousands of men and women who serve as volunteers in this cause," Mrs. Finley said.

"Besides the fact that our job of caring for World War II veterans has just begun," Mrs. Finley continued, "the community of our Nation's Capital has the largest concentration of hospitalized servicemen and women of any in the country. Besides the load of work which Red Cross volunteers carry on in military and other Federal hospitals, civilian hospitals, still understaffed as a result of the recent war, constantly, turn to us for volunteer help."

People who can drive cars, sew, cook, teach crafts, or use a typewriter are urgently asked to get in touch with the Red Cross immediately, she said.

Mrs. Finley asked that all persons interested in becoming Red Cross volunteers call at the chapter house, 1730 E st. nw., for an interview. They may make an appointment for the interview by calling Republic 8300, Extension 2177.

Discussing some of the requirements for volunteer services, Mrs. Finley said that only a driver's license and a desire to be of service is required to become a motor service volunteer. Drivers are needed to take children to clinics, transport blood donor groups to the center, take convalescent veterans to outings, deliver blood to hospitals, and stand ready for emergency calls.

Any women handy with a needle can be of help in the production and supply service, which also makes surgical dressings and knits.

Staff aides are needed to type, handle switchboards, answer telephones, serve as receptionists, work in the public relations office and the Blood Center.

Persons who are tactful and tolerant, with a desire to help others solve personal difficulties, can be trained for the confidential work of social welfare aides. The work is with veterans, servicemen and their families.

Nurse's aides are needed to minister to the sick in Federal and other hospitals, and after training will work in hospitals and clinics under the supervision of the professional staff.

More Gray Ladies are needed to aid in the program dedicated to the health and comfort of hospital patients, and canteen workers are needed to serve food at hospital ward parties, in the chapter canteen and the Blood Center.

Anyone interested in art and handicraft is eligible to become an arts and skills worker, and will be given special training for this service.

In addition, community and other organizations are needed to lend a hand at parties in Federal hospitals, provide hostesses, or plan and assist with outings for the patients.

Speech Clinic Names Patrons For Benefit

Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army, and Mrs. Carl Spaatz, wife of General Spaatz, are among patronesses for the benefit concert to be given by members of the Speech Clinic Foundation on October 29 at 8:30 p. m. at Constitution Hall. Other sponsors are Mrs. Louis Denfeld and Mrs. Millard Tydings.

Mrs. John R. Steelman is general chairman for the event and Matthew Mezzanotte, violinist, will be the artist. Proceeds of the concert will go to assist those in need of speech correction who are without funds.

Mrs. Edward R. Halloran is chairman of tickets which may be purchased from her and also at hotels and Kitt's Concert Bureau.

UDC Chapter Names Delegates

Mrs. Carroll H. May, Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson and Mrs. T. Clifton Howard were chosen delegates to the fifty-third annual convention of the Virginia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, to be held in Petersburg, Va., on October 5-7. They will represent the Mary Custis Lee-Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, UDC, of Alexandria, and were elected at the first meeting of the autumn season held recently.

Mrs. Ferguson Cary, historian general of the UDC, will also attend the convention from Alexandria.

Miss Stump announced the appointment of chairmen of standing committees as follows: Memorial, Mrs. Carroll H. May; education, Mrs. Ferguson Cary; social, Mrs. Mark L. Price; publicity, Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, and house, Mrs. J. J. Baney.

Mrs. Marshall Heads Patrons For Style Show

Heading the list of patronesses for the benefit style show, "Around Town," to be given on September 28, is Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Secretary of State. Also in the diplomatic group is Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador.

The show, a picture of fashions in the Nation's Capital, is being given under the auspices of the Washington Commitee for Education on Alcoholism. It will take place in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. John Allen Dougherty is honorary chairman of the benefit show, and serving as cochairmen are Mrs. George C. Thorpe and Mrs. Philip G. Strong.

Mrs. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, back from her summer vacation at Gibson Island, has accepted the chairmanship of the ticket committee and Mrs. George F. Becker is serving as chairman of the luncheon committee. Recent additions to the patroness list are Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Loy Henderson and Mrs. Butler Clark.

Dresses and hats for the event are being presented by the Washington Fashion Designers Institute in two identical performances, one at 11:30 a. m. and the other at 4 p. m.

Committee Named For Benefit for Christ Child Farm

Mrs. William S. Abell is chairman and Mrs. Donald Buckingham vice chairman for the fashion show and luncheon to be held Wednesday, October 13, at 1 p. m. in the Blue Room of the Shoreham for the benefit of the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children. Proceeds will be turned over to Mrs. William S. Knobloch, chairman of the Christ Child Farm.

Mrs. Abell is assisted by Mrs. Robert J. Coffey, Mrs. William H. Rippard, Mrs. Alexander Burton, Mrs. Benwood Hunter, Mrs. Kerby Neill, Miss Evelyn Nee and Mrs. Howard Boyd. Mrs. Benwood Hunter is in charge of reservations.

The Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children is located in Rockville, Md., and is a Community Chest agency caring for children in the Greater Washington area who are in need of convalescent care after an operation or an illness. Boys and girls are received and are also given an opportunity to keep up their school work while regaining their health and strength. The farm is a branch of the Christ Child Society founded by Miss Mary Virginia Merrick.

Sour Cream Sauce

Try serving fried tomatoes with sour cream. Fry them golden brown in egg and crumbs, then mix in a few tablespoons of flour over the fat left in the pan, mixing well. Pour in a cup of sour cream. Stir, cook until thickened. Pour the hot sauce over the tomatoes on the platter. Serve at once.

Savory Sandwich Spread

If you are catering to the masculine contingent after an active round of golf or tennis, it's a good idea to prepare a snack to fit hearty appetites. Man-sized cheese sandwiches, for instance, gain party appeal if you mix roquefort cheese with a little cream, catsup and sliced Bermuda onions.

About Recipe for Omelet

I would like to dye some gray cotton shirts a khaki color. Could this be done at home with color remover and khaki dye or would it be more satisfactory to have this done professionally? B. W.

If you have the large utensils necessary for boiling the dye into the shirts, I see no reason why it could not be done satisfactorily at home. To be permanent the dye must be boiled into the garment. As you suggest, remove the color first with a good color removing product, following the directions which come with the product you buy. Rinse the color remover thoroughly from the garments before dyeing them. Here again, follow the directions which come with the dye you use. Be sure not to crowd the shirts into the container in which you boil them to insure an even dye job. If you do not have adequate equipment for doing the job at home, then having it done professionally would be wise.

I would like information about where and the season in which lentils are available. M. B. C.

Dried lentils are available the year around at most well stocked grocery stores.

We have purchased a small house which has a pine-paneled living room and dining room with beamed ceilings. What type and what finish furniture should I buy? Should the rugs for both rooms be alike? The rooms adjoin one another. MRS. D.

Wood paneling was used as far back as the seventeenth century, but it gained such wide acceptance in the eighteenth century that it is a decorating characteristic of that period. Any of the typically eighteenth century furniture would be appropriate with it—Queen Anne, William and Mary, Chippendale, Sheraton, Duncan Phyfe or Hepplewhite. The outstanding woods used were solid walnut, oak and mahogany, finished with natural finishes such as rubbed oil or wax. Veneering and shelacking, which in later periods gave furniture patterned graining and high finish, were not used in this early period.

Since the rooms adjoin, I would suggest you do use rugs which are alike. Also, wall to wall carpeting is much used with paneled walls and gives a solid foundation and feeling of spaciousness to any room.

Will you tell me how I will be able to remove solder from a mahogany desk without removing the finish? B. M.

I'm afraid there is no way to remove solder from wood without also removing all the finish. As the solder was probably very hot when dropped onto the desk, it no doubt melted the finish under it, became mixed with it and all will come off together.

I don't want to buy linoleum for the playroom at this time. Would spatter painting be a good substitute? If so, where could I get instructions for doing this? E. D.

Linoleums are freshened by painting. Since a solid color tends to show foot prints and soil, spatter painting or stippling is a good solution to the problem. Since spatter painting is what the name implies, some persons prefer the stippling, thus eliminating the necessity for protecting the surrounding walls. The effect of the two methods is very similar. To stipple, cover the linoleum with two coats of a good solid color floor paint. When both coats are thoroughly dry, place the lighter color stippling paint in a very shallow pan and press the cut edge of a sponge into it, transferring it then to the floor. Be sure to cut the dry sponge with a sharp knife so that you have a flat, clean surface. And when dipping it into the paint, do not get more than just the surface wet with paint so that the sponge will remain rigid to give the stippling effect. Before applying the paint to the linoleum, be sure it is free from old wax and grease by first washing it with a grease solvent such as benzine. As benzine is inflammable, take every precaution against fire while using it.

I own a house that had the woodwork enameled over varnished surface. It flecks or chips badly. How can I overcome this, short of taking it all off? In a 14-room house that would be impossible. Would a coating of aluminum paint followed by enamel help? Or a coat of white lead first? W. H. J.

I'm afraid that adding further costs of paint without first removing the enamel which flecks and chips will only add to the weight of the paint layer, which in turn will cause more peeling. It is surely true that removing the paint from woodwork in 14 rooms is a tremendous job, but applying more paint to the scaling paint would only postpone the day of correcting the problem. Perhaps if you would attack the problem on a one-room-at-a-time basis it would not seem so large. With a good commercial paint remover, the layers of paint will really come off quite readily.

I purchased a chifforobe (inexpensive). It has a walnut finish. Could I finish it in mahogany, doing it at home? B. W. B.

You could go over the chifforobe with mahogany varnish stain to change the color. Before applying the varnish stain, dull the gloss of the surface by sanding it lightly with a fine sandpaper. When the surface has been dulled, go over the entire surface with turpentine to remove any dust or surface grease. One coat of varnish stain will probably be enough.

A GOURMET'S DISH is this kidney and mushroom omelet. Lamb kidneys are featured but other kinds of kidneys may be used, too, in the richly flavored sauce that's poured over the fluffy omelet.

KIDNEY AND MUSHROOM OMELET

- 1 pound lamb kidneys.
- Water to cover.
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine.
- 1 cup sliced or button mushrooms.
- 2 tablespoons flour.
- 1 cup meat stock, water, or light cream.
- 1 to 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce.
- 1 teaspoon salt.
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Remove membrane and fat from kidneys. Slice into 1½-inch pieces. Cover with water and simmer until tender, about 1 hour. Drain; reserve liquid.

Melt fat, add sliced kidneys and mushrooms, and cook about 5 minutes. Blend in flour. Add liquid. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add seasonings and serve over puffy omelet. This makes 1¾ cups sauce.

PUFFY OMELET

- 6 eggs separated.
- ¾ teaspoon salt.
- Dash pepper.
- 1½ tablespoons butter or margarine.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Cut and fold together the yolks and stiffly beaten whites. Season. Melt fat in an omelet pan. Grease sides of pan, also. Turn egg mixture into pan and cook over slow heat until it is puffy and a light brown on the bottom. Then place in moderate oven (358 degrees Fahrenheit) for 10 to 15 minutes or until top is dry. Touch the top of the omelet lightly with the finger and if the egg does not stick, the omelet is done. This makes six servings.

Serve . . .

For a dessert for Sunday dinner try heating maple or maple-flavored syrup and serve with pecan nutmeats over vanilla ice cream.

Eggplant makes a good main dish for supper at this time of year; serve it with green lima beans and corn on the cob. Add a salad to the menu and a fruit cobbler dessert and you have a hearty meal.

Saute a little chopped onion and green pepper in a skillet to mix with slightly beaten eggs; fry in small omelets and serve between slices of whole wheat toast with homemade chili sauce.

Brown pork chops in a skillet, then add some canned cream of mushroom soup flavored with a little grated onion and some soy sauce; cover the skillet and cook slowly until done.

Consumers This Fall Will Get Best Buys Since the War

By Dorothy Carew

New York, Sept. 18 (AP).—American consumers, who boosted clothing sales to the highest levels in history in the last few years, are playing "hard to get."

And it's paying off. This fall they will be offered the best clothing values they've had since the war, apparel spokesmen say. That doesn't mean lower prices—except on certain items—but it does mean that the consumer isn't the only one who has been shopping around.

Some time ago the consumer learned again to say "no," and mean it. That's one thing that brought back clearance sales and what retailers call "a return to normal merchandising methods."

It brought back something else, too. Store buyers who had taken whatever merchandise they could get during and right after the war, learned again how to say "no" to manufacturers. While the customers have been shopping around retail stores, buyers have been shopping manufacturers for value. So finally apparel makers have begun to carry the customer's "no" all the way back to the fabric mills.

At this point prewar clothing prices seem to have been forgotten all along the line. The problem now is a matter of giving value at today's prices and with today's costs. Manufacturers and buying offices sum up the fall picture for women's clothing this way:

Some prices are higher and some are unchanged. By and large manufacturers have made an effort to hold prices down, and competition among them has made for good value.

There is a broader selection of moderate price merchandise available than a year ago, and values in that price range are better.

As to how much clothing prices are up from a year ago, opinions vary. Some say about 10 per cent on an overall basis. Others say merely "a bit." And there are those who state that, "by and large prices are about the same as last year."

Most sources agree that gabardine and worsted suits will cost women about 10 per cent more than last fall. Dress prices are not up much if any; fur-trimmed coats are said to be priced to offer the best value in several years, and zip-in lining, all season coats, are represented as "the biggest thing in the country," with most popular ones priced between $40 and $70.

Ritchey—Hollis

Miss Marjorie Anne Hollis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest V. Hollis of Arlington, and Wallace McMunn Ritchey, jr., of Dayton, Ohio, were married yesterday in the chapel of Westminster Presbyterian Church, Dayton. Mr. Ritchey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ritchey of Pittsburgh, Pa.

The double-ring ceremony took place at 4:30 p. m., and a dinner for the bridal party and a few intimate friends followed.

The bride, who was escorted by her father, wore a gown of candlelight slipper satin with fitted bodice, a V-shaped neckline, full skirt and train. Her fingertip veil was held by a halo of waxed orange blossoms, and she carried an arm bouquet of white roses and gardenias.

Miss Alice June Ford of Detroit, Mich., was maid of honor, and the best man was Lieut. Fred H. Dietrich of Pittsburgh, Pa. The ushers were William B. Clark and Joseph J. Dejonghe of Dayton.

Mrs. Ritchey was graduated from the Horace Mann School for Girls, New York City, and Ohio state University, where she was a member of the Chi Omega Sorority. Mr. Ritchey was graduated from Carnegie Institute of Technology, served 3½ years as a captain in the Army Air Force. He is now an aeronautical engineer in the flight test division at Wright-Patterson Air Force base, Dayton.

After a wedding trip to the Smoky Mountains, the couple will make their home in Dayton.

Cook—Jenkins

Miss Edith Jane Jenkins, daughter of Mrs. Joseph F. Jenkins and the late Mr. Jenkins, became the bride of Patrick John Cook, son of Paul A. Cook of Falls Church, Va., yesterday afternoon at St. James' Catholic Church at Falls Church. The Rev. John Rea officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, George R. Jenkins, the bride wore white satin and carried white roses. She was attended by Miss Gloria Bernice Self and her sister, Miss Bertha Jenkins. Tony Cook was best man for his brother and Leo and Martin Cook were ushers.

Following a reception at the home of the bridegroom, the couple left on a Southern wedding trip.

Crupper—Kemp

Miss Betty June Kemp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Samuel Kemp of Arlington, Va., became the bride of Joseph Lee Crupper 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lee Crupper, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday. The Rev. Hubert Beckwith performed the ceremony at First Congregational Church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of blush ivory satin made with off-the-shoulder neckline. She carried roses with an orchid center. Mrs. Edmond Thompson was matron of honor for her sister, and Miss Lois Kemp, another sister, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Shirley Lipphard and Janice Bradshaw. James Shepherd Crupper was best man for his brother and the ushers were Edward Wichers, Eugene Fry, Wesley Dubinsky and Edmond Thompson.

After a reception at the Admiral Club, the couple left for the Pocono Mountains. They will reside in Washington. The bride was graduated from George Washington University and her husband is attending that school.

Hanlon—Jarboe

Miss Kathleen Audrey Jarboe became the bride of Timothy Joseph Hanlon at 10 a. m. yesterday morning at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The Rev. Timothy Hanlon, brother of the bridegroom, officiated. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George W. Jarboe and the late Mr. Jarboe of Washington and her husband is the son of Mrs. Timothy Hanlon and the late Mr. Hanlon, also of Washington.

George Eugene Jarboe gave his sister in marriage. She was gowned in white satin and lace and a veil of illusion falling from a headpiece of orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book with white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Audrey Bowes and Mrs. Mary Gallagher were honor attendants and Misses Theresa and Noreen Hanlon, sisters of the bridegroom, Mrs. Mary Jennison and Miss Margaret Laughrige were bridesmaids. Thomas B. Hanlon was best man for his brother and ushering were William Pike, James Watts, Albert J. Barnaud, David Reidy and Ellsworth Jennison.

A reception was held at Hotel 2400 after which the couple left by motor for Canada and New England. The bride attended St. Cecelia Academy and her husband attended Mount St. Mary's College and Georgetown University.

Silk Makes Jewelry Shine

According to jewelry experts the best way to polish a gem is to rub it with a piece of pure silk. Next best for polishing is fine rayon jersey.

Vacation Memories

"Vermont Maple Sugar for Sale," a sign tacked on every other farmhouse in the State by thrifty Yankee housewives.

The beauty of the Storm King hwy.—most expensive road in the world—cut out of the mountains high over the Hudson and at its base sentries standing at the entrance gates to the Military Academy at West Point.

Miles and miles of forests—here a patch of red leaves hanging like a warning flag against the approach of autumn.

A visit to the late President Roosevelt's home at Hyde Park on a hot August day, with the temperature in the 90s and a thousand people with the same idea . . . The contrast to the dignified reverent throngs to be found at Mount Vernon . . . eyes apparently filled with curiosity only to see how a President of the United States had lived—to compare his mode of life with their own.

"Why, it's nothing but a nice home," exclaimed one woman over and over again as she passed open bedroom doors. "I could give them a dresser just like that one."

Yes—it's a comfortable country home, with furniture built to go down from father to son. The massive wooden beds and bureaus, long outmoded, are those of a fairly prosperous farmer of a century ago.

There were tears in the crowd, I noticed. Especially in the eyes of one young man as he gazed at Franklin Roosevelt's room. There, the harness which Fala, the late FDR's lively Scottie, used to wear, was carelessly flung on a rocking chair, and a tiny black and white toy dog looked out from the window ledge to the river beyond.

Gery Clifford Reigns as Queen of Regatta

member of the household, and recently a friendly "stray" puppy was taken into the family circle.

Their home is a large, rambling, brown shingled house on upper Connecticut ave. It has the warm, cordial air of a house where young people are important and welcome. In the roomy, old-fashioned kitchen is the famous Clifford "cookie jar," known far and wide for its bountiful contents. Each afternoon after classes, the Clifford girls bring their respective friends to the kitchen for cold drinks, milk and cookies.

It was here that we talked with Gery the other afternoon upon her return from Woodrow Wilson High School, where she is a member of the senior class.

Because Gery is a tall girl, 5 feet 10½, she believes she should wear simple, uncluttered clothes. She prefers well tailored suits, dark one-piece wool dresses, skirts and blouses. However, she does not feel that because she is tall she must forego the pleasure of high heels. She always wears them for dress.

A BEAUTIFUL POSTURE, real golden hair and blue eyes help make Gery a lass with a queenly air.

Since her appointment as queen of the Regatta, her life has become a bit hectic. She has appeared on both radio and television programs, been interviewed and photographed innumerable times. Through it all she has maintained an amazing calm and poise. This, plus her exceeding good looks, has prompted many to ask if she would consider a stage or screen career.

Gery replies to such questions in her customary well behaved manner with "Oh! good heavens no. But thank you just the same."

At Trinity Methodist Church yesterday, Miss Edna Louise Haller was married to Daniel Robert Beglin, with the Rev. Daniel W. Justice officiating. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Haller and Mr. Beglin is the son of Daniel Robert Beglin of Midland, Pa. A reception followed at the home of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Victorian type gown of ivory satin and lace with a veil arranged from a coronet of net. She carried gardenias. Miss Betty Lou Kostakos was maid of honor and Misses Helen Gale Lodge and Mary Lee Beglin, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

Lee Davis Lodge was best man and the ushers were Frasier Scott, Robert Seimon, Donald Porter and Irwin Wallover.

Filippelli—Messink

Holy Name Church was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Rosemary Messink to Lawrence Filippelli. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Rose Messink and Mr. Filippelli is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Filippelli, all of this city.

Paul Messink, jr., gave his sister in marriage. She was attired in white satin fashioned with marquisette yoke edged with lace. The full skirt, worn over a lace petticoat, ended in a court train. Her illusion veil was held with a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a bride's bouquet. Miss Jean Marie Guiffre was maid of honor for her cousin and bridesmaids were Miss Laura La Cavera and Miss Evelyn Filippelli. Cecelia Sgarlota was flower girl and John Costa, jr., the ringbearer. Angelo Massino served as best man and ushers were Frank Miceli and William Costa.

A reception followed at the Washington Hotel and the couple left later for a wedding trip to Niagra Falls and Canada. The bride attended Immaculate Conception Academy and Mr. Filippelli studied at St. John's College and majored in architecture at Catholic University.

Warden—Wise

At a nuptial mass in St. Francis Xavier's Church yesterday Miss Evelyn Wise became the bride of William Henry Warden. The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ulysess Wise, and Mr. Warden is son of Mrs. Carrie A. Warden, all of this city. Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. James Brooks.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white slipper satin, cut on princess lines, the bodice trimmed with seed pearls. A tiara of silver and white pearls held her full length illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and stephanotis. Miss Mary Catherine Wise was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Miss Gertrude D'Andelet, Miss Virginia Lee Cosby, Miss Mildred Williamson and Miss June Eslin. Helen Donn was flower girl. Serving as best man was Donald Jenkins and ushering were Philip Tomaselli, Philip Martino, Mark Halperson and Royal Kemp.

Crabill—Rose

Miss Coral Marie Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wilson Rose of Butler, Pa., and Gordon Holmes Crabill, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Holmes Crabill, repeated marriage vows on September 11 at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church. The Rev. C. E. Hawthorne officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white satin over an heirloom petticoat. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, centered with an orchid. Mrs. Carlton E. Heyser was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Everett G. Yoas, sister of the bride and Miss Luella Smith. Barbara Coe was flower girl. Mr. Crabil had his father for best man and the ushers were Richard Sonner, John Marshall, Donald McGeary and Frank McGeary. Joseph Comer was ring bearer.

A reception was held at the church. The couple will spend their honeymoon at the Homestead Hotel, Hot Springs, Va. They will reside in Washington.

The bride was graduated from Butler Business College and Mr. Crabill from Elon College and Roanoke College.

Falvey—Kerr

Palms and white flowers decorated Ninth Street Christian Church yesterday for the wedding of Miss Dixie Lee Kerr and Charles L. Falvey. Mrs. Falvey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn G. Kerr of Washington, and Mr. Falvey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Falvey, also of Washington. The Rev. J. Lloyd Black officiated at the ceremony at 7:30 p. m.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown, fashioned with long sleeves and full train. Her veil of silk illusion was held by a juliet cap of seed pearls, and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and baby mums.

Miss Mary Ellen Ferguson was maid of honor, and Miss Carol Sunderlin was flower girl. Aaron W. Reese was best man, and the ushers were John R. Ferguson, jr., and Edward L. Volland, cousins of the bridegroom.

Immediately after the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Ferguson.

Gen. MacArthur Says P-TA Popular In Japan's Schools

Chicago, Sept. 18 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme allied commander, reports popular acceptance of Parent-Teacher Associations in Japan.

In a letter to the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, General MacArthur said 68 per cent of the 20,500 elementary schools in Japan have established P-TAs. The letter was to thank the P-TA for advisory and other assistance in the formation of Japanese Parent-Teacher Associations.

"Sixty-seven per cent of the 15,000 new lower secondary schools and 43 per cent of the 4000 new upper secondary schools have also established P-TAs," General MacArthur wrote.

What Tradition Do You And Your House Follow?

By Ann Pringle

EVERY once in a while I hear someone say, "I have a modern apartment," or "My house is furnished in French Provincial," the way she might say, "My hair is brown" or "I wear a size 14 dress." But these same women would hardly be fooled by a fashion article that exhorted them to be frankly feminine, eerily exotic or crisply casual at all times and in all situations.

You don't see that kind of article much any more, because women long ago decided that they wanted to dress in as many different ways as they had moods, or social invitations. They may, and usually do, stick to certain lines that suit them best, but they know that a dress can be brown tweed or pale pink satin and still be simple—and right for the right occasion.

Then why do they assume that there's an immense and unbridgeable gap between period and modern furniture? After all, everything was modern once.

THE opposite of this view is the one that would lead you to believe that you can mix everything together and come up with something that looks fine, as long as you have that mysterious and indefinable quality referred to as "good taste."

To which I'd answer that not even the most imaginative and skillful cook would put fruit and beef and Danish pastry in a casserole and expect the miracle of good seasoning to make the mixture palatable. Obviously there is a more necessary rule to follow than good taste, if only because you do more in a room than just sit and look at it.

Why not take function as a simple rule of thumb? Early American furniture was made and used by people who worked hard to establish themselves in a new country. By the Victorian age, on the other hand, most of the pioneering was over, fortunes had been made and people were settling back to enjoy them, probably one reason why so much Victorian furniture is more decorative than practical.

You can put a Colonial cherry wood chest in a Frank Lloyd Wright house, and it looks all right. I don't think a Victorian pouf would. Which tradition do you and your house follow?

What to Avoid In Furnishing

Avoid—

Too many pictures of uncertain value.

Too many pieces of overstuffed furniture.

Too many heavy draperies in small rooms.

Too many things of no value on the mantel.

Too little evidence of the individual living in the home and expression of their own taste.

Try a Parlor Picnic

You must have had the experience of planning a picnic and then having the weather turn out to be so bad that you had to cancel the whole thing. If the children weren't grumpy, they were at least disappointed and everyone had a sort of a letdown feeling.

If this happens again, don't give up your plans. Just shift the location of the picnic from the seaside or mountain lake to your own living room.

Old blankets and pillows can be spread on the floor just as you would use them in the woods. If you have a fireplace, some of your cooking can be done there instead of over the open fire outdoors. If there is no fireplace, at least you can toast buns, hot dogs and marshmallows over the gas burner and bring them back to the picnic room.

All kinds of games can be played—hide and seek, Indian hand or leg wrestling, and guessing games centered on birds, trees or some other outdoor things you would have seen. If you all put your heads together and plan, you may feel that once in a while a parlor picnic is even more fun than the real one.

Congressional Capers

from lieutenant commander to captain, entitling them to dependents' allowances (except for husbands).

Last year, as a member of the Armed Services Committee, she visited Germany and the Middle East. House colleagues have cited her for "bravery" on the return trip. When one motor of the plane conked out, forcing the pilot to return 800 miles to an Azores base, she kept up the morale of her fellow passengers by singing and talking.

During the same tour she created an especially favorable impression on both native and United States officials while in Iran. Members of the Iranian Business and Professional Women's Clubs promised to aid her in the next election. All remembered their words, for when she announced her candidacy for the United States Senate, Maine BPW groups were swamped with letters from Iran. The epistles requested the Pine Tree State business and professional women to support and vote for Margaret Chase Smith.

A sprinkling of Congressional wives treked into town last week after a sojourn in their native home States. Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington breezed in from Hawaii, stayed long enough to map the winter program for the D. C. League of Republican Women, which she heads. Then she flew back to Honolulu yesterday to aid her husband in his reelection campaign as Hawaii's Delegate to the House. She'll return in a few days, and then go out to St. Paul, Minn., to attend the biennial convention of the Republican Women's Federation of Clubs . . . Mrs. Albert Thomas, wife of the Texas Representative, came back early so that her children would be here for the opening of their schools. Carrie Davis, wife of the Tennessee Representative, is in the city. Currently, she's assisting her daughter, Barbara Leigh, with trunk packing for Wellesley this year.

This scene at The Hecht Company-S. Weinberg & Sons home at Columbia Pines, near Annandale, Va., was duplicated all over town this week as visitors thronged to the 13 residences on view in the "Homes of '48" exhibition. Although a steady stream of visitors inspected the house, no traffic jams were reported

A floor plan that features a downstairs den or extra bedroom, with complete bath, was an attraction at the Luria Bros.-House and Herrmann home at 2637 N. Quantico st., North Arlington. The second floor has two bedrooms and full bath

Lovely Elaine Crosby, 4700 Davidson dr., Chevy Chase, Md., enjoys the view from the second-story sun deck at the home erected by Camalier & Crosby Construction Co. and furnished by Mazor Masterpieces. Miss Crosby was sure the home was the most beautiful of all 13. The fact that her brother, Peter Crosby, was one of the builders probably had something to do with it

Architectural Eye-Openers Attracting Crowds, Sales

By Conrad P. Harness

PUBLIC REACTION to the "Homes of '48" exhibition of 13 new furnished houses, which opened last Sunday for a four-week showing, has overwhelmed the sponsors. The 26 participating business firms are still knee deep in sales prospects, customers and joy.

"Successful is a mild term for the exhibit," said Carl Freeman, one of the 13 builders. "I sold one of my houses to a man who spent only five minutes making up his mind!"

Dean Rathbun, sales manager of the W. C. & A. N. Miller Development Co., reported that close to 5000 persons visited his display house in Spring Valley. "Only 2200 visited the "Blandings' Dream House" on its opening day," he added. However, the latter suffered from a rainy weekend, while last Sunday's opening of the "Homes of '48" enjoyed perfect weather.

The mass housing exhibition, sponsored by The Washington Post and 13 builders and 13 furniture stores, is open to the public through October 10. It is designed to show the public what is available in homes and furniture in 1948. Furnishings are from available stocks and all homes are for sale. All builders have other similar homes in the same project which are also on the market.

No Tickets To Buy

THE MODEL HOMES will open for inspection this morning at 10 a. m. and remain open until 9 p. m. Weekday visiting hours are from 2 p. m. until 9 p. m. Prices of the dwellings range from $13,250 to $37,500. They are located in all sections of the greater metropolitan Washington area.

The exhibition will appeal to everyone. If you're even remotely interested in buying a new home, you'll find 13 temptations to your budget. If you plan to remodel or add to your present home, you'll gain a wealth of ideas from a tour of all "Homes of '48." A direction map to each home is located on page 3 of this section. Clip it out, fill up the family chariot with gas and enjoy a tour of some architectural eye-openers.

Crowds last Sunday far exceeded the sponsors' fondest expectations. Every builder reported crowds of 2000 and up, with several homes attracting 5000 apiece. Since the throngs were spread out over several hours, no "traffic jams" were reported inside the homes.

Paul P. Stone Co., builders of a Monterey-modern styled home in a new subdivision called "Hillcrest Gardens," reported that the housing revue put the Maryland section on the map. Located off Branch ave., just over the District line in Southeast, the development has attracted wide attention since last Sunday's opening.

The unusual residence is actually built into a hillside and the resulting landscaping has caused favorable comment. Around 5000 persons went through the home last Sunday. The firm's sales manager, George Phifer, reported only two visitors said they did not like "modern architecture."

Public Reaction Studied

PETER CROSBY, of Camalier & Crosby Construction Co., builders of a large two-story home in Chevy Chase Manor, Md., reported that a survey of visitors' comments on the firm's house has led them to incorporate several features of the model home into other new homes which they have under construction.

Specifically mentioned were the built-in radio in the kitchen wall, awning covered sun deck opening off an upstairs bedroom and accordion type folding doors on closets in the master bedroom.

Crosby termed the exhibition's crowd-pulling powers as "equivilant to having 100 real estate firms working for you at once!" Over 3000 persons visited his company's exhibit house last Sunday.

Michael Grodsky of Cambridge Construction Co. reported that visitors to the firm's house at Alta Vista Terrace, in Bethesda, Md., were especially attracted to innovations such as remote control light switches which turn off and on by pressing a button, a compartmented bath, and a downstairs pine-paneled den with built-in bookcases and window seat.

The Samuel Eig-Julius Lansburg home at 2609 East-West highway attracted between 2500 and 3000 people on the first day, according to the Leo M. Bernstein Co., sales agents. John McKeever, sales manager for the Bernstein firm, reported scores of Sunday visitors had returned to the home during the week for a closer look.

Furniture on a Budget

JULIUS LANSBURG FURNITURE CO. completely furnished the $16,500 two-story brick home on a $2468 budget, a price estimated to be well within range of prospective purchasers of the six-room dwelling.

Clark Prather, sales manager for Luria Bros., also said Sunday visitors were returning for leisurely looks at his firm's two-story Colonial in the Berkshire section of North Arlington. "Visitors are wild about our floor plan which boasts one bedroom and bath downstairs, with two bedrooms and bath on the second floor," he declared.

Visitors to the Cafritz Construction Co.'s home at 821 Crittenden st. ne., not only stopped to look—eight of them signed contracts. "What better indication of success?" asked a Cafritz spokesman.

Visitors to the Kraft Builders-Malcolm Scates home at Pinewood, Md., always stop to admire the lovely floor-to-ceiling smoky glass mirror over and around the mantel. A vase of decorative flowers on the mantel is reflected by the mirror to all parts of the spacious living room

This attractive grouping at the Cafritz Construction Co.'s house at 821 Crittenden st. ne., is typical of the modern furnishings supplied by Peerless Modern. Eight homes built by Cafritz have been sold since the opening a week ago of the Homes of '48

The long-awaited housing event officially got under way last Sunday, after a radio broadcast over WINX. Participating were, left to right, Mrs. Kyle Booth, Virginia State president, National Society of Pen Women; Clarence W. Gosnell, president, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington; James Russell Wiggins, managing editor, The Washington Post; Leon Chatelain, president, Washington Board of Trade, and Mrs. Robert J. Dannemiller, president, Chevy Chase Woman's Club

Dust-proof storage bags in a bedroom closet of the W. C. & A. N. Miller-Woodward & Lothrop home, 3712 48th st. nw., catch the attention of every housewife. Notice the shoe storage on the closet door

Church to Be Built

Plans are in progress for construction of a brick church and Sunday school at 14th and Colorado aves. nw., by the North Washington Highlands Baptist Church.

It Works in Michigan

Grand Rapids, Mich. (U.P.)—An ordinance such as the one the New York City Council proposes, to forbid motorists to leave keys in ignition locks while autos are unoccupied, has been in effect here for two years. It has reduced car thefts by more than 50 per cent.

Controls Anticipate Temperature Changes

Homes Reflect Heat Advances In 2 Decades

HEATING equipment in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses, which opened last Sunday for a four-week showing, shows a number of advanced ideas over homes of only two decades ago.

For example, present-day systems have electronic controls which "anticipate" changes in temperature and automatically keep the home at a comfortable temperature.

William Bornstein, Chrysler Airtemp dealer in this area, points out that present-day thermostats will hold the temperature to the desired thermostat reading, within a degree or two, whereas older types frequently fluctuated 10 to 15 degrees from the desired temperature.

Bornstein reported business was booming in the heating business, with over 2,000 home installations completed by his firm alone since the war. Four of the 13 model residences in the "Homes of '48" exhibition boast Chrysler Airtemp heating units, he added.

Although new home owners benefit from the wartime advances incorporated in present-day heating system, owners of older homes can easily enjoy the same conveniences by addition of modern equipment.

New units provide heat, circulation, filtering and humidifying of warm air while in summer the same unit will circulate and filter air. Additional equipment will turn conventional heating systems into summer air-conditioning units.

In addition to the Chrysler Airtemp system, builders in the mass home exhibition are making wide use of Janitrol and Columbia Speciality heating systems which also feature automatic controls, dependable comfort, proper humidity controls and other items.

38 More Ravenwood Dwellings Planned

Roan & Poppelman, Virginia land developers and promoters, are planning construction of 38 more new homes in the Ravenwood subdivision of Fairfax County. Dwellings will be one and two-story, with basement, of brick, cinderblock and frame construction.

David Solomon, Inc., 740 11th st. nw., is the probable builder. A. R. Clas is the architect.

'Uncle' Takes His Cut in Housing Taxes

Uncle Sam has a big stake in housing in the form of taxes. Practical Builder Magazine reports that taxes add 20 per cent to the price tag on a house. Thus, for every house which sells for $12,000 today, the Government collects, in one form of taxes or another, about $2400.

Kitchens Attract Top Interest in Exhibit Homes

But Men Like The Basements

By Lucia Brown

STRUCTURAL details may interest the man of the house, but it's labor-saving kitchen devices that catch the eye of the little woman.

Ralph Ochsman, of Ralph Construction Co., says he knows it's so because he has watched hundreds of couples going through his model "Home of '48" in Wheaton Hills, Md., during the past week.

"Once they're admired the living and dining rooms, the women make a beeline for the kitchen, while the men go to the basement to check up on the beams and joists," says the young Washington builder.

Furniture provokes comments—and sometimes arguments—from the whole family, however, say those conducting tours of the 13 "Homes of '48."

"I'm amazed at how keen both men and women are on interior decorating these days," an Aldon Construction Co. representative said at the house at 13th and Aspen sts. nw., built by Aldon and furnished by Milton Rossler. "All the furniture here is modern, which interests them tremendously because it's new and different."

Like Large Living Room

THE case for modern vs. period furnishings won't be decided by this show, however. At such homes as the one built by S. Weinberg & Sons in Columbia Pines, Va., Colonial furniture is getting an enthusiastic reception from the public.

"The first comments here are always on the beautiful interiors," says William L. Warfield at the Columbia Pines house, which was decorated by the Hecht Co. in conjunction with the staff of Better Homes and Gardens.

"People speak of the size of the living room, too," he continued. "It's 16½ by 24 feet and apparently everybody favors big living rooms nowadays."

Also receiving many comments at the Weinberg-Hecht house are the "magic-view" mirror in the front door and the neon tubes on the light switches. The mirror lets those inside look out while remaining invisible to the caller, who sees only his own reflection in the mirror. The neon tube on the light switches glows in the dark when the center light is off. Other features of this house include front door chimes in the form of a knocker and the bathroom walls of soundproof Carrara glass.

Light switches get more than a passing glance from visitors at the Cambridge Construction Co. house in Alta Vista Terrace, Bethesda, too. Here there's no switch to flick. You just touch a button and comes the light.

Like Downstairs Den

THE combination bedroom-den in the Cambridge house, furnished by the P. J. Nee Co., attracts much attention. Apparently this type of arrangement for the "spare" room is in high favor with the public now. It's this house, too, that has a "departmentalized" bathroom, built in three sections with frosted glass doors.

The current trend toward dark wall covering is usually approved by visitors, say the guides in "Homes of '48" where such treatment was used.

"Dark walls are so much more restful, I think," said a visitor loking around the gray-walled living room of the W. C. & A. N. Miller house in Spring Valley. "They give the room and furniture a look of richness and elegance. But I do like the light woodwork to give contrast and a bit of relief from the dark effect."

Mrs. Eleanor A. Toole, who shows visitors around the Miller house, said most people speak of the "picture" window as they pass, inasmuch as it really frames a lovely picture—a horseshoe-shaped flower bed and dark green trees against the brighter green lawn.

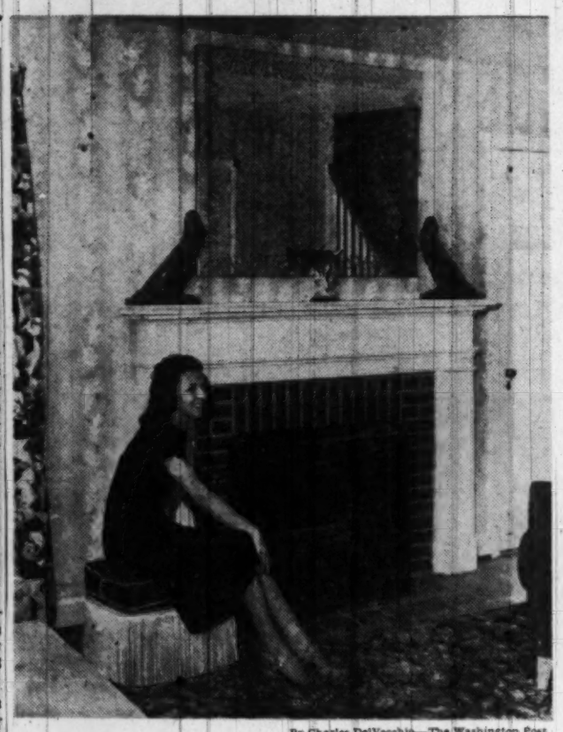
She gets a lot of questions about "convection" heating, too, Mrs. Toole says, and finds herself involved in technical discussions of this form of instantaneous hot-water heating. At houses such as the one of Carl M. Freeman, in Hillwood Manor, there are lengthy heating discussions, too, since the new radiant type is used.

And so it goes, as the 13 new furnished homes in various sections of the city receive the closest scrutiny from visiting Washingtonians. People wander through, seemingly preoccupied, but they're sizing up the furniture, arrangement and construction.

Folks are housing-conscious these days. They have definite ideas about what they like and don't like. They ask innumerable questions and make many comments. And the guides who take them through get a liberal education on what America wants in the way of living quarters.



By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

Fireplaces always get approving comments from visitors at the model "Homes of '48," say hosts and hostesses at the housing show. This one is in the house at 2607 East-West Highway, built by Sam Eig and furnished by Julius Lansburgh. Mrs. George L. Brown, of Rock Creek Gardens, pauses to rest on the ottoman beside the fireplace as she tours the 6-room Colonial home

New Credit Laws Control Home Appliance Sales

By Walter T. Pulliam

LATE model used car prices may provide John Q. Public his most tangible—and cheerful—evidence of the Government's new credit regulations which take effect midnight tonight.

Prices on late models may drop 10 to 20 per cent, dealers here predicted last week. Some, however, expect this drop to be offset by price increases on older, cheaper cars.

Otherwise, a survey of two dozen Washington business firms shows, the new credit controls put out by the Federal Reserve Bank will have little effect on the city's business.

Besides automobiles, the controls apply to household furniture, including cooking stoves, dishwashers, ironers, refrigerators, washing machines, room-unit air conditioners, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners and radio, phonograph and television sets.

Puts Brake on Inflation

DESIGNED to slow up inflation at least to a minor extent, the new, peacetime controls require a third down payment on automobiles and 20 per cent on other affected items. They set a 15-month limit for paying off balances of $1000 or less and 10 months for balances of over $1000. When the balance tops $1000, the monthly installments will be at least $70.

"We have been insisting on such requirements from installment purchasers all along," the credit manager of one F st. department store said, adding that his and several other stores here did not completely relax credit restrictions when wartime controls were lifted last November.

In recent months, however, this credit manager added, more and more stores were permitting looser credit, placing the stricter ones at a disadvantage. This trend will now stop, he said.

The new controls, issued pursuant to the Anti-inflation Act of the summer special session of Congress, will have little effect generally here on either business or prices, most merchants agreed.

Felt by Car Dealers

ONE appliance dealer said sales of higher priced refrigerators might be affected, but that it would not be too noticeable since these refrigerators are still not too plentiful.

One businessman commented: "This new control may not even be noticed by many credit buyers. The act isn't nearly so strict as most people suppose."

In the case of used automobiles, however, it will be noticed—and soon—according to most used car lot operators.

One used car wholesaler, The Washington Post found, slashed his prices last week to dealers on all late model, higher-priced cars, and dealers reported other wholesalers doing likewise.

Richard S. Moore, of Moore Motor Co., 1518 Pennsylvania ave. se., who is secretary-treasurer of the National Capital Used Car Dealers Association, speaking as an individual, predicted 15 per cent or more would be knocked off used cars which have been selling for $2000 or more.

He said the price slash probably would be apparent on used car lots Monday morning.

Moore attributed the price reduction directly to the new credit regulations, pointing out that not only will more cash be required, but the 18-month payment time will put the required monthly payment on the higher priced used cars out of reach of many prospective purchasers.

Now, another used car dealer explained, purchasers have in most cases up to 24 months to pay and some cash down payments run as low as 20 per cent. Monthly payments, which previously would have run about $50 a month, under the new regulations, will run $75 to $85 or higher, this dealer said.

SALE price increases, however, are expected by most dealers on older used cars, on which the down payment and monthly installments will be less than on the newer cars. The increased demand for these older cars may result in the expected price increase, the dealers say. None of the dealers would estimate how much the increase might be.

New car dealers do not expect much effect because of the present

New Real Estate Firm Opened In Silver Spring

The booming Silver Spring trading area has attracted a new real estate firm, the Woodmoor Agency, which has announced the opening of a new office Monday in the heart of the Woodmoor Shopping Center, 10111 Colesville rd.

Partners in the firm are E. F. Blanchard and H. W. Stoehr, both formerly associated in a sales capacity with Wood-Conley Co. Both are residents of Silver Spring. The firm will specialize in the sale of Silver Spring properties, with services available for sales, rentals, insurance and mortgage loans.

Blanchard served in the Marine Corps in World War II, gaining the rank of captain. He was awarded the Purple Heart with cluster for injuries received in Pacific actions. Stoehr was formerly employed by the Pullman Co. and has lived in the Washington area for the last 18 years.

Bel Air Is Sold, Virginia Estate

Sale of historic Bel Air, one of the few colonial homes never restored, was announced last week. Arthur R. Rupley, Virginia builder, sold the estate to William E. S. Flory. It is at Minnieville, in Prince William County, Va.

Built in 1740, the mansion sheltered many famous personages of the colonial period, including George Washington, Dr. James Craik, who was Surgeon General of the American Army; Col. James Ewell, who was a classmate of Thomas Jefferson at William and Mary, and Jefferson himself.

The house is built on a three-story plan, with its entrance and living room on the second floor. The main chimney is 22 feet wide and serves five of seven fireplaces. The $17,500 sales transaction was made through the real estate offices of McElhinney & Mechling and Helen Marshall of Alexandria, Va.

U. S. Road Builders Work at Top Pace

Philadelphia, Sept. 18 (AP).—To halt further disintegration of the Nation's winter-ravaged highways, and at the same time complete 18,962 miles of roads carried over from last year, United States road builders are throwing every available piece of new equipment into use, says Richard H. DeMott, vice president of SKF Industries, Inc.

Though last winter's unusually severe road damages cannot yet be translated with accuracy into dollars and cents, most observers agree that it runs into the millions.

Gas-Smelling Dogs Patrol Pipelines

Buenos Aires (AP). — Cur dogs trained on gas-smelling meat will patrol Argentina's new pipeline.

The dogs will be fed for a few days on meat soaked in gas. Then, the theory is, they will connect the taste of food with the smell of gas. Taken out over the buried pipeline, they are supposed to smell escaping gas and start digging for what they think is meat. Workmen will come along to finish the digging and expose the leak in the pipe.

Red, Yellow for Danger

Use Colors to Reduce Home Accident Rate

HOW the scientific use of color can help reduce the annual toll of some 30,000 lives lost in home accidents was pointed out by Hayes Quinn, color consultant of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.

"If home owners will take a tip from industry," said Quinn, "they will find that the inherent power and energy in color can be used to highlight danger spots in the home and eliminate many of the sources of potential mishaps."

He pointed out that color authorities had developed a method of employing color that helped reduce accidents, raise morale, and increase production in all types of plants. This painting system is known as the Principles of Color Dynamics.

"These principles," Quinn stated, "are based on the fact that each color has its individual visual, symbolic, and psychologic characteristics. By knowing what these are and correctly matching them, color patterns have been worked out that promote safety and efficiency." He added that the ways and means which industry applied these principles can be used in homes with equally effective results.

Color for Danger Signals

THE home-owner should keep in mind that there's more to color than meets the eye. As in industry, certain bright colors should be used as danger signals; others to induce cleanliness and good housekeeping.

Following are some basic suggestions for the home-owner in color use that will go far in transforming the house into "Home, Safe Home:"

1. Paint floors in dark areas with light reflecting color to eliminate dangerous shadows.
2. Paint treads of stairs leading to basement, or attic, which generally poorly lighted with a light color.
3. Ever stub your toe on a threshold? It wouldn't happen so often if it were properly marked in a contrasting paint color.
4. Mark the doorway of your garage with white or yellow lines; you'll avoid crumpled fenders.
5. Spotlight in red the handles of the electric switches in your basement; the handle of the furnace door.
6. Paint in vivid colors the space behind switch boxes, meters and points at which provision is made for turning off gas and water.
7. Hot water faucets should be marked with safety red or yellow as should the switch which ignites the gas oven jet.
8. Use "danger signal" red on guard rails of washing machine wringer.
9. Paint the electric fan guard a brilliant yellow.
10. Identify your kitchen tools, especially such often-used items as bottle and can openers.
11. The man who uses tools in his hobby will find a color code used on the handles of his tools a big time saver; so will the gardener in picking out the proper tool from a forest of handles.
12. Paint a bright spot of color behind your fire extinguisher.
13. Paint your mail box in a bright color which harmonizes with other colors used on your house.
14. Paint a bright color behind your identifying house number.

Aussie Crows Need Arithmetic Classes

Sydney, Australia (AP). — Australian farmers have discovered a blind spot in the defenses of the otherwise cunning crow. The crow isn't easy to poison and it recognizes a gun at sight. But it can't count. The current maneuver is for two men with guns to go into a shed or a spot of scrub in which the crow is interested. After seeing one man emerge, the crow thinks the coast is clear and descends to give the remaining man his chance of a shot.

Crows are one of the chief pests of the Australian sheep farmer, preying on sick or drought-weakened ewes and young lambs.

Postoffice Slogan to Hit Forest Fires

"Remember—only you can prevent forest fires."

That message will be stamped on more than 40 million envelopes and postcards daily from now until the end of October, postal authorities said yesterday.

The announcement was made in ceremonies at the City Postoffice, North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave. ne., held to mark initial use of the new cancellation slogan. More than 700 conservationists, philatelists and guests attended.

Later a young oak tree was planted on North Capitol st. adjacent to the postoffice building, under supervision of Postmaster W. Gordon Bell. Participants in the ceremonies included the Rev. Dr. Frederick B. Harris, pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church; Vincent Burke, first assistant postmaster; Roy N. North, deputy third assistant postmaster; R. E. McArdlo, assistant chief of the forest service; Maj. James T. DeVoss, president of the Washington Philatelic Society.

Model Prison Inmates Distill Their Own

Caracas, Venezuela (U.P.)—Jailers in the Caracas model prison discovered that prisoners were operating a home-made liquor still in their cells.

A search was started for the still when officials noticed many of the prisoners were frequently drunk. The main still was made out of tin cans and the men used pineapple sirup plus chewing tobacco as the base for the liquor. Dr. Guillermo Rasquin, prison analyst, said many of the steady customers had stomach ulcers.

Simple Designs Protect the Small Fry

By John L. Springer

NEW YORK, Sept 18 (AP).—Babes in arms are helping to design the washing machines, vacuum cleaners and electric refrigerators you'll be using tomorrow.

The industiral designers who decide what the automobiles, stoves, toothpaste tubes and thousands of other products will look like when they come off assembly lines agree things will be simpler hereafter.

The reason, they say, is the high birth rate. Consumers are favoring simple products least likely to involve small children in accidents.

A survey discloses that the day of gee-gaws and gadgets is over and that the trim, clean line is the coming motif. This trend also is being spurred by costs, since it's cheaper to make things without fancy ornamentation.

Here are some of the new "simplified" and "utilitarian" things, for example, that have just come from designers' drawing boards:

A new vacuum cleaner, which may be stored and carried vertically, and has a new type of dirt ejector which simplifies the problem of cleaning the container. No stooping is required to attache or detach the hose.

A floor waxer with a minimum number of protrusions, slots or compound curves but with two removable caps at the top to enable it to be serviced without being turned over.

A refrigerator with clean, flowing lines and a "molded look." Horizontal indentations are eliminated, making it easier to keep the surface clean. Rearrangement of the motor and compressor increases storage space 30 per cent without increasing the exterior dimension.

Small lightweight plastic hearing aids, designed to reduce surface friction and blend with any type of clothing.

An electric range with the timer panel isolated from the switch controls, and with the operation simplified so that the non-technical housewife can understand and use the timer more readily. Previous panels had been so complicated in appearance as to discourage her from using the automatic devices provided.

Broadly speaking, industrial designers are concerned mainly with the appearance of a product, but that can involve many problems. For example, the B. F. Goodrich Co. spent thousands a year to apply a trademark of two red diamonds to every tire. But every day stacks of letters addressed to Goodrich and its competitor, Goodyear, got mixed in the mails.

Finally the company called in Designer John Gordon Rideout of Chagrin Falls, Ohio. He threw out the diamonds and conceived a new trademark, based on the initials "BFG," which cut costs substantially and gave Goodrich a 42 per cent better "identity value."

Gordon Florian of Bridgeport, Conn., designed a unique radio pin-up clock combination which can be hung on the wall or used on a table top.

Along with the general trend to simplicity, J. McLeod Little of Toledo, Ohio, says there's also a trend to "family unity" in appliances, where all products in a line feature the same basic design. Thus, instead of being designed as individual products, the same company's refrigerator, washing machine, dishwasher and other kitchen equipment would all carry the same harmonious lines.

Despite the move to simplicity, however, designers say there will be some exceptions where flashier products will make more sales. Wilbur Henry Adams, one of the pioneers in the field, says he once redesigned a well-known brand of refrigerator. "It was the most practical, dignified job I'd ever done," he says. "But the vice president in charge of sales demanded more chrome, more trim, declaring the refrigerator had to be jazzed up for its market. He was right. We jazzed it up and it sold like hotcakes."

New England Also Has Good Neighbor Policy

Boston (U.P.).—The neighborliness of New Englanders is demonstrated daily by a little drama out beyond the mouth of Boston Harbor.

Pilot boats cruise off Boston Light some 10 miles out to sea and their crews usually remain out of touch with land a week at a time.

So each day the crew of an excursion fishing vessel, the S.S. Westport, collects newspapers from the passengers, swing in by the pilot boat and leave a day's reading.

Too Realistic in His Clowning

Memphis, Tenn. (U.P.)—Colie Stoltz, orchestra leader, has eliminated the clowning in the novelty number, "Saber Dance." At the end Colie would whip out a knife and slash his drummer's tie in two. The other night Colie held the tie with one hand, slashing into the tie and his finger. Three stitches were required.

Pipe Shortage Hits Natural Gas Expansion

THE natural gas industry, with a quarter-million miles of pipeline, is in the midst of its greatest expansion.

A shortage of steel pipe—pine about 24 to 30 inches across—is the chief obstacle to linking even more scores of cities, some a thousand or more miles away, with the fields in the Southwest that supply most of the gas.

It was just a quarter of a century ago that developments in pipemaking made it economically feasible to carry the gas in metal tubes 2 feet wide to cities up to 1800 miles away.

One of the largest and newest lines is a 1840-mile line from Texas to New York City through which 340 million cubic feet of gas will flow daily to utilities in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

How much natural gas is there in the country?

The American Gas Association and the American Petroleum Institute estimated that as of the first of the year there were 166 trillion cubic feet.

If last year's rate of consumption —5.6 trillion cubic feet—continues, that would be enough for nearly 30 years.

Of course the use of natural gas has been increasing, but new sources are being located, too. Last year 11 trillion cubic feet were added to our reserves.

Most is found in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas and California.

Between 1928 and 1930 pipelines fingered out to Wichita, Denver, Chicago, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Detroit. Some went west to California.

The depression stopped the expansion. By 1937 it was on again. War interfered. The end of the war saw the start of today's boom.

But many Eastern seaboard cities like New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore are still doing without. None of New England and few parts of the South have natural gas. By The Associated Press

Roman Invaders Liked A Saturday Night Bath

Canterbury, England, Sept. 18 (AP).—Archaeologists have unearthed the Roman public baths of Canterbury, found under the ruins of bombed buildings in the heart of the city. The excavators have uncovered massive walls, in some places 5 feet thick, that apparently supported a two-story building, and remains of a cold plunge bath, 13 feet, 6 inches by 10 feet in size, and of the hot room (or hypocaust).

Supporting the floor of the hot room are slender pillars of Roman tiles.

Builder Cuts Housing Cost Nearly in Half

The high cost of housing can be a kick in the pants by builders who are willing to utilize modern design techniques with mass-production methods, Practical Builder magazine says in an article in its current issue.

The authoritative trade journal, quoting true case histories, pointed out that a Lafayette, Ind., builder had erected homes of attractive design at a cost of about $6 a square foot; the national average is nearer $10.

Some of the principles used to effect this large saving, at no expense to the structural strength or beauty of the dwelling, include:

1. Use of simple foundations consisting of reinforced concrete footings plus concrete block.
2. Structural framing that requires no wasteful cutting.
3. A floor plan that makes use of standard width wallboard materials available at building supply centers, with a minimum of cutting and waste.
4. Use of aluminum siding without sheathing over the exterior stud walls.

These, and other economies, have been used to produce good housing at low costs in Lafayette, Indianapolis and Denver.

FHA Asks Builders To Take Less Profit, Erect Low-Rent Units

THE FEDERAL Housing Administration has asked Washington apartment builders to get in a huddle with their subcontractors and come up with more housing at lower rents for lower-income families, veterans and minority groups.

FHA this week warned local builders that construction of garden-type apartments requiring $90 a month and up rentals were nearing the saturation point. With high-salaried veterans provided for, the Government agency wants emphasis placed upon construction of more apartments with lower rentals, say in the $70-a-month range.

A spokesman for the local VA office said that if builders and subcontractors would take a slightly smaller profit, get more efficiency in their building operations and put a little more of their own capital into their projects, more housing at lower costs would result.

The local appeal was part of a national campaign on FHA's part to familiarize builders, mortgage bankers and realtors of significant changes in FHA's mortgage insurance plans under provisions of the Housing Act of 1948, passed in the recent special session of Congress.

"In promoting cooperative efforts to obtain lower-priced housing," said Administrator Raymond M. Foley of the Housing and Home Financing Agency and Commissioner Franklin D. Richards of FHA, "we suggest there be organized continuing local economy conferences on costs, with all elements of the industry and government participating—the purpose of which would be to seek out savings, as cost reduction will come about through a multiplication of small economies."

James A. Hewitt, FHA area administrator, told a meeting Tuesday of 150 members of the Home Builders Association, mortgage bankers, architects and others that FHA has sufficient applications in the higher-rent field to fill the present need for such housing, and "from now on we want projects at rents to meet the pocket books of middle-income and lower-income groups."

James Pearson, executive secretary of the Home Builders Association of metropolitan Washington, said the talk was of more interest to mortgage bankers and other lending institutions since those groups are the source of construction funds for large scale building operations.

George McIntosh, of McIntosh & McIntosh, Arlington mortgage brokers, termed FHA's proposals "justified." He predicted, however, that most builders would find it impossible to lower costs unless FHA lowered its minimum requirements in construction of such units.

"I don't know of a single builder here who could erect an apartment project today to meet FHA requirements where the rents could be set at $70 for a two-bedroom unit," he added.

"However," McIntosh emphasized, "I know of no builder who isn't willing to go along with the FHA program if there's any possible way of working it out."

McIntosh pointed out that the production of low-cost rentals was an involved problem, calling for a possible reduction in FHA's minimum requirements concerning room sizes and other factors.

He declared that construction of elevator-type multi-storied apartments might be one answer to more and lower rentals, but cited the difficulty of obtaining suitable land. "They wouldn't go over in outlying areas such as Fairfax County, and land costs are high in the downtown areas."

A check of projects for which his firm has secured the mortgage financing revealed that no builder was presently building apartments with rentals less than $70 including utilities. "The lowest we have is $72.50 for a one-bedroom, combined living-room, kitchen, and utilities," he said.

President's Name Off Land Patents

Washington (U.P.).—Congress has snipped at least one piece of Administration red tape with President Truman's approval.

Mr. Truman will be the last Chief Executive whose name will appear on a land patent.

Land patents are bills turning over public lands for private or other use. Since 1834 the bills have been signed by "proxy Presidents" or clerks skilled in the art of signature copying.

During the past session, Congress passed a law permitting Interior Department clerks to sign their own names to patents in behalf of the United States.

In the days of Washington and Jefferson, Presidents signed the bills themselves. The job was turned over to handwriting specialists in 1834.

Andrew Jackson had so many land patents to sign that year that a clerk got the job to keep Jackson from getting writer's cramp.

Supply of Skilled Building Labor Is Increasing

Skilled journeymen to build the homes and factories of today and tomorrow are being turned out in ever increasing quantities, says Practical Builder Magazine. Quoting from Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, the trade journal said there were 131,288 apprentices in the building trades as of June 1, an all-time high.

However, the authoritative publication warned that the manpower supply has almost reached the wartime peak, with the building industry feeling the greatest pinch.

Concentrations of skilled and common labor, formerly abundant in the West Coast shipbuilding centers, have shifted to the Great Lakes.

It Takes Elephants To Move an Island On Siam's Border

Bangkok, Sept. 18 (AP).—A piece of Siam's frontier territory is drifting into Burma, thanks to a herd of Siamese wild elephants. It happened like this:

In the River Mae Sai the boundary between Burma and northern Siam is a fertile island named Koh Charng. Koh Charng is Siamese territory because it is nearer to Siam's side of the river than to Burma's.

But an elephant tribe for many years has traveled at night along a path in Siam, parallel to the river. Their heavy feet during the years wore the path into a real depression. When rains caused the river to break its banks, the water rushed into the elephant path, eroding it into a deep stream. If the new path of the river gets wide enough, and enough of Siam is eroded away, the island will lie on the Burmese side of the river's center line.

The Siamese Parliament member of the area said a dam would be built to halt the river's erosion and to keep the island in Siam. If that doesn't work, he said sadly, he would lose several hundred loyal voters and Siam's government would lose the revenue from good tobacco crops grown on the 9600 square kilometers of island.

Carolina Hospital Built in One Month

Greensboro, N. C., Sept. 18. (AP). Beleaguered by the worst polio epidemic in North Carolina's history, Greensboro completed a $500,000 hospital built for $200,000 in little more than a month.

A committee broke ground for construction July 6, before it had an office or stationery. Local business donated building supplies. Laborers worked feverishly on their own time. One company gave steel girders, another concrete and brick. Three Greensboro contractors installed ceramic tile, donated by the Tile Council of America, at no cost. Union treasuries gave $5000 to the fund.

But Not in Big Centers

Home Costs in Smaller Cities Are Reported Leveling Off

HOME building costs have begun to level off in most smaller towns and cities, but may climb still further in metropolitan centers, a Nation-wide poll by the United States Savings and Loan League indicated today.

Results of the poll were announced after a survey of 250 savings and loan association executives throughout the country had been completed by the league, trade organization for more than 3650 thrift and home financing institutions. Some of the findings were:

1. In the opinion of 72 per cent of those polled, building costs are still headed upward. This sentiment was virtually unanimous in returns from bigger cities.

2. The remaining 28 per cent, most of them from smaller towns and cities, thought costs had started to stabilize.

3. Only one man—from a small Michigan city—saw a downward trend in building costs in the near future.

Far West Plateau

Breaking the survey into various sections of the country, the league found that 36 per cent of executives from States in the Far West—a higher percentage than any other part of the Nation—thought a plateau had been reached in home costs, while only 64 per cent said the outlook was for greater costs.

In the Middle West, 27 per cent thought a leveling-off had arrived and 73 per cent thought costs would continue upward. Of the Southern savings and loan men reporting, only 29 per cent thought an end had come to new increases, and only one out of four of the representatives of Eastern States held that view.

The league survey found that the third round of wage hikes and new price increases in most lines of building materials were cited most frequently as the two chief contributing factors to the inflationary aspect of building costs.

Prices Maintained

One saving and loan official commented that the prices of older dwellings were being kept up in his area by high consruction costs on new homes.

Disclosures made in the league study were regarded by Morton Bodfish, Chicago, chairman of the executive committee, as dramatic evidence for the necessity of concentrating mortgage funds on new low-priced housing.

The league currently is carrying on a drive among its members to concentrate mortgage credit on new low-priced housing.

Arlington County Building Permits Gain for Month

An estimated three million dollars in proposed building projects were issued permits in Arlington County last month, a gain of nearly $1,500,000 over the July figures, but a million dollar drop from the same month of 1947.

Building Inspector Andrew Jensen's report showed permits were issued for 71 homes, 5 apartment buildings with 167 units, and business projects worth an estimated $116,000.

The average valuation of the new proposed homes was $13,000 each, a rise of $1500 over the $11,500 figure for the average home started in August, 1947. A rise in construction costs and erection of more higher priced homes than was built last year were cited as the reason for the rise by building observers.

12 Homes Planned

William O. Cooley & Son plan immediate construction of 12 two-story brick homes on Walton rd., Bethesda, Md., according to a building permit just issued.

Atoms to Check Bounce

Akron (AP).—What makes rubber bounce?

Here in the rubber capital of the world they don't know either. For more than 200 years this question has gone unanswered, but according to Dr. Howard E. Fritz, vice president in charge of research for the B. F. Goodrich Co., experiments now being conducted in atomic-energy research may provide the answer. Radioactive tracers are being used in experiments which may solve this and other mysteries.

Britons Asked for Sparetime Work

London (AP).—Labor recruitment officers are calling on Britons to devote their spare time to the country's production drive. Local committees have been asked to investigate having some industrial work done at home and to provide special shifts at factories for persons who have an hour or two to spare. A ministry condition is that recognized terms and conditions of employment must be observed.

'Youngsters' Erect Novel 'Home of '48'

YOUNG men have young ideas.

It's a waste of words to tell the young that something "can't be done." They always go ahead and show up their elders.

So it is with one of the lovely homes built for showing in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished homes sponsored by The Washington Post and 26 local business firms.

Located off Western ave. in an attractive lovely section of nearby Chevy Chase, Md., called "Chevy Chase Manor," the distinctive two-story brick residence at right was built by Camalier & Crosby Co. The firm was formed just last year and homes already completed show years of skillful experience. Wherein lies a story. . .

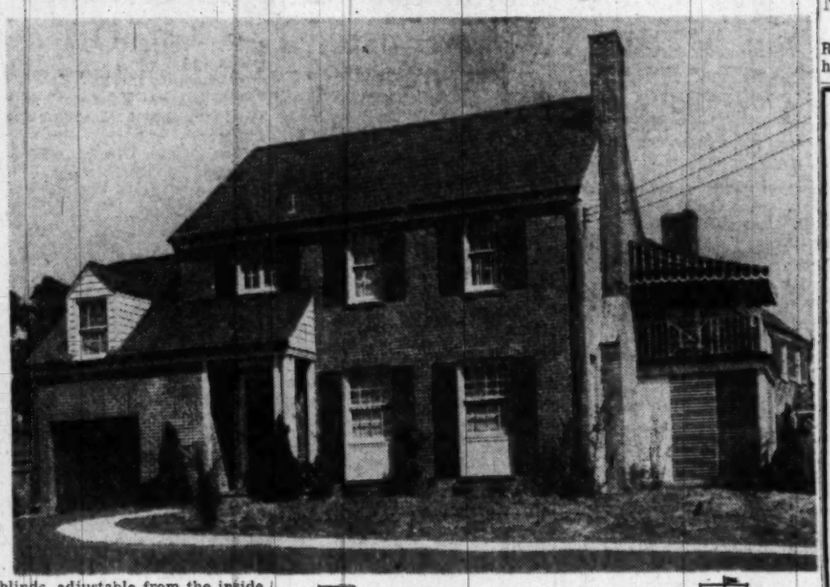
Peter Crosby is a big, blond, energetic, skilled home builder at the age of 25, when most young men are just learning their place in the business world. His partner, Charles A. Camalier, jr., at 31, was a successful businessman even before he entered the building game.

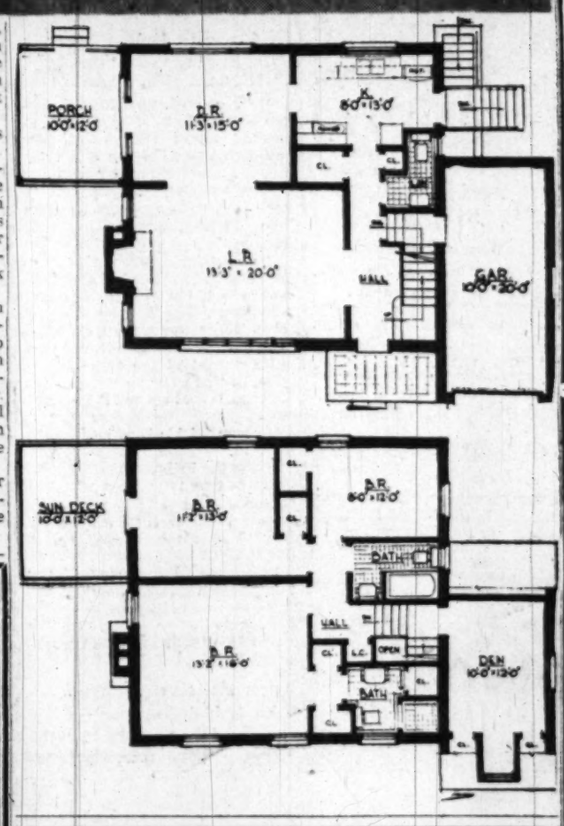
The relative youngsters are out to carve themselves a niche in the home builders' hall of fame with a development of 31 homes, all individually designed. This is Crosby's first experience on his own, while Camalier has been in the building profession for 10 years. Their model home is classified as "Early American," but construction techniques are as modern as tomorrow's newspaper. The two-story floor plan calls for a large living room, dining room, sun porch, kitchen and lavatory on the first floor, with three bedrooms, two baths and a sun deck on the second.

The residence has been attractively decorated by Mr. Wilbert, of Mazor Masterpieces. Walter Huenemoerder, architect, designed the home.

Some of the features worth watching out for on an inspection tour of the house include:

Large living room with huge picture window, attractively draped. Lovely mirrored mantel wall, dining room with picture window and a screen porch which uses Persian blinds, adjustable from the inside.





The all-electric kitchen with a sink under the window, garbage disposal unit, dishwasher, built-in radio and lots of storage and closet areas.

A door off an interior hall opens into the attached garage.

A smartly decorated den opening off the stairway landing to the second floor has walls covered with tufted black patent leather. This feature is really a crowd stopper and has the same effect on prospective home owners that Frank Sinatra does over teen-agers.

Notice the two twin-closets in the master bedroom. Accordion-fold doors do just that—fold up like an accordion. The private bath for the owner's suite has a Hollywood glass door on the shower. The thing looks so enticing it will probably be a Frankenstein, in that the owner's small fry will be taking showers four times a day.

The sun deck over the first-floor sun porch is flanked with a protective iron railing and has a blue awning.

No Parking, Please

Fitchburg, Mass. (U.P.).—When a driveway, he found scrawled with Raymond E. Handley returned to lipstick on the hood: "Please do his automobile parked in front of NOT park in front of exit."

A-Bombs Blamed For Bad Weather

London (AP).—Wood Green, a north London suburb, is far from where any atom bomb ever dropped, but F. P. Stebbings, the "bee millionaire," is sure that atom bombs are to blame for his poor honey yield. The yield of local bees is one sixth of normal this summer, and Stebbings has lost three million of his own bees to the wind and rain. ### Architects Are Liberal With Floor Space

Can't They Leave Room to Shave?

By Harold Kneeland

"THIRTY-ONE thousand," said the young man in the hound-tooth-check sports coat. ". . . But remember, it has 7 rooms and 2½ baths."

We had been trying for two hours to get him down to brass tacks. So the tacks were 24-carat gold, with marquisette diamond heads.

But 2½ baths . . .

My earliest recollection is of splashing in an oval, galvanized iron tub that was dragged out of the woodshed on Saturday nights and was filled from the "reservoir" of the wood-burning kitchen range. It sat on the worn kitchen linoleum, and mother stood guard at the door to keep sister at bay.

The bath was designed to accommodate one very small midget

My wife recalls sponge baths that drew blood, because the water froze to ice before she could apply it.

"Let's see it," I said.

Bitter With the Sweet

THE living room was magnificent. It had a picture window the size of one of Garfinckel's, and looked something like a pair of bowling alleys with walls. The half-bath was what you might expect for a ladies' powder room.

"The upstairs," I suggested. "I work late, and spend much of my time sleeping, and getting over sleeping."

The master bedroom was also something. It didn't have the sweep of the Union Station concourse, but it was expansive. There was a sundeck, outside the French windows, and my wife gasped at the three large closets. Then the young man in the sports coat opened the fourth door.

He bumped his head against the far wall.

It was the bathroom.

It was very regal, in a way. The ceramics were all in pastel—orchid, I'd guess. It's hard to tell when they start diluting colors. But it was rather attentuated.

I wear size 34 shorts, myself, and I fitted comfortably between the lip of the wash basin and the wall. But I'm getting on in age, and with a fortyish pouch the pinch would be intolerable.

Knee Pads Furnished?

THE bathtub had been set into the wall at right angles, necessarily, no one short of a Singer's midget being short enough to fit into one set lengthways.

But, being a 6-footer, I was most interested in what was described in Victorian writings as the commode. Under certain recurrent circumstances, a tall man can scuff his knees something fierce in confines like that.

The other full bath served two bedrooms, but ineffectually, like a waitress in a no-tip cafeteria. It was pretty—cerise, I believe (is that that red color?)—and the gargantuan bathtub had hand cleats for enfeebled simmerers. But the shower stall was one of those war surplus affairs that wreck a masculine funnybone every time he bangs against the sheet iron while lathering. Shower stalls should be padded, like crazy cells.

We told the young man no. In the first place we didn't have the $8000 down, but we didn't tell him that. We just said we didn't want it. And we didn't.

It had brought back to my mind a brief sojourn in a city even deeper in the South than Washington. It was my fortune to be housed in a castle which had been converted to apartments.

A Real Throne Room

THIS was a real castle, mind you, with turrets, and a carriage house the size of a modern apartment duplex. Some old boy back in Victoria's heyday had invented a better mousetrap, or hit the numbers, and had taken a grand tour that included the Rhine. He had come back and built this monstrosity, and then had gone broke.

It was quite a place. The bedsteads were 12 feet high, with pediments of mahogany cupids and dragons that occasionally fell off and threatened a sleeper with skull fracture. But it had bathrooms.

Waist-high, they were lined with Italian tile. The tub was club-footed, but it would easily have accommodated Carnera. The hickory seat was beginning to splinter, and the overhead water tank occasionally dripped on the sojourner before he could pull the 7-foot chain.

But the washbowl was a delight. It was of Carrara marble, as were the mantels and bureau tops and even the end table tops. And it was almost a plateau.

The male of the species splashes a lot, but I never attained enough exuberance over a satisfactory shave to flick one drop of water beyond the reaches of that vast lavatory.

Atomic Age W. C.'s

A FAIR-SIZED family could have bathed, shaved and otherwise all at the same time in that vaulted room. The only trouble was, you never could get any hot water. You never could get any heat, either, with a pipeless furnace, but that has no bearing on our grievance.

A friend of mine with a bent for carpentry and other household chores has adapted his bathroom as well as he can. He has a built-in bookshelf, with a niche for a small, white radio to match the decor, and a flap in the door to permit the passage of fresh highballs. But he still scuffs his knees.

It calls back that bathroom in the Deeper South, with all its forgotten refinements and short-sighted discomfitures.

Why can't our modern architects get together with the shades of Sir Christopher Wren and Stanford White, and design a bathroom that meets the needs of a television owner who has read the latest report of the Atomic Energy Commission—and who is also 6 feet tall?

While they're at it, I wish the blueprint boys would hang the mail order catalogue within reach.

Tampa, Dayton Only Cities Now Offering 5-cent Transit

By George Tucker

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Nickel bus rides are disappearing from America's big towns, and streetcars are disappearing from the little ones.

The 5-cent rides, says the American Transit Association, are being killed by higher operating costs. And the streetcars in many cities are being replaced by buses and trolley coaches.

Actually, Tampa, Fla., and Dayton, Ohio, are the only two cities in the country of more than 100,000 population that have a straight 5-cent transit fare.

New York City's famous nickel ride on its own subway system disappeared last July when the rate went to 10 cents.

Fifty-eight cities have a straight 10-cent fare, and in 20 others fares range from 11 to 13 cents.

In all, 236 cities have had fare increases since V-J Day.

The shift away from streetcars and toward trolley coaches and buses has been a gradual process for 25 years, transit spokesmen say.

Streetcars are still more economical to run where traffic is heavy, and in rush hours in great cities their passenger capacity places them out of reach of all competitive vehicles.

"Buses are like private passenger cars. They can be rerouted at any moment to meet changing situations," one official said.

One company executive explained: "This is a big-money business, and it's up to each company to determine whether scrapping old investments and undertaking new vehicular experience would pay more than maintaining old lines and adding new track when the necessity arises. It costs a heap of money to lay track. It takes a lot of courage to walk off and leave track that's already down and paid for."

Traffic, while off from its war peak, is still far above 1940 level, ATA said. Last year the industry realized only slightly over 1 per cent on its capital investment. In the big year of 1943, it got 4.2 per cent.

Product Previews

NEATEST contribution to comfortable living and informal hospitality we've seen in a long while is a new "kitchenette in a cabinet" called The Butterie. Although smaller than the average household refrigerator, it is compactly arranged to provide a sizable work table, an auxiliary pull-out sandwich or cutting board, a 2.2 cubic foot refrigerator with two standard ice cube trays, a cutlery drawer and storage space for dishes, glassware and foodstuffs.

It is provided with electrical outlets for hotplate, coffee maker, toaster or other appliances; serves as a convenient luncheonette or snack bar for the home, office or boat. For those who have to live in rented rooms, in these days of cramped living spaces, the Butterie converts a room into a satisfactory light-housekeeping apartment. It is finished in maple, walnut or mahogany. The manufacturer is Jefferson Industries, Inc., 309 W. Jackson blvd., Chicago 6, Ill.

Small carpets and rugs are easily cleaned with a new rug tool insert designed to make the General Electric Tidy vacuum cleaner a complete small home-cleaning service. The plastic insert can be easily slipped into the nozzle of the standard Tidy floor and wall brush after removing the brush block.

The leading edge of the insert is grooved to allow easy cleaning close to baseboards and furniture while a tufted brush behind the air passage picks up lint, threads, dog hairs and like particles. The insert makes the Tidy ideal for trailers, apartments and homes with small rug areas.

The rug tool insert will shortly be shipped with Tidy cleaners as a part of the standard set at no extra cost. Present owners may obtain the nozzle from retailers to add to original equipment at a slight extra cost.

Cars, airplanes, washing machines are reaping the benefits of constant redesigning—so why not the electric razor? One firm has put in a new motor with one-third more power, a device which catches all the shavings, a new travel case, a stop-start switch with no wheel to turn, a new type shearing head and other streamlining features. And the customer has the right to try the new product out for 10 days on a trial basis. Manufactured by Schick.

Theater Payroll Is Family Affair

Russelliton, Pa. (AP).—Sam Ross, owner of this western Pennsylvania community's only theater, is breaking his family into show business early. His daughter, Teresa, at 18 is one of the State's youngest licensed movie projectionists; son Richard, 12, helps as usher and ticket taker, and young Rita, 15, helps operate the candy counter.

The family's operation of the theater is completed with Mrs. Ross actng as cashier. Teresa sees nothing unusual in a girl assuming the responsibility of running the theater's projection booth. Photography is her hobby and—shades of the busman's holiday—she even likes to go to the movies on a date!

AFL Electrical Union Head Gets Withdrawal Power

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 17 (AP).—The AFL Electrical Workers today authorized their president to withdraw the union "at his discretion" from the AFL Building Construction Trades Department.

The action was taken by 2200 delegates at the closing session of the union's twenty-third convention. There are 19 unions affiliated with the BCTD.

The delegates approved a report by Union President D. W. Tracy of Washington, D. C., which said the BCTD's plan for settling jurisdictional disputes in the building construction trades has failed to produce results.

"It appears that the power of the Building and Construction Trades Department over jurisdictional disputes has been turned over to a new private agency, which is not part of the department," Tracy said in his report.

Farm Labor Union Support Pledged To President

H. L. Mitchell, president of the National Farm Labor Union, promised yesterday to "leave no stone unturned" to insure President Truman's election.

"It is unthinkable that the farm people of this Nation will again entrust their welfare to the forces that bankrupted them under Republican administrations," he said in a telegram to Mr. Truman.

"The people of this Nation want a former Missouri farmer to stay in the White House for the next four years."

He added that the United States "cannot afford a backward step—and a Republican Administration means just that—back to the good old days of depression."

Jap Balloons Aided Germ War

THE ABOVE MAP, on its face, is fascinating history. In its implications it is a warning of what could happen in the future, should a ruthless enemy take advantage of the natural flow of winds to sweep balloons carrying deadly germs to this country.

Let's start with history. By War Department estimates, the Japs launched 9000 paper or rubberized-silk balloons, from November, 1944, to February, 1946. The Japs were experimenting. They did not know quite what they had, but they got some astonishing results.

They found that the best time of the year for launching was in the late fall and winter when the West-East prevailing winds were most favorable. January, as the map indicates, was particularly favorable.

The War Department has revealed that one of these balloons traveled something like 6300 miles, or to the 85th Meridian (see map) which bisects Hudson Bay, the Great Lakes and the Midwest industrial area, slicing into the Gulf of Mexico between New Orleans and Jacksonville.

In all, 194 complete balloons were found in the United States, Canada, Alaska, Mexico and the Pacific Ocean; 83 fragments of balloons, and 32 bombs or bomb fragments.

Fortunately, the Japs confined their experiments to bombs and incendiaries and total casualties were six persons killed in Oregon by careless handling of a bomb that had been on the ground a month or more.

Now, let's consider the warning.

The frightful possibilities of bacteriological warfare were set forth from the detached perspective of the scientist last year in a 40,000-word technical summary prepared by Drs. T. Rosebury and E. A. Kabat of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. They considered the possibilities of 33 disease-producing bacteria and viruses in spreading pestilence and famine.

High on the list were anthrax (in both animals and humans); botulism, a form of food poisoning; brucellosis or undulant fever; glanders, almost unknown in this country but prevalent in Russia, Asia and Africa, a disease of horses and men; the pneumonic form of black plague; psittacosis or parrot fever; tularemia or rabbit fever; certain typhus-like diseases, and yellow fever.

Yellow fever could be spread anywhere, like the common cold. Rabbit fever could be spread through the air and produce disease of the lungs.

The same winds that carried the ineffective Jap incendiaries and bombs can be used to carry the terribly effective bacteria. There is no special need for precise accuracy, as in gunfire or airplane bombing. If they missed one city or one flourishing countryside, another city, another countryside would do just as well.

Look at the wind arrows on the map. From the Kamchatka Peninsula of Russia, from the Sea of Okhotsk, the prevailing winds are north-south. These winds lead into the general west-east wind sweep across the Pacific. Nearing our coast they would be diverted gently northward to our Northwest; abruptly northward to Canada and Alaska; gently southward to our Southwest; abruptly southward to Mexico; or straight inland.

More New Housing Built Than New Families Formed

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—More new homes will be built in 1948 than new families formed, the Building Officials Conference of America was told this week.

Melvin H. Baker, president of National Gypsum Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and chairman of the Construction Industry Information Committee, said this "will cut into the housing backlog of families in doubled-up and tumble-down homes."

Predicting that home building this year will be up, five billion dollars over 1947, he said that despite this "it will take several years to replace the millions of obsolete buildings and to satisfy the demand that accumulated during the war years."

Recounting 1947 accomplishments, he said the industry in that year "in addition to starting 900,000 new homes, also put under construction 250,000 nonresidential buildings including 3,000 churches, 2,800 schools and libraries, 43,000 stores and warehouses, nearly 14,000 factories and workshops and more than 3,000 office buildings."

Thomas S. Holden, president of F. W. Dodge Corp., fact-finding organization for the industry, told the conference that "houses being built currently in the United States offer more to average families in comfort, convenience and neighborhood amenities than is generally obtainable in any other country."

In relation to population and needs, he added, housing output in this country is proceeding faster than anywhere else in the world.

Describing construction costs as "higher than most people in the industry like to charge, higher than most of the buying public like to pay," Holden said increases since the prewar period "have been compounded of pyramided taxes, of scarcity prices, of inflation, inflation and more inflation."

Weather Grounds Hitchcocks; They Miss Rio Plane

Miami, Fla., Sept. 17 (AP).—Squally weather caused a forced landing at Fort Pierce, Fla., today for Frank Hitchcock and his bride as they flew in their private plane toward Miami for a clipper honeymoon trip to Rio de Janeiro.

For the second time today, a big Pan American clipper took off for Rio without them when they failed to reach here in time.

Blustery weather wasn't the only trouble the newlyweds experienced.

Stephany, 23, daughter of the Pennsylvania coal fields, cherished a religious marriage ceremony, which was performed yesterday by Father Demosthenes J. Mekas of Miami, but the Rev. Anastasius Bandy of Jacksonville predicted that the marriage would be stricken from the records of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Father Bandy said neither the wealthy polo player, 39, nor his bride is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Realty Roundup

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION of Home Builders last week warned its 14,000 members that regulations giving veterans a 30-day preference in rentals and sale housing were still in effect. Violators face a possible $5000 fine and/or one year in jail, NAHB added. Veterans' preference regulations were extended to April 1, 1949, by the Housing and Rent Act of 1948.

Essentials of the act provide that all homes must be held for sale or rental to veterans for 30 days after completion. After that, they are opened to nonveterans also. During construction and for a 30-day period the house must be advertised ("publicly offered in good faith") as follows:

a. By posting of placards or signs in front of each structure or in a conspicuous location on the project site.

b. Such sign must legibly contain rent or sales price, the fact that the accommodations are offered for sale or rent exclusively to veterans, and the name and address of owner or agent.

c. Advertisements must be inserted in newspapers in general circulation in the community on at least 3 days during the first 20 days after completion and must contain the same information as on the signs of placards.

d. If a subsequent offering is made at a reduced rate, the signs must be altered accordingly, and the structure held for the veteran at the reduced price for 7 days. If a newspaper advertisement has been previously used, none is necessary in this case unless it is the customary method in the community to make public offering of housing accommodations.

In the case of large housing projects, the first or "model" dwelling can be used to determine the period of exclusive offering to veterans, provided the advertisements are made applicable to all other similar units, and these units are actually offered at the same time. Thus, if the first or "model" house is unsold after the 30-day period, other similar units which have been offered with the "model" are freed of veterans' preference.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards celebrated Constitution Day, September 17, through 291 member boards in 42 States, with at least 25,000 realtors taking part in the exercises. Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, guest speaker of the Berkeley (Calif.) Realty Board, cautioned the American people not to take for granted the privileges of the Constitution.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars have presented their stand on major subjects to the White House. In regard to housing, the VFW wants extension of rent control beyond March, 1949; a five-year program of 500,000 public housing units; an unlimited secondary market for GI and FHA housing loans to veterans.

Largest pre-convention registration in its history is reported by the National Association of Real Estate Boards for its 41st annual convention, November 14-20, in the Commodore Hotel, New York. "Opportunities for Greater Service" is the convention theme and the program will stress that and advice on selling in the developing buyers' market.

BRIEFS: Leo M. Bernstein has been admitted to the National Association of Real Estate Brokers. Former Prize Fighter Gene Tunney has formed his own real estate and building firm in Old Greenwich, Conn. . . . Housing starts dropped sharply in August, reports BLS, when builders started 83,000 new nonfarm dwelling units, a decline of 11,000 starts, or 12 per cent from the July figure . . . Martin-Senour Co., Chicago paint manufacturer, reports price increase in some of its products . . . Steel production in the first eight months of 1948 totaled more than 57,500,000 tons of ingots and steel for castings, a new peacetime record . . . Mortgage Bankers Association meets next week in New York. Principal speakers are Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), HHFA Administrator Raymond Foley, Franklin D. Richards and Curt Mack, of FHA and Asa B. Groves and John M. Dervan of the VA.

Science Finds Remedy For Nose Bleeds

Vitamin P, derived from lemon rind, can prevent or diminish nosebleeds in rheumatic children, Dr. I. Newton Kugelmass of New York City writes in the Archives of Otolaryngology. The recurrent nosebleed is one of the earliest signs of rheumatic fever complicated by heart disease, he said, and the bleeding attacks occur in about one-third of all rheumatic children. Dr. Kugelmass said the vitamin builds up the strength of the capillaries in the nose.

A fan mounted on wheels can completely change the air in an ordinary four or five room house every two minutes, the Westinghouse Electric Corp. says. The air-moving power of the 16-inch fan was boosted to the level of a 20 or 24-inch fan by designing large-surface plastic blades, sharply angled, and by adding five curved injector rings surrounding the blades.

A NEW discovery is that transmutation of atoms can have biological effects. The transmutation in thise case is the change of radioactive phosphorus into sulphur. When a phosphorus atom shoots out its ray, that atom instantly turns into sulphur.

This transmutation acts like the recoil of a gun. When the radioactive phosphorus atom's ray shoots out in one direction, the sulphur atom that remains recoils in the opposite direction.

This recoil is strong enough to tear a chromosome, the thread-like object that governs heredity. Such a rent can change hereditary characters.

In addition to the radioactive phosphorus atoms, there are about 100 others, all now made in Oak Ridge atomic piles, that can be used in microbe work. Each one holds new possibilities for useful knowledge.

Gulls Practice First

Gloucester, Mass. (U.P.)—The sea gulls at Pigeon Cove have a practice pool for their young. In one of the large granite quarries is a deposite of water, much like an artificial lake. There the gulls make their nests and teach their young to swim and fly before taking them to sea.

Dane Parliament To Record Debate

COPENHAGEN (AP)—The Presidium of the Danish Parliament is planning to record speeches by the delegates instead of taking them down in shorthand.

The Danish government paper, Social-Demokraten, which revealed the plans, said no other parliament in the world so far has recorded debate in this way.

The 16 shorthand writers who at present are taking down parliament speeches will not be dismissed even if the plans go through. As they do now, they will still have to edit and rewrite the speeches.

Detectors Probe For Air Pirates

HONGKONG (AP)—Air pirates are to be fought with the latest in scientific devices, the Hongkong government has announced.

Should you board a plane in Hongkong in the near future, the chances are that you will first have to pass inspection by a device much like those used in prisons to detect the presence of saws and other metal objects on prisoners. The "metal detector," as it's called, will prevent passengers from carrying firearms aboard the planes.

The Good Earth Offered a Challenge . . .

By Fred Sailor Harvey

"How do you capture the blue of the sky to beautify a hunk of clay?"

THE south field had been sown with soy beans in June. When the shoots popped through the ground, the weather was dry and they grew slowly. Then the rain came and the small yellow-green plants reached up. They sent out branches with broad dark green leaves and they grew tall and tropical.

In July small flowers like tiny wistaria blossoms formed at the base of the stems and within a few weeks these were followed by the seed pods. The pods swelled up and lengthened and a soft downy fuzz covered their surface. When the shape of the beans within the pod could be seen, a decision had to be made. We could wait no longer.

While we were sowing the beans my son had asked: "Are we going to turn them under for green fertilizer or let them ripen out for harvest in the fall?" And I had answered "Let's wait and see," for it is difficult to give up a ready dollar today in the hope of collecting two tomorrow.

But that south field sorely needed the richness of those lush green plants turned under and the nitrogen in the little nodules on their roots. So when the decision could be put off no longer I said to Pen, "Go ahead, plough 'em down," and when he had finished I began discing.

Enter the Villain

THE ground was soft and springy under the wheels of the jeep. A thick tangled mass of green plant life lay under the soil with only the tips sticking out at the edge of the furrows.

The shining steel discs cut in deep, slicing through the crumbly soil and working it down into a solid mass. I rode along with pleasant thoughts of the rich humus that would be formed from the rotting vegetation, a richness that would be turned up again to the surface the next time the field is ploughed, so its nourishment can be reached by the shallow roots of pasture grass, oats or wheat.

But all over the field there were spots where the plough had turned up hard yellow clay. It lay there in ugly folds, already baked solid by the sun. Again and again the disc cut through those unfertile patches, but the clay refused to crumble. It lay stubbornly in shining slices and clods, glittering and unfriendly.

So when they called me to the house I went gladly, carrying with me rebellious thoughts of protest against the uselessness of tight-packed clay.

The family was all in the garage and they were grouped around something on the floor. Individually, then collectively they were jumping up and down with excitement. But they do that quite easily, over a new batch of kittens, a double-yolk egg or a mouse dead or walking. So I did not hurry too fast.

"IT'S a big box from Holland—from Pieter," called my wife. "Hurry up and open it."

The thought of another box from Pieter made my back and shoulders ache. Last year and the year before he kept sending boxes of tulip bulbs. They were very beautiful when they bloomed but the task of building new flower beds in the hard grounds of late summer is appalling.

Pieter was our good friend when we lived in Holland. From a small shop in The Hague he sold rare and beautiful flowers at very high prices. Some of the orchids he raised in a big glass room on top of his house, at the edge of the sand dunes near the sea.

He had friends and relatives in the Dutch Indies where the orchids grow wild. When they found a new variety in the jungle they packed its roots carefully with moss from the trees and shipped it quickly by the Dutch airline to Pieter. The fragile plants came almost half way around the world in a few days to The Hague where Pieter nursed them in the glass room on his roof until they bloomed.

But he also was an artist and it hurt him to see his beautiful flowers displayed and sold in vases of the wrong color. So he bought a small pottery plant out in the country where there was a deposit of the right kind of clay. For years he experimented with glass and colors and shapes. His little factory learned to turn out beautiful work and when people came to buy his flowers he made them take the vases, too.

THEN the war years l[illegible] and the Nazis came to Holland. They dropped bombs in the glass orchid room on Pieter's roof. They tore the rest of the house down because it interfered with the movement of their troops on the sand dunes.

Soon after the war he sent us a small picture of himself, taken beside the little pottery plant where he lived. He was very thin, but smiling. He said he was still growing flowers and making pottery more beautiful than ever.

So we began sending parcels of chocolate and rice and cigarettes, all the things he wanted or needed but could not buy in Holland. Because of restrictions on foreign exchange he could not get dollars to send, so he sent tulips. Then he stopped telling us of the things he needed for he knew we had too many tulips and he did not want any more packages without paying.

With the pliers I clipped the wire that bound the box. When the top boards were off I could see that it was not tulip bulbs and I felt relieved. There were wads and nests of excelsior and from each one we pulled out a product of Pieter's pottery. Delicately rounded bud vases with rich blue, green and amber glaze. Odd shaped cups and coarser pots of rough, mottled robin's egg blue.

We set it out in a strange and beautiful row on the garage floor and my wife said, "Why on earth did he send us all that?" and I said, "Obviously, so we can sell it and buy the things he needs. We've sold eggs and chickens and peaches and steers. Now we'll start on pottery."

Then I went on back to my discing in the soybean field. And when the blades cut through the lumps of clay I realized that even those flinty clods have a usefulness if one knows how to use them. I thought my hands might be able to take one of those yellow chunks and shape it into a nice flat dish, in the long winter evenings. But how would I start catching the blue of the sky to wrap around it for beauty? When we send Pieter his next package perhaps I'll ask him. It would be something to try and shape it into a nice flat dish.

Inflation Offset

Rise in Home Insurance Seen Needed

By Paul M. Herron

MORE than half of the home owners in the Washington area are not carrying enough insurance to replace or repair their property if destroyed by fire, leading fire insurance companies report.

The fire insurance companies and the United States Chamber of Commerce have recently begun advising home owners that as building costs increase and the value of homes and other property goes up, more insurance should be added.

They point out that the home which cost $5000 to build in 1939 now costs $10,540, but many insurance policies are still being carried on the $5000 valuation.

In view of this, the Chamber of Commerce, insurance companies and mortgage lenders are urging property owners by pamphlet, post cards and through their agents to consider their current insurance protection and to increase their coverage if policies will not replace their buildings at present costs.

Even if a policy paid 100 per cent of the replacement cost of a home the owner still stands to lose on the deal. Temporary housing is both difficult to find and expensive.

A report by the District Fire Department for the fiscal year of 1948 showed a 54.1 per cent increase in fire losses over 1947, despite a drop in the number of fires. The report pointed out that the increased loss was due primarily to replacement costs of material and labor in this period of spiraling prices.

Fire insurance rates in the District average 80 cents per $1000 valuation per year for brick homes and $2 per $1000 valuation for frame houses. The rate scale, slightly higher in Maryland and Virginia, is less for policies in effect for three years or more. Windstorm, tornado and hurricane protection is available with a fire insurance policy for an extra 6 cents per $1000 per year.

Fire insurance companies are optimistic about policies becoming more in line with present home values. They report that 20 to 35 per cent of home owners they have contacted in regard to increasing their policies have done so and the trend is upward.

Fire Prevention Tips

By presidential proclamation Fire Prevention Week is set for October 3 to 9. Aid the campaign by watching those matches and cigarette stubs. They cause nearly 30 per cent of home fires. Don't misuse electrical equipment or overload circuits. Keep cellars and furnace rooms free of trash. Never use gasoline or other highly inflamable solvents in the home. Burn leaves in small piles, preferably on a damp, windless day. Finally, periodically inspect the home. Start in the cellar and go through to the attic, removing discarded junk and rubbish.

Research Aids Floors in 'Homes of '48'

PLANNING to visit some of the exhibit houses in the "Homes of '48" showing? Then take a look at the floors. Most of the main living areas are carpeted, but some open spaces give the visitor an opportunity to inspect the extensive improvements which have been made in floor as well as wall and other materials, during recent years.

The Construction Industry Information Committee has pointed out that economies in manufacture, greater durability and flexibility, plus pleasing color and appearance, have resulted from large-scale research by manufacturers and others.

New Materials Developed

"In addition, entirely new materials have been developed through the continuing studies," the committee said. "This is particularly true in the case of insulation, which now is made of wood, sugarcane, cotton, and other vegetable fibers, and such minerals as slag and certain kinds of rock to form mineral wool, glass fibers, aluminum foil, and expanded vermiculite.

"Insulation materials now are available in the form of sheets, blankets, batts or large pads, and loose granules, giving the owners of homes and other buildings a wide selection from which to meet specific insulation problems.

Tile in Light Hues

"Among flooring materials which have been improved through research are asphalt tile, which now is available in a range of lighter colors and can be used on ordinary wood subfloors as a result of adding plastic ingredients which have increased the flexibility of the product. Asphalt roofing also has been made more flexible and durable by use of a softer asphalt and by addition of a coat of sealer to the exposed surfaces.

"The softer flooring materials, such as linoleum and composition tile, have gained increased wearing qualities and are now available in a wider range of colors.

"Asbestos, combined with Portland cement, now is made into flat and corrugated wallboard which is both weatherproof and fireproof. Asbestos roofing and siding have been improved in appearance and wearing qualities through painstaking research."

Squeak Removed

Portland, Me., (U.P.)—A repair garage here which prides itself on its ability to remove noises and squeaks from automobiles presented a customer with a bill for $1.25 for "removing one woodchuck." The animal had been placed beneath the rear seat by the owner's young son. The owner couldn't locate the squeak.

Germans Hanker To Go Whaling

BERLIN (AP).—Germans are clamoring to get back into the international whaling industry, from which they have been barred since the war. They claim that for them it would not be a commercial business but "a national necessity, because we need oils and fats for the nation's nourishment."

The Germans would first need Allied permission to return to the high seas—since maritime operation is now forbidden them. Next they would need a fleet. The "mother ships" of their prewar whaling fleets were mostly taken for reparations. The little ships have been devoted to other purposes, such as permitted coastal shipping.

Most of the shouting for restoration of whaling rights is done by Russian-controlled Berlin newspapers.

Argentina's Beach Guards Want Less Work

Mar del Plata, Argentina (AP).—The life guards union here wants better working conditions.

The 30 beach guards at this summer resort formed their union a few weeks ago and told the provincial legislature they want the size of the corps doubled so there will be two guards on every patrol. They also want shorter working hours, observation towers on the beaches and better rescue equipment. But they didn't ask for more money.

Meat Pies Need No Meat

Rochester, England (AP).—A Rochester food control committee bought a 3-ounce meat pie that contained less than one sixty-fourth ounce of meat. "Isn't that too little?" it asked the Ministry of Food. "No," replied the ministry, "as a matter of fact meat pies aren't required to contain any meat at all."

Inspiration Via Williamsburg

THE BUILDER of this unique Williamsburg colonial had a lot of architectural tricks up his sleeve. The downstairs den or bedroom has been partly pine paneled, with a built-in window seat provided. The 14-foot bath on the second floor is divided into three sections, with floor to ceiling built-in open cabinet in the center. Scores of small out-of-the-way storage areas under the dormer windows have been provided, plus a cedar closet and dressing room in the master bedroom. The downstairs has a large living room, dining room and kitchen, plus the den. A screened porch opens off the dining room. Like the plan? It can be seen daily and Sunday at Alta Vista Terrace, Bethesda, Md. Built by Cambridge Construction Co. and furnished by the P. J. Nee Co., it is one of 13 residences on display in the "Homes of '48" housing revue. See page 3 of this section for a map and directions to all homes

Church Secret Kept

Southfleet, England (AP).—A rector and a single parishioner still keep the secret of the entrance to a subterranean passage beneath this town's ancient parish church. In wartime years, it was there that the church's valuable silver plate and other treasures were hidden against the possibility of a German invasion.

Armless Gardener

Denham, England (AP).—An accident which cost Tom Powell both arms 24 years ago hasn't kept him from his favorite pastime. With artifical arms, he sowed and raked and weeded—and won second prize for the best kept garden in the district.

Trucks Move Sheep

Sydney, Australia (AP).—That romantic figure of Australia, the sheep drover, is often a driver today. Wellshot Ranch at Jiracombe (Queensland, Australia) recently moved 25,000 sheep over 600 miles in a fleet of six motor trailers which carry 1500 sheep at a time.

The Artisans of yesteryear are an inspiration to the would-be Artisans of today. Simplicity is the Keynote.

See Mt. Gilead, Fairfax County

Understandingly and lovingly restored and modernized, this 1749 Williamsburg Colonial graces a 26-acre richly landscaped tract (originally a part of the 90,000-acre Crown Grant to Lord Halifax), further improved by an architecturally correct 3-car garage with guest suite above and other quaint outbuildings. The gardens, vegetable and flower, are quite a feature. THE GRACIOUS FIRST FLOOR offers a large living and dining room each with distinctive fireplace, den with half bath and a modern kitchen. Two lovely bedrooms, one with fireplace, 2 baths and closets comprise the 2nd floor. If you wish less acreage the owner will retain about 19 acres and reduce price accordingly.

Experts Say

Birds Prefer Fruit Trees Near Nests

FOR birds to feather their nests in your vicinity, they've got to have all the comforts of home—namely, trees that attract them.

Right now many of our feathered friends are making plans for migration to more desirable climes for the winter. However, now's the time nature lovers may plan tree plantings that will attract them on their return visit, says the Davey Tree Expert Co.

Like man, birds can be attracted through their stomachs. They particularly like to flit about cherry trees during the fruiting season. Of course, they are apt to nibble off a good many cherries, but you may consider this a very minor price to pay for the privilege of having them about your grounds.

Among the birds likely to frolic about cherry trees are song sparrows, orioles, scarlet tanagers, kingbirds, grosbeaks, robins and brown thrashers. For such feathered stay-at-homes as the robins, the crabapple provides a small fruit the birds relish after Jack Frost gets busy in the fall.

The mulberry ranks close to the cherry in providing a meeting place for attractive chirpers. The fruit, of course, is the main attraction. Others include the redcedar, tupelo, mountain ash, hawthorn, hackberry and flowering dogwood. Most of these provide autumn and winter meals for the non-migratory birds.

Such shrubs as blackberries, elderberries, blueberries and huckleberries make choice tidbits in summer while the barberry and the sumacs contribute edibles to winter. The diet you offer birds plays a most important part in attracting them to your grounds and in keeping them there.

October Best Month for Tulips

Tulips should be planted in October. They are a hardy flower and will grow in any section of the United States with only a few simple planting instructions for the gardener to follow.

Because they are easy to grow outdoors and add rich colors to any garden, tulips have been one of the most popular flowers for over 400 years. Tulips also are favorites with city dwellers and those who have no gardens. In window boxes or individual bowls they add grace and beauty to a room. As a third attraction, tulips are extremely adaptable for easy and effective arranging as cut flowers. Their graceful stems, long leaves and oval blooms fall into decorative patterns requiring little effort on the arranger's part.

Hershey Garden Shows Its Glory

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 18.—The Hershey Rose Garden with its 37,000 plants in more than 775 varities is now in its autumnal glory and will continue blooming until the first killing frost.

In autumn the colors are deeper, more brilliant and the tints that are unsuspected in the spring appear when the days and nights are cooler. Also, roses are more petaled in autumn than in spring. The 7 acres of beauty are open to the public.

Church Bid Disclosed

'Blanket' Garden in Winter to Check Soil Erosion

By James H. Beattie

HIGHLY productive soil is the most important item in the art of gardening, but unsuspected losses of fertility are constantly occurring through erosion and leaching. These losses are liable to be particularly severe during the winter months. Muddy water and gullies following summer rains are easily recognized as severe losses, but unprotected garden space in winter will lose large amounts of soil and soluble nutrients. These losses may not show as a volume of muddy water and ditches, but, although slow, they are serious.

We have repeatedly called attention to the desirability of protecting garden soil during winter months by cover cropping, mulching and similar methods. It will bear repeating. This year the situation is particularly bad because the Washington area has had its full seasonal quota of rainfall and the stage is set for additional losses of fertility from the sodden soil.

Soil, especially that on slopes, needs a blanket during the autumn and winter months. A covering of vegetable matter will reduce surface erosion and prevent the formation of ditches. Even where no visible evidences of erosion are apparent, the splashes made by raindrops are continually moving soil particles downhill toward their eventual loss as far as that garden is concerned.

Even Weeds Serve Purpose

A VEGETABLE mulch or a cover crop of rye or some other plant, or even the weedy remains from the gardening operations will arrest this destructive movement.

There is a natural temptation to clean up the garden and put it in spick and span condition for next spring. On sloping ground where there is danger of serious erosion, this may not be a good plan to follow. The removal of the old material and the planting of a cover crop would be better.

Poultry litter, leaves from shade trees, leaves and leaf-mold from nearby woods and partly decayed compost from the garden compost pile or any other weed-seed free material that does not harbor insects and plant diseases is suitable.

Sawdust and shavings have been suggested as mulching material for the garden. For general use these materials should be composted in advance. For the acid-loving plants, including azaleas, rhododendrons and others, this class of material is ideal without the preliminary composting, but its use should be accompanied by liberal applications of commercial fertilizer.

Rabbit Food, Too

GREEN crops meet the needs of the average gardener for the winter protection of the garden soil. There is still time this autumn to sow some of these winter crops. Kale makes an excellent soil cover and it has the added advantage of supplying greens during autumn and spring.

For those who keep chickens or rabbits, kale has the added advantage of being an excellent source of green material. When sowed for use as a cover crop the seeds are broadcast at the rate of about an ounce to each 1000 square feet and lightly raked in. September 15 to 20 is about the latest planting time for this cover.

Spring oats make a very desirable cover crop. It is a tender plant that kills down during early winter but the remains form an effective soil blanket. This cover presents no disposal problem during the following spring. Rye, the old standby, may be sowed until late autumn, usually the middle of November, with excellent chances for a good growth before winter. But it is a difficult plant to dispose of in spring, particularly if allowed to grow too long.

Mulch Those Slopes

THE mulching of small fruits, bulbs and other yard and garden plants may serve the double purpose of winter protection and arresting soil erosion. This is particularly true on sloping sites. Strawberries are protected from alternate freezing and thawing and soil washing is reduced to a minimum.

In most cases heavy mulches should not be applied to strawberries until late autumn, usually just before severe freezing weather occurs. The mulch may be piled between the rows in advance thereby providing soil protection during the period of heavy autumn rains.

Several plans may be followed to lessen the loss of soil and plant food from the garden during the growing season. Mulching of the surface is a distinct help. This practice provides an economical method for reducing the cost of weed control.

In the case of gardens located on steep slopes erosion may be lessened by placing the rows across the slope. If the surface is uneven the rows should follow the contour of the land.

Some who garden on steep slopes plant asparagus, herbs, blackberries, raspberries, grapes and other permanent plants on small levees every 15 to 20 feet which act to hold the rains and thereby reduce erosion. In other cases grass strips a few feet wide are left at intervals with strips of garden crops between these strips. These usually prevent serious erosion. Still others leave a narrow grass strip between each pair of rows.

Commercial fertilizer, compost and other soil treatments required to produce garden crops are relatively costly and it does not pay to allow a large proportion of them to wash away. There is no apparent substitute for fertile, well conditioned soil for the growing of quality products in the home garden. The winter care of the garden to lessen soil losses will accomplish worth while results in increasing its level of productivity.

This is what happens, on a small scale, of course, to your backyard garden plot after erosion takes hold. Soil protection during the winter months by cover cropping, mulching and similar methods is recommended to retain soil fertility

Your Garden In September

JUST as it offers the very finest time for lawn care, fall is an ideal seasons for tending to your weed problems. This month, when you're renovating your lawn, include a weed eradication program!

Today, with the advent of improved, selective lawn weed controls, you can destroy weeds easily, safely—and completely. Not just the tops are killed but the stems and roots—the entire plant is destroyed once and for all. The new controls kill such pesky lawn weeds as dandelion, plantain and chickweed along with some 100 others, and yet they do not harm ordinary grass nor affect the soil.

Here is how you can combine fall lawn care with an effective weed control program:

1. Dilute 2 tablespoonfuls of weed killer in any small-mouthed gallon container of water.
2. Spray entire lawn area. This dilution will effectively cover 200 square feet of ordinary lawn area.
3. When weeds start to die, feed lawn with 4 pounds of complete plant food per 100 square feet of area. Soak lawn thoroughly.
4. A day or two later, go over entire lawn, loosening the soil on thin areas with your rake. Reseed these areas with good grass seed.

Ozone Put to Work

Springfield, Mass. (U.P.).—A device which clears the air is installed in the dark room of Ray Sparrow, a photographer. The contraption, which was built by his 20-year-old son, gives off ozone, a form of oxygen. It rids his darkroom of acid odors.

Machine Too Generous

Memphis, Tenn. (U.P.).—Postmaster A. L. Moreland took out of circulation a temperamental stamp-vending machine that ignored a nickel but welcomed a penny in the slot, giving customers an air-mail stamp and a shower of ones.

Costs Cut to a Minimum

Three young veterans, all practising architects, have designed a minimum-cost home that will provide all of the basic home needs and still stay within the budget of home-builders.

This home contains 612 square feet that can be furnished for $1,784.65.

It isn't a big home, but it will give home-builders a two-bedroom house that can be built at pre-war cost. If you're disappointed because you can't get more for your money, take a look at this plan.

The kitchen is compact, yet roomy. There is little actual counter space, but the drainboard on the sink, part of the range, flat-top washing machine, and a counter-type water heater give you nearly 15 feet of work surface.

The owners' bedroom is large enough for a double bed. Corner windows use a minimum of wall space, and are high enough off the floor so that dressers will fit under them. The child's bedroom has a recess for two bunks. Both wardrobe closets are curtained, eliminating the cost of double doors.

To keep heating cost to a minimum, two small space heaters were planned. One fits into the lower half of the dining area and the smaller bedroom. The other fits under the linen shelves in the bathroom and heats both the bath and larger bedroom.

Disabled, Discouraged Vets Take Pride in 'Vetmobile'

Edward T. Adkins, a Naval Reserve chief petty officer of Palo Alto, Calif., demonstrates his "Vetmobile," designed especially for disabled veterans. Built of surplus plane parts, the scooter-like vehicle can crawl or go 20 miles per hour. There is no steering wheel. A tiller that looks like a joy-stick can be operated with the legs. The seat revolves to let in a disabled man

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18 (AP).—The "Vetmobile" is wrought of surplus plane parts and the wrath of a Navy veteran.

It's for disabled veterans to build to get around in, maybe to earn a living with. It can crawl or go 20 miles an hour. From it a legless veteran could sell ice cream cones to kids, newspapers to their parents, or duplicate the keys on your chain.

It has been built by a quietly indignant man named Edward T. Adkins, a Naval Reserve chief petty officer who has worked his way through several junkpiles looking for ways to get disabled, discouraged veterans back on their feet—whether they have feet or not.

Adkins' answer to the disabled veteran problem is the "Vetmobile," a gadget-festooned, scooter-like vehicle which Adkins says could be adapted for use by veterans without arms, or without legs, or partially paralyzed.

On its low chassis, running on old tail wheels from fighter planes, is mounted a strange assembly. A plane charger provides motive power—either directly from the two-cycle gas engine or from the electric generator it turns, or from the batteries which the generator charges.

"There's one job right there," Adkins. "A disabled man could charge the batteries of planes with one of these things. He could get himself around, do a useful job, and take pride in it."

Playing on His Old Cornet

Crewe, England (AP).—Sleepless neighbors pleaded with 14-year-old Willie Nixon to give his blaring cornet a rest—but his hot licks got hotter than ever. So they complained to the local council, which owns Willie's house.

His parents were ordered to restrict Willie's practice to 15 minutes every evening and 1 hour on Sundays.

Homer Makes Robber Run

Chicago (AP).—Clarence Carlson parked his car and watched a sandlot ball game. A thug crept up, struck him on the head and tried to wrest a diamond ring from his finger. Just then the batter hit a home run. The ball bounded toward the automobile. A fielder ran after it. The robber, fearing he would be caught, fled empty-handed.

GARDEN TIPS

DAFFODILS, or, if you prefer the Latin name, narcissus, offer gardeners a wonderful opportunity to exercise their talents for different types of plantings. Whether given a natural setting, planted in clumps in the perennial border, or placed in formal beds, these gorgeous flowers are right at home.

If your land has a field or piece of woodland, you can show daffodils off to best possible advantage. They are lovely planted under such deep-rooted trees as the oak and the birch. Avoid planting under shallow-rooted trees, however, because they rob daffodils of needed moisture and plant food. Daffodils also make a beautiful picture when planted around natural rock formations. The shading afforded by trees and rocks is excellent for red-cupped varieties which may scald when grown in the open.

Spray Weeds Away

When growing daffodils in woodland areas, informality is your guide. Try to visualize how they might grow if they were not placed by human hands and place them in informal groups here and there throughout the area, makinhg full use of natural accents. If the site to be planted is crowded with weeds, spray them away with the new, improved, selective weed control before planting. When weeds are dead, broadcast four pounds of complete plant food per 100 square feet of area, plant your bulbs from four to six inches deep and seed the area with a pasture type grass seed.

When planting daffodils in formal beds or in clumps, apply four pounds of complete plant food per 100 square feet of area, work well into the soil and plant your bulbs. For row planting, dig trenches two inches deeper than needed and replace about 1½ inches of loose soil. Apply complete plant food at the rate of one pound per 20 feet of trench, mix it thoroughly with the loose soil, cover with about one half inch of soil and set bulbs.

In setting the bulbs be certain that they rest firmly on the soil and that there is no air space left between the soil and the bulbs.

In average soil, plant daffodils about four inches deep. In heavy soils do not plant quite as deep. In light soils plant five inches deep. A good rule of thumb is that it's better on the side of planting too deep than too shallow.

'Atom City' Is Halfway Toward Planned Future, Lots of Elbow Room

By John Fahey

RICHLAND, WASH., Sept. 18 (AP).—This town, once a farming community of 300, is growing toward a future mapped like a well-marked highway.

Blossoming in the southeastern Washington desert beside the Hanford works of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, Richland has passed the halfway mark in its planned expansion to a population of 26,000 by July 1, 1949.

When Richland reaches its permanent population it will be "a town with elbow room, designed for modern living," according to E. L. Richmond, community manager. There will be two commercial districts a mile apart, an arrangement intended "to prevent the traffic and parking problems that plague the mechants of most American cities."

The second business district is being started. The first is virtually completed.

Hand-Picked Businesses . .

BEFORE the planned expansion is fully executed, however, a temporary city will be torn down. Commercial operators in the business district will be hand-picked by the General Electric Co., prime contractor with the Atomic Energy Commission for manufacturing plutonium at the Hanford works.

It was in 1943 that the Government bought the entire community and several thousand surrounding acres near the confluence of the Columbia and Yakima Rivers. There it established a highly secret operation producing ingredients for the atomic bomb. At the height of its early construction, Richland bulged with a temporary population of 51,000. The wind-swept town threatened to burst its prefab seams.

Two years ago the community management division of the General Electric Co. set in motion a planned evolution toward elimination of temporary housing and its replacements with permanent homes and stores.

They established North Richland, a construction town outside the limits of Richland, where 13,500 workmen and their families would live while the permanent town was in transition.

The community today boasts the world's biggest mobile camp, with facilities for 6000 family trailers. Before 1953, General Electric planners expect North Richmond to fold its canopies and steal away, leaving only the permanent town.

Land Is Rented

COMMERCIAL expansion in permanent Richland, like housing, has been controlled according to a master plan. Businessmen are invited by the General Electric Co. to bid for specified locations, after the company has considered each operator on the basis of finances, experience, trade connections and character.

Once selected, these operators may erect their own buildings on land rented for a percentage of their gross sales. Until recently, the company constructed the buildings.

The number of enterprises Richland eventually can support has been carefully forecast. General Electric believes its 26,000 employes will support 11 grocery and meat markets, two dairies, a delicatessen and two bakeries, as an example. There is one department store now; in a year there will be two.

The community management division has sketched locations for three men's furnishing stores, the same number of women's ready-to-wear shops, and two shoe stores. They plan for two furniture companies, five auto dealers and 11 service stations with one repair garage. Richland someday will have eight drug stores, four malt shops, three cigar and newsstands, six barber shops, three theaters and a tavern.

Richland today has 5150 frame concrete block or stucco houses. Many of them are precut buildings, and 1000 more dwellings like them will be finished at Christmas time. Dormitories are erected for single men and women.

The private yards are relatively large and the streets curve gently according to the omnipresent master plan. Few of the buildings are more than two stories high. Richland is known not only as the atom city, the preplanned town of the Washington desert, but the town without an elevator.

New Hildy Johnson Spots Bomb in Every Briefcase

By John Crosby

"THE FRONT PAGE," the old Hecht-MacArthur play which is pretty close to sacred literature to a lot of old police reporters, has reached radio, as was perhaps inevitable, in somewhat altered form. The names of the characters are unchanged and Hildy Johnson, the reporter who wanted to get out of the business into something more respectable, still resides in Chicago and still harbors a low opinion of the Chicago Police Department. Apart from that, though, everything has changed.

HILDY POWELL

Hildy never achieved respectability; in fact, he has been shifted from the police beat to the dreary task of writing a daily column; he has, in short, descended rather than risen in social eminence, poor fellow, but he seems to be having more fun. The old Hildy used to hang around headquarters and wait for something to happen. The new or radioized Hildy wanders around Chicago, bumping into adventure at every street light.

"I walk through the city and little things catch my eye," says Hildy, now played by Dick Powell. "That man with a brief case running for a streetcar. Does the brief case hold papers or does it hold a bomb?" I never thought of that when I was covering a police beat. I always assumed a man running for a streetcar with a brief case under his arm was late for work and trying frantically to get to the office before the boss arrived.

All Up to Hildy

HILDY, on the other hand, assumes automatically there is a bomb in that brief case and in a surprising number of cases he's right. (The stories I must have missed!) Hildy not only spots these bombs but feels responsible for de-activating them and hauling the culprit to justice.

Well, that, of course, follows the old tradition to a certain extent. Chicago police reporters in Hecht and MacArthur's day regarded the cops as unnecessary and rather ludicrous dependents on the public purse and felt that any police reporter who couldn't outwit a cop deserved to be sent back to the office to write editorials.

Still, even Hecht and MacArthur conceded the police a few primitive functions in the civic system but these, too, have vanished. Hildy pretty well takes care of all law enforcement in Chicago now.

Just Another Mystery

"THE FRONT PAGE," as you've probably begun to suspect, is just another tough mystery series with a reporter in the lead role in place of a private detective. As in the original, the minor characters are as wild a collection of freaks as you'll find anywhere—punchdrunk boxers, weird old harridans, shifty-eyed bartenders—none of them as authentic or as funny as those in the play but equally picturesque.

Unlike the play, the radio version reeks with neuroses. Hecht and MacArthur's characters were an eccentric bunch but, as I recall, reasonably well balanced emotionally.

On the radio, however, schizophrenia rages, breaking out like an epidemic in two or three characters simultaneously. Just as the multiple murder became fashionable some years back, the multiple schizophrenic is necessary today, for one thing to divert suspicion and for another to stay ahead of the competition. I look forward to the day when the whole cast from corpse to Inspector Wheelock suffers from some form of mental disease.

And Bloodshed

IN ADDITION to lunacy, the authors of "The Front Page"—in a spirit of gentle reminiscence, probably—permit themselves a certain amount of old-fashioned bloodshed, in case you're interested. That's about all I can say about "The Front Page," a transcribed series (WMAL-ABC 8 p. m., Thursdays). It wouldn't be worth all this discussion except that the play occupies a unique though raffish place in our letters and I'm sorry to see it fall to such low estate.

Incidentally, Dick Powell handles his preposterous lines with more competence than they deserve and, by virtue of some strenuous

Ives' Great Job Gets Its Due

By Paul Hume

COLUMBIA RECORDS recently performed a unique service to the cause of music in this country.

The company released an album of records of Charles Ives' second piano sonata, known, though one could hardly say "familiarly," as the "Concord" Sonata. This astounding piece is played on records by John Kirkpatrick, who gave the work its first public performance in 1939. At that time the sonata was almost 20 years old. Ives had the sonata published himself, and sent copies to pianists who might have been expected to be interested in such music from an American composer.

IVES

Nevertheless it remained for Kirkpatrick, who has been championing American piano music for two decades, to give the music its premiere. Since its first hearing, the sonata has remained an unheard curiosity to most, whether they be professional musicians or interested auditors.

Life Story Told

WITH THE ADVENT of the sonata on records we hope it will enter the realm of music known through frequent playings by devoted collectors of music on records. In the September issue of Harper's, Paul Moor, a talented New York pianist, who appeared in Washington's Phillips Gallery last year, tells the story of Ives' life. It is as fascinating as it is pertinent to today's discussion to note that Ives studied music at Yale University with, of all people, Horatio Parker, Dudley Buck, and Harry Rowe Shelley. These three gentlemen, known principally as composers of church music, are by now in almost unrelievedly bad odor as writers of imitative music unfit for church or secular exploration.

Ih could hardly be from his studies in composition under Parker that Ives learned the dissonant polytonality with which he anticipates Schonberg and Stravinsky. Neither of these had reached their later experiments when the Concord sonata was developing.

As one listens to the four movements of the sonata, visions of Concord, Mass. arise to supplement aural impressions. The movements are called Emerson, Hawthorne, the Alcotts, and Thoreau. Ives describes the work as "one person's impressions of the spirit of transcendentalism that is associated in the minds of many with Concord, Mass., of over half a century ago."

Concord 'Feeling'

IF YOU WALK about Concord as I did several weeks ago, you cannot miss the feeling that it is a rare spot even in a section of America full of great memories. A short drive from Concord takes you to Harvard, Mass., where Bronson Alcott's house and grounds, called "Fruitlands," still stand as reminders of that patriarch's sterner conception of transcendentalist philosophy.

All this and much more impinges upon the mind as Ives' music sounds on Columbia's new records. He is a composer who allows his music to be inspired by hymn tunes, band marches, vagrant rhythms. Conventional rules concerning harmony do not fence in the rich imagination which allows tones to mingle with a freedom that sounds new even today, though their author is in his seventy-fourth year.

Ives maintains that Emerson was a thinker whose provocative liberalism was and is no less great for our success or failure in recognizing it. One might say the same of Ives' music. In his sonata one can hear clearly his use principal theme of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. There, too, are murmurs of familiar hymn tunes, and in the Hawthorne scherzo, a street march setting the stage for the appearance of a circus. Mingled with these sounds is an unbridled use of dissonance occasionally calling to mind the preludes of Debussy. More often we realize to what an extent this man, educated entirely in this country, who spent his adult life in

How Could Mr. Lee Do That?

By Inez Robb

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (INS).—Broadway feels it mighty unfair of such astute showmen as the Shubert brothers, Mr. Lee and Mr. Jake, to open and close their latest mystery drama without letting the audience in on either the mystery or the drama.

LEE SHUBERT

The Gay White Way still hankers—itches is the better word—to know how and why Lee Shubert kept his 12-year marriage to Marcella Swanson Shubert a secret until the lady recently sued and obtained a Reno divorce.

But the theatrical world, on which Mr. Lee, 73, and Mr. Jake, 67, have a combined half nelson and scissors-grip, is as much in the dark today as it was when the news came out of Reno under jet propulsion.

Furthermore, the street knows that this mystery drama—the most provocative produced by the Shuberts in their long careers—isn't ever going to be explained.

In a thoroughfare that breakfasts on gossip, lunches on rumor and dines on hearsay, the Shubert brothers are a phenomenon. They don't talk to nobody, no time, no place—unless it is strictly business.

Throughout a career in which they have managed to pile up some 600 million dollars in a business that lives on gab, both men have managed to keep their lips buttoned up like a double-breasted coat in an ice storm.

Nobody Knows 'Em

WHEN Broadway sat down to think over the stunning 12-year marriage of Mr. Lee, "the perennial bachelor," it discovered that it didn't know a great deal about the personal lives, habits or customs of either Mr. Lee or Mr. Jake.

Not even their closest business associate knew that Mr. Lee had married blonde Marcella Swanson 12 years ago in Berlin. And despite denials to the contrary, many are inclined to believe that even J. J.—the redoubtable Jake—didn't know anything about it either until recently.

But the oddest thing about this mystery drama—the thing that confounds all the curbstone critics—is not how Mr. Lee or Mr. Jake managed to keep the marriage secret.

They would like to know by what magic Mr. Lee kept his bride from spilling the beans during the 12 years she was his lawful wedded wife. That would be worth money on the market.

Not only was Mrs. Shubert uncommunicative for the 12 years the marriage lasted, but her lips are just as irrevocably sealed now. She ain't talkin', and that's that. She isn't even verifying the report that she received a settlement of two million dollars, which is big money at any box office.

No Sensayuma

THERE is no arguing the fact that the Shuberts dominate and govern Broadway, through ownership of half the city's theaters. But they are aloof from it. They are in it, but not of it.

Responsible persons in the theatrical world doubt if Mr. Jake has a single intimate on Broadway.

Mr. Jake, a short, rolypoly man, is taciturn and, like Mr. Lee, notably short of anything resembling a sense of humor. Better a man should have a hole in the head than try to kid Mr. Jake!

It is said that Mr. Jake hates the ocean with an abiding passion. Yet he commutes to and from Europe in search of musical comedy material and stars. Broadway knows him as the musical comedy genius of the Shubert clan.

Although the Shubert theatrical empire is the biggest in America, theatrical people doubt if a first-night audience would recognize Mr. Jake. If he goes to first nights, he sticks back stage or takes a peek from out front only from time to time.

He has no time or taste to be part of the elegant, perfumed and yapping first night audience so much a part of the New York theatrical scene.

Once—long ago—Mr. Jake was married. But he has been divorced for so many years that people think of him as a perennial bachelor, too, until they remember his son and the Shubert heir, Johnny.

Mr. Jake lives in a large and elaborate apartment in the Sardi Building, over the famous restaurant of that name which has long been a favorite meeting place of theatrical people.

And Mr. Lee

MR. LEE is as thin, dapper and punctilious as Mr. Jake is round and gruff. He is more social than Mr. Jake, in that he does go occasionally to first nights and dines from time to time in a fashionable restaurant. But he seldom attends a private party, although both he and Mr. Jake must be snowed under with invitations annually.

There is a report that Mr. Lee has a valet. Certainly, he is always immaculate and magnificently groomed. But there is about his dress something just a little outmoded. Maybe it is his high, stiff collars that give him the air of a yesterday dandy—or maybe the shoes with the high gloss and slightly pointed toes.

Talloo Gives 'Benefits' the Deep Freeze

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP).—Two show managements had brisk brush-offs to announce this week for the "benefit" performance practice, but it was Tallulah Bankhead, speaking for one of them, who said it more impudently and most interestingly.

"Benefit" performances are considered the bane of an actor's existence, usually, for they supposedly attract the most frigid audiences along Broadway. The way it works, a charity organization buys out an entire house for a certain night, and resells the tickets at sometimes startling markups, the extra money benefitting whatever charity is concerned.

Actors insist the big prices paid for tickets make audiences practically defy the players to entertain them. When $25 or more is paid for a seat, it is difficult for a ticket purchaser to feel he is getting his money's worth in entertainment, even though the larger portion of the price goes to charity—that's the actors' majority attitude. Still, prospects of selling out entire performances engage the fiscal enthusiasm of some producers who don't care too much what the actors think or feel.

This interesting intangible came to a head this week when John C. Wilson, producer of Tallulah's "Private Lives," due here shortly, and Joseph M. Hyman and Bernard Hart, who are shepherding Moss Hart's new play to town, almost coincidently announced their unbending opposition to the practice.

"With Producer John C. Wilson concurring," said the wire Tallulah sent to this department, "I hasten to inform you that there will be no benefit performances during my stay in 'Private Lives' at the Plymouth. I applaud the charities which inspire these performances but the audiences which attend them are colder than the polar ice. You couldn't thaw them out with a flame thrower or an acetylene torch. I'll have no truck with them. Regards, Tallulah Bankhead."

The Moss Hart comedy which is passing up this controversial practice is "Light Up the Sky." Hyman and Hart say they made the ruling in their case "in the interest of public service," adding that every seat for every performance will be available for mail order sale. "Private Lives" premieres October 4; "Light Up the Sky," November 4.

5 Paris Plays Head for N. Y., But No Farces

By Jean White

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Broadway producers, directors, authors and actors are huddled in their seasonal sessions and out of them comes the report that at least five French plays are due for fall production on Broadway, four serious dramas, two of them by Jean-Paul Sartre, "Morts Sans Sepultures" (literally Dead Without Burial, changed to "The Victors") and "Les Mains Sales" (literally Dirty Hands, retitled "Red Gloves"); Jean-Pierre Aumont's "The Emperor of China," and Jean Giraudoux's "In Praise of Folly," and one lighter play, Marcel Achard's "Aupres de ma Blonde" (literally Close to My Blonde, changed to "Speak to Me of Love").

Not one of these is a bedroom farce, and that is true of the three top-notch plays of last season's Paris crop, which include, besides Sartre's "Les Mains Sales," one by Jean Anouilh and a play by Emmanuel Robles.

At the beginning of the '47 season Jean Anouilh, best known in America for his excellent version of "Antigone," which Katherine Cornell brought to Broadway in 1946 in Paul Bowles' adaptation, delighting his public with a scintillating, charming comedy, "Invitation to the Chateau," which was the biggest hit of the season and which will be revived in the fall.

Comedy of Intrigue

THIS COMEDY of twisted and thwarted intrigue, is a lively change from the conventional triangle and more than just a radical break from his sociological-psychological fare of the last few years. It is almost as if the Giraudoux of crystal-encrusted characters and the Beaumarchais of Figaro-here, Figaro-there fleetness had happily collaborated in Anouilh's breathless dash of madness in a situation both logical and provocative, even if not entirely plausible.

SARTRE

The plot revolves around a pair of wealthy twin brothers, the one hard, mean, a lady's man and always sure of himself, the other shy, sensitive and loved by no one, both played by the same actor. The first invites a lovely ballet dancer to their chateau to complicate the existence of his twin, already engaged to a social-climbing heiress, who in turn is madly in love with the scheming brother. This racy flight into fantasy which Anouilh has built by a series of sparkling vaudeville-like sketches, music-hall style, makes a thoroughly entertaining evening.

Controversial Sartre Play

THE MOST talked-of play of the year was Sartre's "Les Mains Sales," whose box office was as hard to reach as a smash Broadway musical. This melodrama, with its controversial theme, touches the French where they are most sensitive, their politics and their individual freedom. Sartre's horrified protest against fanaticism is a powerful dramatic work, the best he has done to date. But—are his basic premises accurately stated? Are the situations plausible? Is the theater the right place for airing quarrels on doctrines?

These are some of the questions the Paris press is debating. However, the American public will soon be able to decide for itself. Jean Dalrymple and Gabriel Pascal scooped production rights and Broadway will see it in the fall as "Red Gloves."

Paris' surprise success came at the end of the season with Emmanuel Robles's first play, "Montserrat." Originally backed by a new project of the experiment-conscious French Ministry of Education to "help first plays," it won such favorable comment from press and public that commercial interests will produce it again this fall.

America has not yet seen a good play on the Resistance movement, and so Montserrat is a welcome addition, which Hollywood along with Broadway may well eye with real interest. It will startle those who take liberty for granted.

Recommended today on The Washington Post's radio stations, WINX and WINX-FM, Sunday, September 19.

9:05 A.M. Uncle Jay reads The Washington Post comics.

4:30 P.M. Paul Weston and his orchestra, featuring Jo Stafford and the Pied Pipers.

7:30 P.M. Forum Discussion on absentee voting in the November elections. Leonard Melrod, moderator.

The late Grace Moore is shown here in an attitude typical of her and of her characterization in "One Night of Love," popular film of yesterday which is returning this week to the Metropolitan Theater

Gadsby's Tavern Opens 2-Week Run Tomorrow

THE Alexandria Little Theater's third annual colonial production at historic Gadsby's Tavern will open a two-week run tomorrow night.

"The Clandestine Marriage," is this year's play choice, the comedy by George Colman and David Garrick, the celebrated actor of eighteenth century England.

Dr. George Winchester Stone, of George Washington University, has been acting as consultant during rehearsals, drawing from his knowledge of colonial speech customs, which, he states, were similar to those of our time.

The group's yearly performances at Gadsby's are done in old-style elegance. One is met at the door by link boys, registered by the inn-keeper, escorted to one's seat by hostesses and the play does not begin until George and Martha Washington have arrived in their seats.

Orville French, Dick Glaeser, Joland Oberly, Elizabeth Mitchell, Lula Taylor, Robert Rainsbury, Hugh Palmerston, Robert Hogan, Doris Stuart, Mildred Ryan and George Lytle form this season's company.

Because the ballroom seats only 100, those who are not members of the group must make arrangements for attending with Mrs. William F. Todd, 705 Beverly Drive, Alexandria, or at Overlook 6268.

Theater Time Table

Warner—"Rope." Alfred Hitchcock directs a story about two young men who kill a friend and hide his body in their living room, at 1:15, 3:25, 5:30, 7:40 and 9:50 p. m.

Palace—"Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein," which should explain everything, at 1:25, 3:30, 5:35, 7:40 and 9:45 p. m.

Capitol—"So Evil My Love," Ray Milland and Ann Todd in a discreet murder yarn about a good woman's fall from grace, at 1:35, 4:20, 7:10 and 10 p. m. Stage shows at 3:40, 6:30 and 9:20 p. m.

RKO-Keith's—"Good Sam," Gary Cooper and Ann Sheridan in a Leo McCarey comedy about a too-generous man, at 1:10, 3:20, 5:30, 7:40 and 9:50 p. m.

Metropolitan—"Four Faces West," Joel McCrea and Frances Dee in a Western, at 1:15, 3:15, 5:25, 7:30 and 9:40 p. m.

Columbia—"A Foreign Affair," Marlene Dietrich, John Lund and Jean Arthur in a comedy about a soldier and a Congresswoman in Berlin, at 2:05, 4:35, 7:05 and 9:35 p. m.

Playhouse—"Escape," the John Galsworthy play screened by Rex Harrison and Peggy Cummins, at 1, 2:25, 4:20, 6:10, 8:05 and 9:55 p. m.

Little—"Beauty and the Beast." France's Jean Cocteau delightfully reworks that charming fairy tale, at 1:25, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p. m.

Hippodrome—"The Mikado," revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan triumph with D'Oyly Carte Company, at 2, 3:50, 5:50, 7:50 and 9:50 p. m.

Dupont—"The Good Earth," revival of the Pearl Buck story with Paul Muni and Louise Rainer, at 2:30, 4:30, 7:10 and 9:30 p. m.

Fix—"Will It Happen Again?" at 2:35, 5:10, 7:45 and 10:25 p. m. "Lydia," 1, 3:40, 6:10 and 8:50 p. m.

Trans-Lux—Short subjects and news reels continuous from 10:15 a. m. to 12 midnight.

Ambassador—"Rope," at 1:15, 3:20, 5:25, 7:30 and 9:40 p. m.

Airport Drive-In—"Rage in Heaven," at 8 and 10 p. m.

Open Air—"Where There's Life," at 7:35 and 10:10 p. m. "I Cover the Big Town," at 9:10 p. m.

Coming Up

Warner—"Walk a Crooked Mile," the FBI and Scotland Yard link in a story about atomic spies, with Louis Hayward and Dennis O'Keefe; opens Thursday.

Capitol—"An Innocent Affair," Madeleine Carroll, long absent from the screen, returns in a frothy comedy, costarred with Fred MacMurray and Charles (Buddy) Rogers; opens Thursday.

Palace—"Forever Amber," you know about her; Linda Darnell and George Sanders return for a "popular-priced" visit; opens Thursday.

Keith's—"Rachel and the Stranger," Robert Mitchum, as a wanderer, comes upon Loretta Young and William Holden in frontier days; opens Wednesday.

Metropolitan—"One Night of Love," the Grace Moore triumph, first of the musical film smashes, comes back as a reissue; opens Thursday.

Playhouse—"Miss Own Executioner," a novel mystery yarn, filmed in England by Burgess Meredith; follows "Escape."

Little—"The Eternal Return," a French twist on the Tristan legend, starring Jean Marais; follows "Beauty and the Beast."

Hippodrome—"Angel," with that most stimulating of the current French characters, Viviennie Romance; follows "The Mikado."

Dupont—"The King's Jester," the story of "Rigoletto," with Tagliavini singing some of the Verdi music in an Italian-made film; follows "The Good Earth."

Stamps Are Now on Sale At Embassies, Legations

By William M. Stuart

COLLECTORS may now buy new stamp issues at embassies and legations of several countries. A number of embassies are advertising new stamps at about the same price dealers are asking.

For some years the Philatelic Agency at the Pan American Union has had for sale stamps of a number of Latin American countries and built up a large clientele. However, all countries of that union are not included in the agency because competition with dealers is not considered wise. However, the quantity of stamps sold at the Pan American Union demonstrates the fact that collectors welcome the opportunity of purchasing stamps through an agency handling a new issue service.

It may be that several nations now issuing large numbers of stamps are cognizant of the tremendous business involved in an agency and would like to follow pattern. With embassies and legations establishing agencies where collectors may obtain stamps at market prices, the question of how far these foreign nations may go is an important one. The collector is not much concerned as to where he buys his material; of chief importance is the price he must pay.

M. M. WIGGINS, 6817 Georgia ave. nw., member of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., has received a supply of the latest Stanley Gibbons, priced postage stamp catalogue of King George VI issues. This new catalogue is dated 1949 and is the first edition of the King George catalogue. Besides a complete listing of all the King George stamps with prices there are several pages of philatelic information that all stamp collectors should be familiar with. Many items of old stories are retold in a most fascinating manner. The catalogues have just arrived from London.

There will be an exhibition of United States and foreign stamps and covers at the Government Printing Office, in Harding Hall, from October 15 to October 22. There will be 20 frames, three classes and three prizes in each class.

The Pentagon Philatelic Society will hold its annual banquet on Thursday evening, October 21, in the general and flag officers dining room, Pentagon. The guest speaker will be Max G. Johl, writer and an authority on United States stamps.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening, Ellery Denison presiding. At all of the club meetings there is always something going on. Whether auction or bourse the members find activity that each member enjoys. The club committees are busy with the fall and winter programs and the prize promises to be a most active one. At the meeting on Tuesday the usual auction sale will be held. This meeting will be in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw. All collectors are invited to be present.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet tomorrow at the Recreation Room, 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne., when officers for the ensuing year will be nominated, the election to be held at the regular meeting on October 4.

C.U. Play to Be Done in N. Y. This Winter

CUFF STUFF: The Hartmans, Paul and Grace, stars of "Angel in the Wings," presently in Chicago, are so sure of a long run in the Windy City that they've bought a house in suburban Evanston . . . "Mister Roberts" indeed is a million-dollar production . . . Leland Hayward took an understandable producer's pride in announcing the show had grossed its first million dollars in a shorter period than any nonmusical theatrical in the history of the American stage, or in 233 performances, to get statistical.

With the end not yet in sight, "Born Yesterday" passed its 1100th performance to become the twelfth production in recorded show history to hit that enviable milestone . . . and Judy Holliday is back in the featured feminine role after a month at the beach.

An unpublished play by Henry James, "Guy Domville," has been acquired by Warren Munsell for Broadway production . . . only five galley proofs existed, complete with James' own revision suggestions . . . Munsell scratching his noggin to think of the correct playwright to work on the re-editing . . . James Russo and Michael Ellis, who are presenting "The Play's the Thing," will produce "Jenny Kissed Me," by Jean Kerr. (Which was originally produced last winter in Washington by Catholic University.—Ed.). Leo G. Carroll will be starred and John O'Shaugnessy (Command Decision) will direct.

A touch of stage cuteness has been banished from Marc Connelly's "A Story For Strangers," since Irving, the talking horse in the original Connelly fancies, won't talk at all when first night comes around . . . he'll simply whinny. Forrest C. Haring, general manager of the Marc Connelly comedy, has been appointed lecturer in dramatic arts at Columbia University . . . He'll tell all from the financial side of the theater.

Eddie Peabody, the banjo man, beats the instrument four times a day (five on Sunday) on the stage of the Capitol Theater

Everything's A Secret to The Shuberts

ROBB. from Page 1

The Shubert brothers have no more in common with the standard type of rich Broadway playboy than they have with Prof. Einstein (except that they, too, deal in astronomical figures.) Broadway is their business, their vocation—not their avocation.

When the story of Mr. Lee's secret marriage finally broke in the New York papers, it is said that only one fact dismayed him.

Mr. Lee is still upset because it was reported that the Shubert theatrical empire is now worth 600 million dollars.

That, in the eyes of a Shubert, is nobody's business but another Shubert's!

Monte Blue Named

Monte Blue has been named by Warner Bros. for a role in "The Fountain Head," the studio's adaptation of the best seller by Ayn Rand. Gary Cooper, Patricia Neal, Raymond Massey and Robert Douglas have lead roles in the romantic drama. King Vidor is directing and Henry Blanke is producing "The Fountainhead" for Warner Bros.

The Record Player

Ives Sonata Well Done

IVES: Piano Sonata No. 2, the "Concord". John Kirkpatrick, pianist. Columbia 749. $7.25.

A detailed discussion of Charles Ives appears in another column today. Here we content ourselves with speaking of the technical nature of the recording. Kirkpatrick's first album is a noble example of his unusual talent, and a symbol of his superb American repertoire.

KIRKPATRICK

His playing of this tremendous score is so informed as to make its technical difficulties seem simple. He shapes the music in phrases, creating dynamic contrasts and color effects to match the moods of the music. The engineers have done well in capturing the sound of the piano. While the bass seems a bit subdued, the resulting clarity is of enormous value in hearing the work as a whole.

The surfaces are quiet, and the album is, at present writing, my vote for the most important single set of the year. Anything between now and the end of December which equals or surpasses this will have to go some.

JOHN McCORMACK album. John McCormack, tenor, with Edwin Schneider, pianist, and orchestra. Victor 1228. $7.

Handel: Come, My Beloved.
Mozart: Ridente la calma. (K. 152.)
Lotti: Pur dicesti.
Brahms: Feldeinsamkeit.
MacMurrough: Macushla.
Marshall: I Hear You Calling Me.
Wallace: There Is a Flower (Maritana).
Matton: Goodbye, Sweetheart.
Delibes: Lakme: Vieni al contento profondo.
Bolto: Dai campi, dai prati.
Puccini: O soave fanciulla (Boheme), with Bori.
Bizet: Del tempo al limitar (Pearl Fishers), with Sammarco.

By now my opinion of John McCormack is no secret. You can imagine then with what joy I greeted this album. The Pearl Fishers and Boheme duets were issued earlier as part of Victor's heritage series. The Lakme aria has long been a treasure of my collection, and I am glad to have a new copy of it. Surfaces on these old records are very good and the voice emerges with clarity.

For phrasing, technique, and superb control, listen to the Handel, Mozart, and Lotti. The last song is often sung by students in public recitals. McCormack sings it as I had not even imagined it could sound. His voicing of Faust's aria is a model of Italian opera long vanished from our stages. And his handling of the ballads is perfection in still another field. No tenor today can approach his treatment of Marshall's syrupy song, but syrup and all, I'll take it any time it comes out this way.

The Brahms will come a surprise to any who are not aware that McCormack was a Lieder singer to match the greatest Germans of our time. The tempo seems a trifle hurried for this particular song but the style and German diction is flawless. This album ought to be in the frequently played section of every singer's record library. It will certainly occupy a prominent spot with all who like the finest in vocal records.

PAUL HUME.

Fine Sonata Is Put on Wax

the insurance business, spoke in a language not commonly employed until 20 years after he first used it.

Wrote 200 Songs

IVES' INDEPENDENCE of music affairs is a New England trait. Of his more than 200 songs he and his wife, nee Harmony Twichell, wrote the words for many. Other texts came from Shelley, Keats, Sophocles, or from lectures of professors at Yale.

In footnotes to some of the songs, Ives shows an easy inclination to allow performers to adjust technical difficulties to their own abilities. Thus at the close of "The Swimmers" Ives says, "It is difficult for one hand to play the left hand figure as written as fast as it should go, but it may be varied as suggested below."

Whimsy comes in the following comment which is printed at the end of "Harpalus." (Harpalus was a legendary character who lost his life for love of a tiger.) "We are all sorry for Harpalus—notwithstanding the music."

One would almost think that Ives had read The Washington Post editorial of last Sunday entitled "Cheating the Voters" in this commentary appended by the composer at the close of his song, "An Election." Ives says, "Unfortunately election returns coming through the present party system prove but little conclusively. The voice of the people sounding through the mouth of the parties, becomes somewhat emasculated. It is not inconceivable that practical ways may be found for more accurately registering and expressing the thought of the people—at least, in relation to the larger primary problems, which concern us all."

'Exceptionally Great'

CHARLES IVES' Concord Sonata was described by Lawrence Gilman of the New York Herald Tribune, as "exceptionally great music, the greatest music composed by an American." Gilman was noted for his conservatism and his shying away from superlatives. In 1947 Ives was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for music. The award was given for the third symphony.

Ives' total output includes four symphonies, numerous chamber works for various combinations, the songs already mentioned, music for chorus, organ, brass band, numerous solo instruments, quartertone experiments, and a variety of theater music.

His name is spoken with reverence by all informed musicians. His music is performed by few. Thus Columbia records deserves not only great praise for making the Concord Sonata available on records, but that public support in the form of wide-spread sale of the album which will encourage them to continue their policy.

U. N. WORKSHOP FOR WORLD EDUCATION—General Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, plays host to members of United Nations Seminar as they visit the campus. Dr. Merze Tate, professor of history at Howard University, shakes hands with Eisenhower. The seminar, held for six weeks on the campus of Adelphi College, Long Island, was attended by 53 key educational experts from 27 countries. These leaders worked together seeking methods whereby every schoolboy and girl in the world could receive instructions on the United Nations

Pupils Move Classroom To Chartered Planes

Pomona, Calif. (U.P.).—Seventh graders at Emerson Junior High School got some extra schooling in an airplane.

Mrs. Arline Steiner's 50-pupil geography class chartered two commercial planes for a round-trip flight to San Diego to see "what Southern California really looks like."

The youngsters washed dishes, mowed lawns, sat babies and held a rummage sale to finance the trip. They will use the information they learned on the flight in classroom work.

King-Smith Opening

King-Smith School of Creative Arts opens a new term on September 27. Incorporated in the curriculum of the school for the fall semester is a new workshop in general semantics, described as a training which "enables man to throw off the habits of primitive, prefabricated evaluations." The school is at 2118 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Engineering Students Build Their Own Lab

Valparaiso, Ind. (U.P.).—The students of Valparaiso University made themselves a present of a new engineering laboratory.

When building costs went up and alumni donations went down, the students decided to build their own laboratory. They got the building trades union to permit nonunion student labor and business organizations to contribute building materials.

When the free steel beams, lumber, window frames and glass came, the student body erected a modern building according to plans and blueprints they had drawn.

Dunbarton Ready

Dunbarton College of Holy Cross opens a new term on September 13. During the summer the library was remodeled and its book capacity doubled.

Mozart Festival Slated 5 Sundays in October

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART, one of music's most astonishing miracles, will be honored in the National Gallery of Art concerts throughout the month of October.

For the first five Sundays of that month, plus the final Sunday of September, Richard Bales, director of music at the National Gallery, will present concerts of works by the Salzburg immortal. The programs include two unfamiliar symphonies, Nos. 20 and 24, an almost unknown piano concerto, four of the final dozen symphonies, chamber works, songs, and operatic excerpts.

Washington soloists to be heard during the series include Margaret Barnwell and Therese Nye, sopranos; John Yard and Joseph Collins, baritones; Sylvia Meyer, harpist; Britton Johnson, flutist; Peter Schaeffer, Lonny Epstein and Margaret Tolson, pianists. The Tomasow Quartet will play the chamber music, with the D minor and C major quartets, plus the duo for viola and violin.

This is a notable series and deserves all the support and praise which the regular Sunday audiences in the gallery will bring it.

THE Columbia Opera Company will hold auditions for membership this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., in their headquarters, 819 13th st. nw. Grand and light opera units are being organized as part of the opera, drama and ballet association's program for the coming year.

The Washington Civic Orchestra, sponsored by the District of Columbia Recreation Department, conducted by Hendrik Essers, opens rehearsals Tuesday evening at Central High School. Three concerts are to be given in Roosevelt Auditorium. The fall concert, November 30, will present Charlotte Bloecher, soprano, as a soloist. The orchestra is particularly interested in viola, cello and bass players.

There are those who will be interested in the announcement that Maria Jeritza, noted dramatic soprano of European and American opera houses, will sing the roles of Tosca and Santuzza this fall in Vienna. It was in that city that Jeritza rose to a position of eminence and popular favor attained by few singers.

PROGRAMS TODAY: Emma Louise Harford and Robert Twynham, organists, 5 p. m., All Souls' Unitarian Church.

Bach: Toccata and Fugue in D minor; two choral preludes; Boellman: Prayer; Karg-Elert: Now Thank We All Our God. Clokey: Wind in the Pine Trees; Pipes of Pan. Mendelssohn: Finale, Sonata I; Purvis: Communion. Twynham: Improvisation. Dupre: Cortege and Litany.

Margaret Tolson, pianist: 8 p. m., National Gallery of Art.

Haydn: Sonata in E minor. Beethoven: 32 Variations in C minor. Ravel: Menuet; Oiseux tristes; Alborado del gracioso. Green: Festival Fugues. Finney: Sonata No. 4 (Christmastime, 1945). Harris: American ballads—Streets of Laredo, The Bird, Cod Liver Ile. (Washington public premieres for Green and Harris.)

Concert List Of Symphony Is Released

ON THE Wednesday evening series of the National Symphony Orchestra this season subscribers will hear the following artists and music:

Fritz Kreisler—Mendelssohn's violin concerto; Rudolf Firkusny, Martinu's second piano concerto; Nell Tangeman and Harold Haugh, Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde; Erica Morini, Wieniawski's D minor violin concerto.

Sylvia Meyer—Joseph Wagner's harp concertino; Artur Rubinstein, the Schumann piano concerto and Falla's Nights in the Gardens of Spain. Blanche Thebom will also appear in this series but her selections have not yet been made public.

American music comes off a poor stepchild in this list. Only Sylvia Meyer, the orchestra's musicianly harpist, recognizes the artist's responsibility to play something from this side of the ocean. We welcome the Martinu score dating from 1935, and Rubinstein's decision to play the Falla tone poem. The latter work was first played by the orchestra three years ago with Frances Nash as soloist. It has long been a Rubinstein specialty.

Shortage of Teachers Perils Lower Grades

By Bruce Biossat

HIGH SCHOOL teachers will soon be plentiful again. But if your youngster is in grammar school or headed there, he can count himself lucky if he draws well-trained teachers the next few years.

That's the word from the National Commission on Teacher Education after a study made for it by Ray C. Maul, dean of Kansas State Teachers College.

Maul makes clear that he believes there are some shocking blank spots in our knowledge of the teacher situation, but says he feels safe in predicting an early end to the teacher shortage at the high school level.

Colleges which reported for his survey said 34,071 graduates will qualify for high school certificates this year. The 1941 total was 32,399.

In fact, says Maul, before long there will almost certainly be an over-supply of high school instructors in some fields. The new graduates have tended to concentrate a bit too heavily in some school subjects—physical education, mathematics and the industrial arts.

Lower Salaries?

THE IDEA that there may be more than enough teachers, for some high school subjects anyway, may give many parents a feeling of assurance. But over-supply means keener competition for jobs. And that may result in lower salaries.

Lately teachers' salaries have been better. But right now most of the States can't say much about hopes for higher salaries or maintenance of present levels. Nor have they much certainty about prospects for generally more stable working conditions.

These problems appear small, however, when set beside those in the grammar schools. The Maul report confirms what education authorities have been saying:

With a bumper crop of war-born children about to swarm into the Nation's elementary schools, the supply of well-trained teachers in the lower grades is not even keeping pace with the 1941 totals.

In 1941 the colleges turned out 27,459 students for grammar school teaching. This year the number is 19,964, or 27.3 per cent less.

To make up the lack, the States have in recent years resorted to issuing thousands of emergency certificates. In many States such certificates are available to applicants with little or no teacher training. In more than half the States no stepping up of requirements for the emergency certificate is planned for this fall.

And, although a four-year college degree is accepted everywhere as desirable for teaching at any level, little progress is being made toward that goal in grammar schools.

Six Proposals

MAUL declares that the elementary school situation is clouded further by the fact that salary schedules often bear little relation to teachers' qualifications.

Maul proposes that:

1. States dig well into census figures for accurate estimates of teacher needs.
2. Colleges revise student guidance programs so prospective teachers get a sound notion about opportunities.
3. College placement bureaus keep full records of trained teachers who actually take school jobs. No one knows the whole story today.
4. Salary and working conditions be stabilized to reduce the annual turnover of teachers—33 per cent in one State.
5. Standards of teaching certificates be raised.
6. Quality of college training be improved. Some 1200 colleges now offer teacher courses, but some authorities claim no more than 300 are genuinely professional.

"How to Stop Worrying and Start LIVING."

You are invited to attend, without obligation, an Open Meeting of the Dale Carnegie Course in Effective Speaking, Personality Development, Human Relations and Leadership Training in the Congressional Room of Hotel Statler, Friday, September 24, at 8:00 P.M.

PERCY H. WHITING
Managing Director of the Dale Carnegie Institute will explain the Carnegie system of training. Then you will hear men and women who have completed the course tell how they have profited from the training. Then you will see a demonstration by Mr. Whiting of the way to which frightened students are helped to make their first platform talks.

The Opportunity of a Lifetime
Never again in your lifetime will you have better opportunities to get ahead. For never before has America needed leaders as it needs them now. To take advantage of these enormous opportunities, you should develop courage and self-confidence and the ability to speak effectively and to win friends and influence people. During the past 36 years the Dale Carnegie Instituite has been used to train executives of the New York Telephone Co., Westinghouse, Brooklyn Union Gas Co., Sun Oil, Junior League of New York, Cornell Club and many other organizations.

Russians Use The School As a Weapon

By Fred M. Hechinger

BERLIN (Via Airmail).—German educators under Soviet rule are experiencing the strange repetition of events for which many of their colleagues have been dismissed during the past three years. There is no longer any room for doubt that the methods of Communist conquest are fundamentally the same as those of Nazi tyranny. Basic, too, in that similarity is the fact that the school is used as the spearhead for total submission.

This is the pattern and the time-table for the intellectual conquest: In the beginning the Russians went out of their way to secure the cooperation of well-known respected German educators and scholars. They promised them a free hand without political interference. They gave them all the facilities (which, incidentally, the Americans were slow to offer), such as teaching aids, books and magazines.

The New School is a magazine of which any teacher might be proud. The cover is attractive, the paper superior, the layout pleasing. The subtitle, Periodical for Democratic Reorientation in Teaching and Education, sounds acceptable enough. But like early Nazi publications it hides a wealth of pure propaganda behind the respectable facade.

A House Cleaning

WHEN the schools were reopened in the Soviet zone, the required house cleaning (as agreed upon in Potsdam) took place. Anti-Nazis took over the direction. Rapidly the schools started to do business again.

But within a number of months interference began. Many of the new principals, while clear of the Nazi stigma, were actively opposed to communism. A majority of those in the Berlin sector were trade unionists and Social Democrats.

Typical is the example of one educator. Shortly after he had reorganized his school, the occupation authorities began to interfere. Equipment was requisitioned. Classrooms had to be closed. Finally the roofing was ordered removed to permit repair of a Communist Party headquarters. Shortly thereafter two forbidden books were found in a classroom by Russian inspectors, and the principal was forced to resign.

Many of those who had been dismissed were asked to appear for personal interviews shortly thereafter. They were told that they would be reinstated, often in improved positions, if they would comply with the party-political demands. Some signed up; others, remembering the results of a similar procedure under the Nazis, remained firm and tried to leave the zone.

Former Nazis were frequently given the same opportunity. They were at first threatened with maximum punishment for their past affiliation and then bribed with tempting inducements. Most of them, hardly giants of character and convictions, needed little temptation. But those who recall that Hitler swelled the ranks of his storm troopers with countless turn-coat Communists, shudder at the thought of this new parallel.

New Chief Arrives

SOON an almost forgotten German teacher appeared on the scene. Paul Wandel became chief of "popular" education (Volksausbildung) and colleagues were surprised over his return after many years in Moscow. With him arrived a number of other "teachers," unknown to educators here, who claimed to have lived under assumed names as members of the anti-Nazi underground.

Gradually little catch-phrases and slogans found their way into books and classroom procedure. Slowly—perhaps unwittingly—German teachers began to repeat those phrases.

Next a so-called trade union of teachers of the Soviet zone was formed. Anti-Communist educators point out with bitterness that even its administrative structure is exactly like that of the N.S.L.B., the National Socialist Teachers' Association of Hitler days.

To make the setup more airtight, a renegade trade unionist was first elevated to official government position as a Ministerialrat and then given a leading place in the teachers' organization. Under Dr. Maria Torhorst 10,000 new teachers were hurriedly trained in an eight-month period. Shortly thereafter, Mrs. (Dr.) Torhorst was elevated to the position of minister of education in Thuringia, where she faithfully executed SED policy.

Ironically the Russians were eager to introduce the American-type citizenship course which had traditionally been absent in German schools. But while the United States attitude to such essential teaching is concerned with political understanding and responsible action, the Russian interpretation runs along lines of political indoctrination which German schools have known so well under the Nazi rule.

Other Reminders

THERE are other reminders that the Communist present may not be substantially different from the Nazi past. Recently teachers in the Soviet zone have been advised that every discussion may lead into beneficial or harmful channels, but that the harmful effect is dominant. Therefore, the teachers were informed by oral directive, discussion must be "carefully guided" and, in many instances, a "paternally authoritative or captivating speech" may be preferable to classroom debate. It will not be difficult to convince Fascist-trained teachers to adopt that method.

A recent copy of The New School calls on German teachers to join the so-called "Volkskingress"—the People's Congress. Skilfully the text refers to the German revolution of 1848 and speaks of the "battle for democratic reconstruction and the unity of Germany." It calls on the entire German nation—regardless of prohibitive measures and oppression" and agitates for a demand for a "just peace." The name of Heinrich Pestalozzi, revered by most progressive German teachers, is linked with the exponents of the current attempt to Sovietize the German school.

Without scruples this Soviet-licensed "German" publication screams against the "dismemberment of Germany" and appeals to the most dangerous of all emotions: German nationalism. Without scruples, too, the same forces parade communism as the protector of the small neighbors of Germany against a resurgent Reich.

Scholarships Go Begging

BELIEVE it or not, there are scholarships that go begging. Colleges sometimes can't give them away. For two years Yale has used newspaper advertising trying to find applicants for the Leavenworth scholarship, worth $420 annually, and open to men with the surname Leavenworth.

Others bearing the name De Forest are also strangely hard to find and Yale has advertised for applicants for the De Forest scholarship.

Since 1916 several youngsters bearing the name of Murphy have been able to get scholarships at Harvard.

The University of Chicago has scholarships for women of Greek, Swedish and Polish descent. Bryn Mawr has a four-year scholarship for a Chinese girl.

Northwestern University has eight scholarships for sons and daughters of the AFL Chicago Flat Janitors Union.

The Terminal System of New York taxicabs started this year to offer two college scholarships to children of taxi drivers.

And What They Teach

AND the things some of these colleges teach!

For example, Hastings College in Nebraska teaches mortuary science; North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering has established a chair in plumbing and heating; Carnegie Tech teaches printing engineering and Oregon State logging engineering.

Last year Boston University established a school of public relations, a course also taught at McMurry College in Texas. Cosmetology (beauty culture to you) is taught at St. Paul's Polytechnic Institute, a Negro college in Virginia.

About a dozen colleges require all students, rich or poor, to devote a portion of their time to work programs. At the New York State Maritime Academy on Throggs Neck, students actually make money. Here the students receive $2800 for their work and are required to pay $1390 and thus have a net gain of $1410.

Among the 1031 degree-granting institutions included in a new guide, New York leads all States with 83, Pennsylvania is second with 74, Ohio third with 48, Illinois fourth with 47, California fifth with 45, Texas sixth with 44 and Massachusetts seventh with 41.

'Front Page' Has New Style

underplaying, makes some of the incredible proceedings sound almost sensible.

NOTE: It appears to be impossible to produce a documentary any more without including a few quotes from Dr. Kinsey's manual on you-know. Some instinct tells me the celebrated doctor has already become the indispensable, almost sacrosanct authority that Dr. Freud once was. Literature, I suspect, will teem with Kinsetic observation to the point where sex ultimately is going to be as dull as somebody else's psychoanalysis.

OBSERVATION: Edna Ferber once ascribed the success of her novels to the fact that they dealt in the elemental facts of life—birth, marriage, sickness, death. Radio Playhouse (CBS, 10 p. m. Thursdays) is sponsored by the Hallmark Greeting Card Co., which deals in the same commodities and apparently feels warmly toward authors who, like Miss Ferber, dwell lovingly on those occasions where a card is in order.

WHILE WE'RE AT IT, I'd like to turn briefly to "New Faces," a program which has caused me some pleasure and almost unbearable pain at various times this summer. "New Faces" was cast in a revue form possibly more closely than any radio program in recent years. This was a happy innovation but it was disfigured by comedy sketch which for lack of a better word I shall have to call swish. The men in these sketches seemed addicted to such unlikely utterances as "Hello DAH-ling" and "Mercy, no!" There was one skit about a women President of the United States and another about a couple of Amazons trying to get dates in a strange town that plumbed depths of bad taste almost inconceivable in radio.

It's especially regrettable because some of these sketches were exploring new avenues in humor and radio, heaven knows, could stand such exploration. Many of the ideas were good enough but the execution and what I can only refer to as the impossibly elegant tone in which they were written were uniformly deplorable.

Nevertheless, "New Faces" introduced some new notes which shouldn't be lost—namely, the sprightly pace, the tuneful choral numbers, the revue structure, the fresh talent and above all the commercials, which are about as good as commercials ever get.

Impossible Hour Proves Something About Radio

By Patricia Clary

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 18 (U.P.).—The Impossible Hour, a new radio program, is proving how impossible the rest of the radio programs are. It does just what they do, only more so.

Stop the Music gives away $20,000. But the Impossible Hour gives away a million—plus a pound of lamb chops.

Disk jockeys answer requests to play records. The Impossible Hour answers requests not to play records.

Soap operas pester to send you premiums. On this program, you send it the presents.

Commentators soberly analyze the problems that confront the country. The Impossible Hour tackles its greatest concern. It tells you what's going to happen to Dick Tracy.

This program also performs the public service every radio station strives toward. It advises housewives of three-minute music selections so they can time their eggs.

Beat Critics to It

THE Impossible Hour, which beat critics to it by billing itself the worst in the world, flutters out every Saturday evening from a Pasadena station almost impossible to receive on the far side of Hollywood and Vine.

Movietowners hunch over their sets anyway straining to hear what Leonard Levinson, who used to write a lot of their radio shows, is cooking up for himself.

"I got tired of having other people louse up my dialogue," he said. "I decided to louse it up myself."

The Impossible emcee is dickering for a deal with a network.

"I want a bigger studio," he said. "I want enough room to broadcast lying on the floor. A program's gotta sound relaxed."

Any sponsor in the weeds will be welcome. Listeners are asked each week to send one in, like a boxtop.

"I can help someone with a booming, thriving business," Levinson said. "I'll cut down his sales and give him a breather."

Asked Not to Play

WITHOUT a sponsor, Levinson still has commercials. He throws in plugs for the "Jerky Journey" comic shorts he produces for Republic Pictures.

He said he had been swamped with requests not to play records.

"One week we were asked not to play 32 Vaughn Monroe records," he said. "We didn't have time, so we had to not play 14 the next week."

Levinson gave away a record and a knitting kit, then invited listeners last week to give him something. He's received 100 used razor blades and the left of a pair of rubbers.

The current Impossible contest is to design new paper lamb chop panties. Levinson got tired of looking at the old ones. The prize: one million dollars, in Chinese money (currently worth 8 cents) and the chops.

"So far," he said, "we have been flooded with 12 entries."

In the lead is a lady from Weston, Mass., who must have highpowered ears. Her panties are fluted.

A "temporary vegetarian" in San Francisco had another idea. She wished to wrap the million dollars around the lamb chop.

'Atomic Giveaway' Next Thing

The Mutual Broadcasting System has come up with an "atomic giveaway."

Mutual won't give away any atomic bombs, but does plan to give the winner some award such as a geiger counter, with runners-up receiving hammers to use in splitting atoms.

The "atomic giveaway" will be one in a series of four programs designed to further public information on atomic energy. Mutual officials considered using documentary type factual broadcast, but decided they don't have enough audience appeal so chose instead to present the series in popular type programs.

The "atomic giveaway" quiz on Monday, September 20, starts off the weekly series. The second will be a "radioactive mystery," the third a science quiz for kids, and the fourth a drama with an atomic theme. Producer and director will be Sherman H. Dryer.

Free Dimple for Beatrice

Hollywood (AP).—Beatrice Pearson, Broadway stage actress whose first screen appearance will be in "The Numbers Racket," shies away from makeup men now.

In preparation for her first screen test she got an hour-long facial workout. When she looked in the mirror she noticed that the makeup man had given her a cleft in the chin.

She asked him to remove it, but he protested. Some time later she learned why he considerd the dimple so important. He had just married a girl with a cleft in her chin.

The studio took restrictive steps before he put dimples in everybody's chins.

WQQW Dedicates New FM Station This Evening

Station WQQW will formally dedicate its new high-power frequency modulation unit this evening at 6. The station has been broadcasting test programs since September 12. The dedication program will be heard over both WQQW-AM (570 kilocycles) and WQQW-FM (103.5 megacycles) and master of ceremonies will be M. Robert Rogers, general manager of the two stations.

ROGERS

A number of celebrities and civic leaders will participate in the broadcast, either in person or via specially transcribed messages.

The National Symphony will be represented by Howard Mitchell, who is conducting several concerts of the orchestra's 1948 season. He will be interviewed by Pierson Underwood, WQQW program director.

Rogers stated that before undertaking construction of the FM station, WQQW polled its listeners and established that 70 per cent of its daytime audience either had FM receviers or would buy them if the station provided an evening service of good music programs on FM. The new station, therefore, will broadcast until midnight every day of the week. Its signal will have a power of 20,000 watts, as powerful as any FM station in the area.

Vacationers Visit Tangier Isle For Trip Back Through Time

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

DOZENS of vacationers on the Virginia coast have been making a voyage back through time this summer.

They are the guests at Irvington's beautiful new The Tides Inn which sponsors a weekly yacht trip to Tangier Island, far out in the Chesapeake Bay.

Tangier is one place where many of the advantages and disadvantages of civilization have not yet gained a foothold. Protected as it is by the blue-gray waters of the Chesapeake it seldom had visitors until recent years. Now the few that find their way there by pleasure cruiser or fishing boat are greeted with good-natured indifference.

So it was on the day I visited Tangier as one of the passengers on the Sun Tan, IV, the yacht now operated by The Tides. The islanders seemed happy enough to have us, but once we'd landed they paid us scant attention except for a little staring at the more strangely modish sports clothes in the crowd.

The Tangierians themselves were dressed principally in plain, utilitarian cotton clothes. Occasionally you saw a woman wearing a sunbonnet. Though there is a beauty shop on the island, few women wear make-up. Their faces, tanned by sun and sea-breezes, are as bare of lipstick and rouge as were those of their ancestresses, who came with their men to settle the island in the seventeenth century.

Smith Discoverer

IT was Capt. John Smith who discovered Tangier in 1608 and gave it its foreign sounding name. Together with nearby Smith Island and the more distant Chincoteague, it forms a group of sea-locked communities where people have lived for centuries in a leisurely fashion, remote from changing civilization.

Today, despite its unique charm, Tangier is far from a "tourist" town. The only possible souvenir to buy was a sunbonnet, and a member of our party had a hard time finding one of those for sale. Its 1500 inhabitants are fishing people, and fishing people they obviously intend to stay no matter how often the world comes to their doorstep.

There isn't a single automobile on Tangier, though a few motor scooters have made a noisy appearance there in recent years. It's "streets" are narrow lanes with no sidewalks, not wide enough for a car. Walking and bicycling are the only means of locomotion on the island except the scooters.

Tangier's location relative to Washington

Wooden Houses

HOUSES are all of wood, white-with picket fences around, small green squares of front yard. And these same yards serve as cemeteries for the ancestors of the people who live in the houses.

Because the island is low and flat, the usual method of burying the dead isn't practical. All the tombs are at ground level or above. In one yard, a tiny white fence enclosed two children's graves, small white oblongs of concrete with head and footstones. Almost every yard had one or two graves.

Many of the people we met as we strolled through their quiet lanes were blondes or redheads, their hair bleached lighter by nature. A little girl on a bicycle was delivering newspapers published in Criswell, Md., on the mainland. A boy pulled a wagonload of ice from door-to-door. Occasionally, one of the motor scooters whizzed by in a burst of speed. From a dusty-windowed building marked "Ice Cream Parlor," strains of juke-box music floated.

Veterans Honored

IN FRONT of the Swain Methodist Episcopal Church was a tablet with a long list of islanders who served in the two World Wars. The number of families represented was small, but sometimes there were as many as 20 with the same last name. For the same families have remained on the island through the generations and intermarried until practically everyone is related to everybody else.

The islanders have electricity and telephones now. Huge oil tanks down at the wharf provide fuel for the motor launches they use for fishing. But as we passed them and climbed aboard the Sun Tan, we felt we were leaving one civilization and heading for a newer, different kind.

Between the two was a quiet afternoon's ride, for the trip to the island takes all day even though you're ashore only half an hour. We sat on the breeze-whipped deck and watched for the "points of interest" along the way—the buoy that marks the wreck of the Spanish battleship San Marcos, the "main channel" to Baltimore, where tankers and freighters follow each other in seemingly slow procession; Stingray Point on the mainland, also named by Capt. John Smith, because he was bitten by a stingray there. Then the boat turned up the Rappahanock and drifted into the wide arm of Carter's Creek, past the wharves, yacht club, and oyster shucking houses,—home to modern, comfortable, Twentieth Century Tides Inn.

How About Name For Truman Car

By Orval Hopkins

WELL, if President Truman hasn't got troubles enough, what with a tougher schedule ahead than the Redskins—and about the same chance of winning—here comes Franklin Snow with a very sprightly note counseling Mr. Truman to change the name of his private railroad car. As if that's going to help matters. "May I make a suggestion to you?" writes Snow to the President. Without waiting for a reply, he goes on to say that the name of the President's private car, Ferdinand Magellan, "certainly has no connotation with anything of an American nature . . . For patriotic reasons, do you not think that this car should be renamed—some such name as America, George Washington, Mayflower, or any name which has a bearing upon our own country and its historical assiciations?"

I think Snow has a good idea, but I'd make the name something at once eye-catching and utilitarian. For the coming season, as an example, the President could have emblazoned on the side of his car "Phooey on Dewey" or some such legend. This not only would nail people's attention as the car rolled about the country; it also would take some load off the mud-slinging division. If Governor Dewey were elected he quite possibly would want to change, in his turn, the name of the presidential rolling stock. My suggestion for the good Governor would be that he label the rattler "Is Anybody Happy?" or, maybe, "We Told Ya So!"

BERMUDA, ever forward-looking, now is looking forward to a swarm of vacationists taking advantage of a series of six-day cruises being undertaken by the SS Evangeline. The next trips are scheduled for September 24 and October 1. But there is flexibility. You can go to Bermuda, for example, on the second trip and come back on the fourth . . . The International Publishing Co. of Montreal, which seems to have a publicity account for the Province of Quebec, is more than a little aware of the fall hunting possibilities in the Laurentian Mountains. These mountains, says IPC, 40 miles north of Montreal "rear themselves in proud beauty" and "begin to throw up their crusty verdant crags—not lofty, but beautious (sic), challenging." There's more, but the general impression is that in the Laurentians about all you have to do is lean on a jack pine and Mister Deer practically walks up and knocks himself over the head for you. All you have to do is slit his weazand.

THE VENEZUELAN AIRLINE LAV (Linea Aeropostal Venezolana) and Capital Airlines have signed an interline passenger agreement enabling each airline to ticket passengers over the other's routes, according to Jack Purcell, the CA tub whacker . . . And Tom Smith, tub ditto for Miami Beach, Fla., says a new city ordinance prohibits construction of fences or other obstructions beyond the high water mark on the beach. Hereafter, says Smith in a somewhat puzzling analogy, the oceanfront will be "as free as the ranges west of Powder River, or wherever it was 'Don't Fence Me In' was written about" . . . Eight Eastern States and Texas accounted for 80 per cent of the visitors to Williamsburg this summer—that is 80 per cent of those who signed the guestbook. Only 12 per cent signed, according to the data sheet here, so you'll have to go on from there alone . . . Jacques Thibaud, the French violinist, and Mme. Thibaud have gone to Europe on the French Liner De Grasse.

MEMBERS of the Atlantic City beach patrol are remaining on duty this year until October 12. The track closes its season next Saturday with the $15,000 All-American handicap . . . The Jersey Methodist Conference convenes in Ocean City next Thursday . . . Fifty-five per cent of New York State's resort hotels will stay open through September, 32 per cent until October 15, and 19 per cent until the end of October.

Angry Drivers Worried

Pittsburgh (AP).—If you're mad over the toast that wifey burnt for breakfast, don't drive—take a streetcar to work, advises the Pittsburgh Motor Club. "When a driver is mad, terribly worried, or physically sick, he is not completely normal, and his chances of getting mixed up in an accident are considerably boosted," the club said.

When the perception of the eye and the quickness of muscular reaction slacken, the result may be a tragic accident. You don't have to be a driver who vents his anger on the gas pedal. If you're only just worried about something, the club cautioned, "take it very easy behind the wheel." And if you just can't calm down, "better walk or take a streetcar."

Record-Breaking Regatta

Elizabeth City, N. C.—Fifty boats already have been entered in the National Motorboat Regatta, to be held here October 15-17, according to Selby Stokes, president of the Pasquotank River Yacht Club, host for the meeting.

The tiny sailboats will come from as far west as Michigan and as far south as the Gulf Coast. Their owners will bring them atop their cars or in specially built trailers, and slide them easily into the waters of the Pasquotank in front of the club.

This year the regatta queen and her court will parade along the waterfront in a regal barge which is being specially built and decorated.

Roscoe Stevenson, local youth, international champion and winner of the Antonia Trophy, will be among the contestants.

Love Song for Bermuda

"Bermuda Blue," a love song written and composed by Bermudians, has been placed on sale in the islands. Launcelot Hayward, the composer, is the noted blind pianist at the Eagle's Nest Hotel.

No Insects, No Snakes, No Spiders

Now that mosquitoes have been almost completely eradicated, Bermuda has none of the biting insects one usually finds at vacation resorts. There are no snakes or poisonous spiders on the island. The drinking water is fresh and pure.

Trieste Plans September Fair

Rome (AP).—Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia will participate in Trieste's second international fair, opening September 20. United States and British firms have also confirmed their intention to take part in the fair. Austrian railways have announced a 25 per cent tariff reduction to those attending the fair and similar decisions were adopted by the Czechoslovak railways.

Open Late

Nags Head, N. C.—The Wilbur Wright Hotel will stay open until late October this year, and reports good advance bookings.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1948

TELEVISION SECTION | SECTION VII

Receivers Reaching Buyers at Rate of 15,000 Weekly

By Bond Geddes

Radio Manufacturers Association

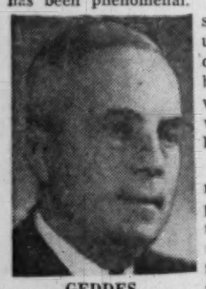
THE growth of the television manufacturing industry since World War II, or rather the transition of the radio set industry to television production, has been phenomenal. Approximately 600,000 TV sets had been manufactured up to September 1, and the current production rate is better than 15,000 weekly with indications that this will be increased sharply before the end of this year.



GEDDES

The year's output of TV receivers is expected to approximate 750,000, bringing the total sets in use or on the market to more than 925,000 and possibly close to the million mark.

Washington ranks among the first five TV areas in the country and seems to be getting its proportionate share of the still limited supply of television receivers. With its present television outlets and because it is the Nation's Capital, Washington probably will be one of the most important sources of television network programs, especially in the current events field.

Most of the television sets being produced today are coming from the plants of the same manufacturers who have been making the vast majority of our radio receivers. However, there recently have been a number of newcomers in the field so that today more than 65 manufacturers are licensed to produce TV receivers. This compares with over 200 licensed radio set manufacturers.

Tube Shortage

TELEVISION receiver production is still retarded by the shortage of Cathode Ray tubes—the heart of the TV set—but this shortage is rapidly being overcome by the expansion of tube and glass container producing facilities. Next year's rate of set production probably will double the current 1948 rate, but production costs are likely to remain high. The TV set requires much more man-hours and many more components than does the radio receiver and consequently will not reach the same level of prices for some time to come.

While television is the newest and perhaps the most promising entertainment medium to appear since radio made its debut, we in the manufacturing field do not look upon it as a rival or supplanter of radio. Television rather offers an additional or supplementary service, and the complete TV console today recognizes the relationship of radio and television by providing both AM and FM radio as well as TV reception facilities.

Television receivers are being manufactured in an increasing variety of models, with prices running from just under $200 to over $4000, and are adaptable to a small apartment or a large living room or library. Television is not a rich man's toy but, like radio, is designed for family and home entertainment of every economic class.

Competition Assured

THE radio industry has invested millions of dollars in launching televsion and is prepared to spend millions more in bringing TV set production to a volume scale comparable to that attained in radio manufacturing. Every technical improvement will be passed along to the consumer as rapidly as it develops, but there appears little danger that present TV receivers will be outmoded or made obsolete in the near future.

The radio industry is already a billion dollar industry; tomorrow the combined radio and television industry probably will be one of the largest single industries in the country. The radio industry has always been highly competitive, with benefits to the public, and the television industry will be equally competitive.

16,600 Sets Operating Here

AS OF SEPTEMBER 1, there were 16,600 television sets installed and operating in the Washington metropolitan area, according to the Washington Television Circulation Committee. This committee includes representatives of WMAL-TV, WNBW and WTTG, the three operating Washington television stations.

Demands on Writers Heavy

Teledrama Adapters Deserve Some Credit

By Richard L. Coe

EVEN THE MOST casual televiewer must be stunned by the demands the medium makes on writers.

Though television channels are yet so few, in several weeks there will be six sponsored major television dramatic shows. The only thing holding more back is construction work in new studios. And each of these shows demands at least three to four weeks of work on the part of adapters.

Which is why this infrequent watchman was surprised the other evening to find the Kraft Television Theater giving no credit to the writer who adapted Somerset Maugham's "Lady Frederick" for the seeing ether.

Granted, one certainly doesn't want the air littered with the endless lines that beleaguer screen credits (Miss Oompah's hats by Mimi, her hair dressed by Whip, etc., etc.). But surely the person who writes a radio play deserves air credit along with the players and the author whose original he has adapted.

This may seem a minor point with which to tweak the generous mayonnaise folk (whose commercials, by the way, are just as fascinating as early cartoonists predicted). But I think it's an important one.

For, no matter how brilliant the production directors may be, no matter how celebrated the performers, without the writer there would be no televised play. And the less the still-experimental writers are given encouragement early in this business, the harder time they will have in getting their eventual due. Beyond that lies the confusing credits of those screen titles, the result of belated recognition:

"Screen play by Joe Dokes, Marian Blop and Augustus Burp, from an adaptation by Lillian Frayne of a story by Hopscotch MacWhinney from an idea by G. I. Fergit."

Possibly the televisers are fearful of just that, but the fact remains, the adapter of Maugham's play deserved the credit he did not get the other night.

Play Well Adapted

MAUGHAM'S play, which was produced in London in 1907, sounds like a pallid rewrite of Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan." Edwardian epigrams crowd the first act—"Clothes only hang well on a woman when she's lost every shred of reputation," "He hasn't a virtue, but he does very well on his vices." The story concerns a penniless lady of fashionable London who must save her questionable reputation by a wealthy marriage. Naturally she turns out to be more virtuous than those who scorn her and a suitable marriage is arranged.

The play was well adapted to tele, for its scenes were confined to three rooms and the critical last act depended on the worn lines beneath Lady Frederick's expert make-up. To discourage a suitor young enough to be her son, she received him in her boudoir while making up for the day, thereby showing him, more than words could explain, the eventual tragedy their marriage would be.

Such a plot device, a natural for television, certainly reveals someone's vast knowledge of theater. A forgotten play of 42 years ago isn't the sort of thing one comes across by the merest chance. I daresay Maugham himself must have been surprised by this revival of a comedy he wrote when he was 33.

Appetite for Video

WHICH brings us back to the ferocious appetite of television. All the writing—to say nothing of the production and acting detail—that went into Kraft's hour-long show is now gone with the air that carried it

D. C. Screens Offer Treats All Monday

SURPRISE!

When you turn on a television set Monday you'll get programs instead of test patterns.

It's all part of a benign plot arranged by the three TV stations now in operation here, to help television dealers show you the merits of their sets when you pay them a call Monday.

In cooperation with The Washington Post, WMAL-TV, WNBW and WTTG will follow up today's special television section with a full day of programming—an expensive and, therefore, necessarily unusual form of exercise on their part. Tossing the ball from transmitter to transmitter during the day, all three stations will go into their normal programming late in the afternoon and continue through the evening.

Films Are the Fare

SINCE it takes eight technicians to handle a video show which one engineer can handle on radio, and about 10 times as much preparation, the stations found it impractical to produce "live" programs during the day tomorrow, but they've promised that the films to be used are all good video and definitely will not include proper procedures for cold drop forging, making ethyl gasoline or killing chickens on the assembly line. (Oh, you've already seen those on TV?)

Starting at 10 a. m., WMAL-TV (channel 7) will sign on with "Cavalcade of the Redskins," a film showing highlights of past Redskin games. "Invitation to the Nation," a pictorial presentation of Washington, will follow with a film on the employment of disabled veterans next. "Doubtful Dollars," an illustrated explanation of how to detect counterfeit money and a film on tuberculosis entitled "Time Out" will close the WMAL-TV portion of the special programming. Despite the educational sound of most of these, WMAL-TV says they're all interesting films.

At 12:30 p. m. WNBW (channel 4) goes to bat with an hour's worth of "Scattergood Baines," a

See PROGRAM, Page 16, Col. 2.

Mind Your Make-Up - - and Your Manners!

CHIN UP, chum, if you are going on television.

I mean it figuratively; it's really not such an ordeal.

And I mean it literally; you will look years younger with your chin up.

Having seen some of the country's acknowledged beauties emerge wispy and ghastly on TV, many women are afraid to be televised, even when they are offered a chance to boost a favorite charity or other pet project on one of Washington's several video interview programs.

Nobody can promise that you will look your best on TV. You probably won't. But there are rules which can save you from being the absolute washout on television that some people are.

Phyllis Bell, director of a local school for models, now offers a course in TV makeup and movement to her students and a special one-shot-only consultation service for women who are anxious about an impending TV guest appearance.

Suntan Is Best

ALTHOUGH she supervised the models for the television exhibit at the New York World's Fair and currently provides models for TV shows in Washington, Miss Bell avoids laying down permanent rules for television makeup. "Lighting conditions differ from one studio to another," she says, "and the mechanical equipment is being improved all the time."

But a safe makeup to use for cameras found currently in Washington studios is "a good healthy suntan" whether it's natural or comes out of a jar, according to Miss Bell. The wan faces you see on TV belong to pale people.

It is wise to check with the studio where you will appear, since WTTG, for example, uses a different type of camera from those used by WNBW and WMAL-TV, and considers special makeup unnecessary.

Gentlemen needn't feel self-conscious about wearing their wives' dark foundation creams or pancake makeups if they suffer from office pallor. Most professional TV performers use makeup and nobody will think you vain or silly if you wear it, too. However, many TV performers who refuse to bother with makeup look very well without it.

Powder No Help

THE male beard which often shows up astonishingly on TV can be covered by makeup. No matter how smoothly shaven, men of certain skin pigmentation look like the five-o'clock- shadow ads when they are televised.

Don't resort to the time-honored custom of dusting talcum powder over the beard. It makes the bristles more prominent still, according to Miss Bell, by whitening the skin in contrast. (Even sandy-bearded men sometimes look like Dangerous Dan on TV, and only experience can tell how each man will look.)

But back to the ladies. They are sure to be wearing makeup of some kind, and it might as well be right.

At one time it was supposed that only a brown lipstick would show up on TV, but with the new cameras, a dark purplish lipstick shows up just as well. The pale pinks are out, since they do not register.

If you are unwilling to have people see you face to face in makeup you think unbecoming, you'll suffer the consequences on the screen. (CFL Clare Boothe Luce who wanted to look her best before the convention delegates in Philadelphia, and sacrificed—but mightily—her TV appearance.)

As to the eyes, Miss Bell warns against eye shadow. One of the chief complaints about TV performers is that their eyes look like black holes in their heads. Eye shadow increases this illusion, and although Miss Bell admits that in some unusual cases the discreet use of shadow may be helpful, the safest rule is to skip it.

TO BE OR NOT to be graceful on TV. Joyce Bissel (right) follows the television modeling rules to look slim and graceful. Betty White (left), commits all the sins, including elbows akimbo, feet planted squarely and hands "flagging" with her gloves. The "busy" print of her dress is distracting to the camera; a contrasting skirt and blouse is the maximum clothing accent you dare risk in TV.

Mascara and some brow pencil are recommended. For an extra touch of eye-glamour, let the mascara dry and apply a second coat. This makes the lashes look heavier without making them beaded.

Powder sometimes has a patchy look on TV. Miss Bell suggest that you blot your cream foundation with a tissue, then with cotton moistened in cold water. You won't need powder.

Don't Wear White

WHAT you wear is important on television. DON'T wear a print or stripe even if it is your favorite dress. "Busy" patterns in a dress distract from your face.

Even experienced TV people find it hard to predict how colors will come out, but they all caution against white because it draws attention to itself. White often "blossoms" or glows in a television picture.

If you wear a hat, be sure it is small enough not to shade your face. If you are buying a hat for the event, you might just as well buy a black and gray one so you will know in advance how it looks, according to Ed Camp, WNBW's set designer. The cerise hat that seems like such a gay touch to your costume, will register in some shade of gray on TV.

If your most telegenic outfit involves a black dress and brown hat, or a couple of shrieking greens, go ahead and wear them. The camera will tell a lie and say you are in lovely shades of gray.

Red is highly unpredictable on TV, and might better be avoided.

How you move is very important. Television emphasizes every moment and Miss Bell cautions her girls that little motions—even the shifting of weight from one foot to another—are evident on television although they would not be noticed on the platform at a fashion show.

"Flagging," a term Miss Bell uses for superfluous gestures with head, hand or foot, shows up most woefully on the TV screen. In this connection, you should be warned not to carry gloves or wear a ring if you tend to play with them when nervous.

You will be encouraged by the producer to make gestures when you want to emphasize a point, but don't make a lot of meaningless distracting motions. Leave your hair, your collar and your gloves alone.

Pull Elbows In

NOW we come to a few points which Miss Bell's models learn and which you might wish to bear in mind, although it would be unwarranted optimism to suppose you will have them all under control by the time you make your TV debut. Still, it's a comfort to know how to behave before the camera just on the outside chance you won't be too busy with your speechifying to attend to your camera angles.

First, keep your chin up. That minimizes lines, wrinkles, puffs, and multiplie wattles. It takes away the hangdog look and gives the eyes expression.

Keep your elbows close to your

Moderator Can 'Angle' Show

Editorializing Potential Of TV Is Tremendous

By Sonia Stein

"YOUR FAMOUS impartiality is now sunk," a friend told Dwight Cooke when he put "People's Platform" on television.

And it has posed a problem. Should the moderator of a discussion program "smile at the jokes or look as if he had died?" Cooke has decided to register to everything, nod that he understands and then cock an eyebrow at the opposing speaker as if inviting comment.

COOKE

Acutely conscious of the editorializing possibilities of TV, Cooke claims "you can read something in a completely impartial voice and yet make your viewpoint clear by your motions."

He gives as an example the time Gen. George Patton said that there was as little difference between the German Fascists and German Democrats as there is between the Republicans and Democrats in the United States.

Reading Patton's statement with cold impartiality, Cooke nonetheless waved it at the participants on the show as if it were a highly undesirable piece of paper.

And after he had made sure the statement was firmly impressed on the audience, he flashed on the TV screen a news picture of a cart loaded with corpses in one of the Nazi concentration camps. Editorializing? Cooke admits he'd hate to have to draw the line between what is and is not permissible.

"Actually," he says, "if you have pictures of two men opposing each other on some issue and you can get only a moronic looking picture of one of them, you can't use the pictures without being guilty of editorializing." So he doesn't use either.

One-Sided Material

OFTEN the only film material available to illustrate some controversial issue is very one-sided. "No matter how many arguments on the other side the commentator supplies, his words would never have the same impact as the pictures and it wouldn't be a fair presentation," Cooke contends.

TV can be an incredible instrument for democracy and adult education, Cooke predicts, but he is concerned about the advantages money may be able to buy on TV.

On radio if two conflicting groups are to share the debate, each one sends his best spokesman. On TV, each one will send his best films—and the difference between the best of the millions of feet of film one group can afford to shoot, and the pitiful product the poorer group may be able to afford, is enormous.

Each group will get equal time for its film, he says, but there is no way of controlling or even knowing how much money each group has spent on its portion of the picture program. (Cooke was the first writer and one of the editors for "March of Time" films, and is well-versed in the documentary film problem.)

Hope for 'Kindly Light'

BUT this is only one of the problems that makes running a group discussion such a headache on TV.

In the first place, says Cooke, "when I get two or three educators together they may look like people out of an old Bela Lugosi movie." Then with the inflexible lighting, they may look even worse. Hollows look hollower, wrinkles more wrinkled and chins doubler as they move under the lights.

"In Hollywood," Cooke com-

'Honeymoon' With Sports Is Ending

By Jack Walsh

IT seems definite now that the television-sports "honeymoon" is all but over.

There never was much doubt that sports promoters would cut out television just as soon as they began to be hurt more than helped by it. Thing is, television's amazingly rapid growth has brought on the parting sooner than even the experts anticipated.

Curiously, the rift is developing boxing, vide's first love and its outstanding sporting attraction from a visual standpoint.

A case in point was the Ezzard Charles-Jimmy Bivins bout here at Griffith Stadium last Monday. The fight was televised all right—but not locally. Only those outside a radius of 75 miles from Washington were able to watch the scrap that had an important bearing on the heavyweight title situation.

It was the first time a big event was televised with that proviso.

Sold for $3500

GABE MENENDEZ, matchmaker for Mrs. Florence Turner, admitted that the outside television rights were sold to a brewery for $3500. With the assistance of local station WMAL-TV, the Columbia network piped it to all outlets from Wilmington, Del., to Boston and it was shown in Richmond, Va.

But Menendez wouldn't allow the show to be televised in his immediate ticket area. He said, simply, "It would hurt us too much."

Paid attendance for the Charles-Bivins affair was 11,631; the gross gate $48,560. Both these figures were somewhat disappointing. However, one interesting statistic revealed that more than 8000 general admission tickets were sold at the ballpark the night of the fight.

For the second Louis-Walcott title match last June, only 5000 of the 10,000 cheap seats held for general sale were disposed of after 6 p. m. In recent years—

WOIC, New Year Gift to Capital

By Eugene S. Thomas
General Manager, WOIC

WASHINGTON is a city of events. Here are made each day myriad decisions and transactions which vitally affect all of us. Our country's nerve center provides an endless fascinating story. And when WOIC takes to the air on Channel 9 early in January, it will tell that story each day to District residents through intimate, on-the-spot coverage by the finest mobile television equipment.

WOIC, now under construction at 40th and Brandywine sts. adjacent to Fort Reno Park, intends to start its broadcasting career by televising on January 20 the historic inauguration of the newly elected President of the United States.

WOIC intends also to become a real part of the Washington community by devoting a large share of its air time to delineating the everyday activities of the average District citizen.

Busy Mobile Units

NEW WOIC mobile television units will be regular visitors at the local stores and markets, schools, hospitals, art galleries, ball parks and factories. Colorful military parades, reviews and ceremonies, found only on the Washington scene, will also be captured by WOIC tele-cameramen.

More news is breaking every day and the demand for it is greater, as witness the growth of the Capitol press galleries, WOIC's starting staff of about fifty, mostly Washingtonians, is keenly aware of this fact and the station plans to have a skilled news and photography staff.

These District events will be reported as they happen through on-the-spot "remote" broadcasts. The station will also have a "delayed schedule" of news, so that audiences may see at night on films the events of importance which took place during the morning and afternoon, such as congressional committee hearings.

D. C. Area Not Limit

WOIC, however, will not be limited to programs emanating from the D. C. area.

This is the artist's conception of WOIC, new television station to be located at 40th and Brandywine sts. Its 300-foot tower already is erected

Owned and operated by the Bamberger Broadcasting Service, WOIC will be the key Washington outlet of the rapidly expanding Mutual television network. Three months after we go on the air, the station will be linked with WOR-TV by coaxial cable. We will exchange programs with New York and those who tune their sets to Channel 9 will enjoy Broadway plays, Madison Square Garden sports events and other entertainment programs. Later WOIC will be further linked with more and more Mutual network stations.

WOIC is admirably situated for listener reception. The higher a transmitter is, the farther it can broadcast, and WOC's 300-foot transmitting tower is situated on the highest point of ground in the District, giving it an over-all elevation greater than that of the Washington Monument.

Our transmitting tower already has been erected and the cornerstone for the transmitter building will be laid in another month. We plan to be broadcasting test patterns by December 1.

Last Word in Modernity

IN PLANNING and equipping the transmitter building (see accompanying photograph), our engineers and architects have taken advantage of all new methods of construction and design and ample provision has been made for shortwave, microwave and relay equipment and for coaxial television cables.

The new transmitter building will also have a projection room for viewing 16-millimeter film in advance, an editing and cutting room for preparing film for broadcast, a large video control desk for seeing pictures before, during and after transmission, and a "scope" for checking network programs from other stations and images received from our mobile broadcasting units during "remote" D. C. programs.

There will even be a completely equipped kitchenette for transmitter personnel.

The plans for our transmitter building were prepared by Berla & Abel and the building is being constructed by Davis, Wick and Rosengarten. Both are Washington, D. C., firms.

Sell 75 a Day Here

TELEVISION sets are now being bought and installed at the rate of 3000 a day; 75 homes a day are receiving new television sets in the District alone and hospitals, schools, Army posts and places of public amusement are buying up sets as fast as they come off the assembly lines.

At last count, 33 stations were in operation, 89 had been granted construction permits, and 298 had applied for permission to enter the new industry. Within several years these stations alone will be broadcasting programs to more than eleven-twelfths of the country in more than 150 cities and to at least three provinces of Canada.

Nearly 900,000 sets will be in use by Christmas, 1948, and a year later close to two million sets are expected to be in operation. According to indications of surveys made by the FCC, television manufacturers and trade papers, this country will have 25 million sets in use 10 years from today.

Television is well out of its swaddling clothes and growing bigger every minute. As the center of the Nation, Washington will play a major role in one of history's most exciting developments. WOIC, your Mutual District station, is happy to take its part in bringing the magic window of television into your home.

Served Wartime Use

First mass education by television was started by the Radio Corp. of America and the National Broadcasting Co. in 1942 when thousands of air-raid wardens in the New York area received their instructions via receivers installed at vantage points.

Newland F. Smith has been appointed Television Facilities Engineer for WOR-TV and WOIC. He will be responsible for installation and maintenance of television equipment, studios and transmitter buildings of both stations, now under construction. He comes from the Camden Division of Radio Corporation of America

No 72-Inch Screen, No Baby Sitter

As Told by Al Morgan

(Subbing on CBS' "This Is New York")

AS of right now, I'm the last person in the world to deny that television has made deep inroads into American life. The little girl who used to peer timidly under the swinging doors of a saloon and ask timidly "Is my father in there?" doesn't have to ask her plaintive question anymore. She knows darn well he's in there, sitting by, nursing a large coke, rooting for the Dodgers.

The other night, quite by accident, I stumbled into a revolution. It all started with a normal domestic problem . . . normal that is, if you have a 2-year-old son and want to take your wife to the theater.

Long before you trudge around to the box office to pick up two on the aisle, you make sure that you can get a baby sitter. More times than you care to remember, your own social life depends on whether a local high school girl is mad at her boy friend and willing to do her sulking in your living room with an ear cocked for your offspring's cry.

Well . . . the high school girl we usually have was pitching for her softball team that night, four other elderly ladies who have held down the easy chair in our living room on other occasions were going to quiz shows and couldn't possibly oblige.

A dollar thirty five cents worth later my wife was franctically calling all the other mothers in the neighborhood for a list of their sitters. No dice, no sitter and probably no theater.

ONE woman up the block, finally after what seemed like unnecessary coyness to me, gave us a phone number.

"I won't promise you anything on this one," she said, "but you can try."

I tried. I rang the number and asked if the lady would come over and sit with our baby.

"He's really a wonderful baby," I said. "He dies between 7 at night and 7 in the morning. You won't have to bother with him at all. We have a full icebox and all the latest books and if . . . you want to make a long-distance call or two . . . I guess that's all right, too. How about it . . . won't you come and sit with our baby?"

The lady let me finish. "What size screen did you say you have?" she asked.

"I beg your pardon?"

"Screen—what size screen do you have on your television set? My eyes are starting to bother me a little, and I couldn't possibly come if your screen is less than 72 square inches . . ."

"We don't have a television set," I meekly replied. "Oh, but he's really a wonderful baby and if you have any dirty laundry just bring that along and put it in the washing machine . . . my wife will iron it for you in the morning . . ."

"I'm so sorry," said the lady on the other end of the phone. "I only sit with babies in houses that are equipped with television."

"Why?" I asked her.

"I'm crazy about television. I can't afford a set of my own and ladies my age don't go to bars unescorted. This seems like a very simple, profitable solution to me."

Make It a 72

I THANKED her weakly, and before I hung up she said, "Keep my number and if you ever get a television set, call me up. But please . . . don't get anything with less than a 72-inch screen . . ."

So if you see me heading home some night buried under a television set, mark me down as the latest victim of the revolution in the third oldest profession in the world.

Video Appeals Mostly to Youth

It's the young American—men and women between 18 and 25—to whom television appeals most, according to a survey of 2,480,000 reading families taken by American Magazine.

The study shows that the interest of the adult in television falls off as he grows older and his fondness for radio at the same time increases. The survey also indicated that more than 4 of every 10 men and women in the middle-income class like both video and regular radio programs about the same.

About 37.8 per cent of all adults have seen video programs, the report said, but only 1 per cent of all families surveyed now have sets; 28 per cent said they would buy one if television became available in their area either this or next year.

Radio Sales Off 10 Per Cent From 1947

An editorial appearing in "Electrical Merchandising" said that standard radios have begun to show a drop in sales. They are down about 10 per cent from last year, with 6,771,210 sets accounted for, according to the report.

The Story of TELEVISION CITY

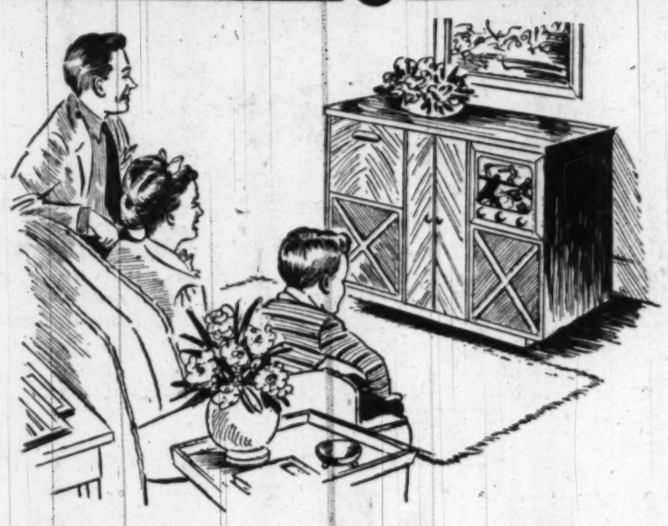
TELEVISION CITY was inevitable! You created it!

You've been watching television for a year now, curiously at first . . . but with increasing interest as you marveled at its wizardy in the homes of friends.



You saw the enchanted faces of children as they watched the merry capers of that fabulous character, Howdy Doody. You became interested in sports you never understood before. You became excited about the way news was pictorialized. Your interest in world events increased . . . your attention mounted as you witnessed fashion shows, entertainment epics, plays, educational features and oh, so much more. Then you knew you wanted a Television Set.

But which make . . . there were so many . . . and each had its own enthusiasts. Did you require an eight, ten or twelve-inch screen? And, how about the cabinet? There were so many models that it became confusing. Your questions and perplexities about this fascinating medium made TELEVISION CITY inevitable.

Thus, TELEVISION CITY was born. Now, at Lubar TELEVISION CITY you can see the principal sets of all the leading makers, pre-selected and displayed against actual living room backgrounds. Now, you can get unbiased advice and counsel about the set which will suit your needs perfectly. You can witness demonstrations unhurriedly, comfortably and choose the set which will make you glad that you are living in the age of Television, an era that will weave a richer pattern of life for you and your children.

'Remote' Shows Are the Hardest to Report

MINER

WHAT Worthington Miner has to say about television makes perfect sense in any case, but the fact that CBS' television programs, over which he exercises considerable control, are currently winning the more-listeners than anybody honors in New York, makes his words shine.

Although Miner's pre-CBS background is in the theater, where he directed such plays as "Excursion," "Father Malachy's Miracle" and "Bury the Dead" and collaborated with Robert Benchley on dialogue for a couple of movies, it hasn't blinded him to the fact that the one thing TV can do better than anything else is "report."

"TV has a reporting potential that cannot be equalled," according to Miner, although he admits that "some of the troubles and pains in television derive from the fact that the sensitivity which makes the reportorial work possible came rather late."

As program development manager for CBS-TV, Miner is familiar with both studio and remote operations and says, "There is often more subtlety and discernment required in outside reporting assignments than in studio work" although it would not appear that way to the viewer.

Camera Stays Put

HE cites the fact that early (and not so early) television sports directors sometimes thought they'd pull quite a coup by placing a camera at either side of the football field, to let the privileged TV spectator see the play from both rooting sections.

This led, naturally, to the ball carriers running lickety split down the field in one direction and then running right back again when the cameras changed. The TV camera now stays put at football games.

The director must judge when to turn the camera on the spectators—an event at Ebbits Field is covered with more attention to the colorful spectators than games in more staid locales.

At horse races, the camera does its best to promenade to the paddock and the ticket window between races, just as the spectator at the track would do.

Camera CAN Lie

IN matters of sports and news coverage, Miner feels that TV offers "just as adult and mature reporting as radio and newspapers do." All reports that "the camera does not lie," to the contrary, he claims "You can falsify with a camera to beat the band.'

CBS television coverage of the party conventions in Philadelphia was "witty and conformed to a high standard," explains Miner but the producer could have editorialized easily by shooting details "which are a commentary in themselves." If a camera picks up yawning mouths, sleeping eyes or bored expressions of delegates during the speeches (and there are always some available) it can give an impression which may or may not be true. "It's easy to make an ugly event uglier," says Miner.

One director did a legitimate job of commenting with the camera, when he showed the feverish activity among the delegates of one State which was trying to get its favorite son nominated, and then peered around the rest of the hall which was quite, quite empty.

"The director has the same responsibility that a commentator has on radio," according to Miner, and he won't last long if he violates the trust put in him.

Sight Before Sound

TV IS learning to put sound second to sight in video programs, Miner says, although it came as shock to find that it was necessary. Because the eye is more sensitive than the ear, it doesn't pay to sacrifice a flexible picture setup in order to improve the sound. "Good sound will not save a bad picture," Miner emphasizes.

As for the picture, "moving is the important word," in Miner's opinion. "A still picture is a flat wheel. A man thinking on televison has more motion than a still picture of the Atlantic Fleet."

"Television positively is not just radio with sight added," he makes clear. The fact that television is "less evocative than a monosensitive medium" has really played hob with techniques which were used successfully on radio.

Musical bridges and the listener's imagination "pay an enormous part of the bill" in radio.

Adaptations Hard

TRYING to adapt radio scripts for television has posed a terrible problem for that reason. In radio, the hero could say some little thing and the music would swell up and take the action from there. On TV a musical crescendo doesn't cover up the fact that nothing very exciting is going on.

Experts Confused

THE what, how, where, when and how often aspects of programming television shows has even the experts confused.

After they get the what worked out, they have to decide whether to do it live or on film, whether to take it into your home or give you the "peeping Tom" view by having the performers ignore the camera.

Where? In a studio, on a stage? Or out among the people? CBS' "The Missus Goes A-Shopping" picked up tremendously in audience appeal just by moving out of the studio and into the grocery store.

Timing Important

TIME of day is important because a cooking show presumably is not of interest to an evening audience. However, current programming schedules (evenings mostly except for special events) necessarily puts some "morning shows" in the evening. Since the family usually sits down to the TV set for a full evening of pictures, it pains the stations to know they may send the audience to another channel by putting on just one sour 15-minute show.

Now often is the trickiest problem, Miner discovered. If a performer is selling something other than himself—whether it's cooking techniques, news or whatever—he is more durable than if he has only his own personality. "If you see a glamour girl every night of the week," suggests Miner, "by Friday you'll say, 'I'll take the elephants.' "

"I don't have the foggiest notion how often a personality can be repeated," admits Miner. "Radio seems to create the desire to hear a favorite star often. Sight destroys that desire."

Whether comedians like Benny and Allen will work out on a once-a-week basis remains to be seen, he says. On CBS' top rated TV variety show, "Toast of the Town," the emcee was chosen with deliberate care—not for his forceful and humorous personality, but for his lack of same. People can't get tired of Ed Sullivan as emcee, CBS figured, because he doesn't intrude too much into the show.

Toughest Job

VETERAN TELECASTER BOB EDGE, who currently is announcing Brooklyn Dodger home games over WCBS-TV, New York, finds basketball the most difficult sport to do on television—but it's one of his favorites. Edge, a former varsity cager for Brown, explains that in most sports you do a lot less talking and description for television than radio. Basketball requires as much or more.

"The television viewers," he says, "want you to name every player who handles the ball as it is zipped back and forth along the court. Then, with the present speed of the game, you often have 150 points scored by the two teams in 40 minutes of play in addition, you have to keep track of personal fouls, substitutions and a lot of other details."

D. C. Interviews Offered on Film

A PROGRAM originating in Washington is among the six shows being offered on film by NBC to its television affiliates not yet linked to the East Coast by cable or relay stations.

HARKNESS

Richard Harkness' "Story of the Week," an interview program with leading Government personalities, is being photographed off the kinescope or picture tube in New York for distribution on film around the country.

The show is picked up directly by a number of stations on the East Coast. WNBW originates it here, Wednesdays at 8:45 p. m.

Other shows, originating in New York, which are being given wider coverage with the film method, are: "Musical Miniatures," "Story of the Week," "Stop Me If You've Heard This One," "America Song," "Howdy Doody" and "Television Screen Magazine."

Robot Device Boosts Output Of TV Tubes

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 18.—An ingenious new automatic machine, installed on a cork "island" at the Lancaster plant of the RCA tube department, has further stepped up and mechanized the manufacture of 10-inch cathode-ray picture tubes for television which are already being mass-produced at the rate of one-a-minute on the conveyor-belt system stretching through the 7-acre plant.

The new "settling machine" is the critical point at which the luminescent or glowing picture face is applied to the television tube. The cork "island" on which the machine stands consists of thick "sandwiches" of cork and concrete designed to deaden and prevent vibrations from disturbing the critical process during which fine luminescent particles settle slowly through a watery solution to form a perfect coating on the tube face.

The first of three such machines scheduled to be installed as part of a recently announced million-dollar expansion at the Lancaster plant, the huge 3½-ton machine is so finely balanced on precision ball-bearings that it is propelled by a single ¼-horsepower electric motor.

Previously an operation performed by hand on each individual glass bulb and entailing numerous operations and delays between steps, the settling process has now been converted into a fully automatic procedure with only a single girl operator loading and unloading the new machine. Rate of production of the new machine, which has reduced spoilage to a minimum by eliminating human handling, is better than one a minute.

Disappearing Tub Solves a Tough Problem in Design

DuMont's designing staff was faced with a knotty problem in the design of two salon models, which house the 20-inch cathode-ray tube.

This problem consisted of devising a manner of effectively camouflaging the 20-inch tube in such a way as not to upset the symmetry or proportion of the cabinet.

The designers solved this with their "disappearing screen." The tube is mounted in the closed cabinet, in a vertical position. When the center portion of the lid is lifted, a patented motor-driven mechanism tilts the tube automatically into viewing position to provide the world's largest direct-view picture. The screen remains locked in that position until the viewers are through using the television section of the instrument. At that time raising the lid again automatically returns the viewing tube to its vertical position.

Miracle of Video Simply Explained

TELEVISION consists of the transmission of a picture or image from one place to another instantaneously.

Very briefly, it works like this:

The lens of a television camera, which starts the sending process by focusing on the image to be reproduced, is similar to that of an ordinary photographic camera. But the television camera has no film. Instead, it has a special tube (either an iconoscope or an image orthicon). The light from the object is focused through the lens on this tube.

Inside the iconoscope is a small metal plate, coated with half a million microscopic dots, each dot being a photoelectric cell. Whenever light strikes one of these cells, it becomes charged with electricity. The amount of light determines the electrical charge of each dot, so that the lights and darks of the object are created in a pattern of electrical charges.

Each of these microscopic "electric eyes" creates an electric impulse of its own. The impulse from these dots are broadcast through the air and are picked up on a receiving tube, called a kinescope, which reproduces the picture that they form.

Go in Single File

THE dots go out on the air in single file, like a telegraph message, and are picked up single file. This process is accomplished so fast that 30 pictures, each consisting of these hundreds of thousands of dots sent out individually, are reproduced each second. No action visible to the human eye is too fast to be reproduced by this process.

The process of taking these dots off the plate and putting them on the air can be roughly compared to a person reading a printed page. Starting from the left-hand top corner, he reads to the end of the line, then starts the next line, and so forth. In the iconoscope tube, an electronic "scanner" moves along the plate line by line from left to right, picking up the charges on the dots and sending them out in sequence.

The image which you see on a television screen consists of these millions of dots arranged in 525 horizontal lines. This is what is meant by 525-line definition.

The process of reproducing the picture signal that has been broadcast is, roughly, the reverse of the original process. The reproducing tube, the kinescope, has a face that is coated with a material that will emit light when hit by electrons. The face of this tube is the screen of the receiver on which you see the picture.

Signal Control Number

THE MORE electrons that hit the coating, the more light is emitted. The number of electrons that hit the coating is controlled by the transmitted signal in such a way that the charges on the pickup tube representing dark areas in the object will cause few electrons to hit the coating, so that little light is emitted. Conversely, the charges on the pickup tube that represent light areas in the object will make a large number of electrons hit the coating on the kinescope, causing a lot of light to be seen.

Thus the pattern of light and dark spots that is focused through the camera's lens onto the plate of the came.a tube is picked up, one dot at a time, sent through the air, and reproduced, again one dot at a time, on the receiver exactly as it appeared before the camera.

The process described above applies to the iconoscope camera, though the basic principles also hold true for the operation of the image orthicon. The iconoscope is the older and less sensitive of the two, having about the same sensitivity as motion picture film. The amount of light required ranges from 400 to 800 foot-candles. (A foot-candle is the amount of light striking a surface 1 foot from a candle.) The image orthicon requires only 50 foot-candles.

Orthicon the Quicker

THE iconoscope and image orthicon are used by NBC for studio programs. The image orthicon only is used for mobile pickup programs and other events outside of the television studios.

The television signal is carried by extremely short waves. Channels assigned to television by the FCC are in the 50 to 88 and 174 to 216 megacycle band. These signals do not follow the curvature of the earth like long-wave radio signals, nor can they be bounced off the ionosphere (an ionized layer of air many miles up) like shortwave radio signals. Therefore, the range of a television station's signal is normally limited by the horizon—in most cases this range is between 40 and 50 miles. Instances have been reported of video signals being picked up hundreds or sometimes thousands of miles from their point of origin, but these are freaks.

To take television programs beyond the horizon, two methods are now in practical use. One is radio relay, the other coaxial cable.

The radio relay system consists of relay stations placed within line-of-sight distance of each other over a given route. Each station picks up the signal from the one ahead of it and passes it on to the next in line.

The coaxial cable system uses a special type of cable, laid under ground, which is capable of carrying television signals. Ordinary telephone cable, which carries network radio programs, is not able to carry the wide-band television signal over long distances. This cable has been installed only by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., while this company and other common carriers, including Western Union and numerous broadcasters themselves, have already built radio relay stations.

Research Under Way

BOTH radio relay and coaxial cable are capable of carrying telephone calls, telegraph messages and other communications as well as television programs. The relative merits of each—their initial installation costs, their maintenance costs and the quality of their signals—are now being investigated by the networks and common carriers in order to determine which will in the long run be better and cheaper for television. It is probable that ultimately, when transcontinental networks have developed, they will consist of a combination of coaxial cable and radio relay.

Tele Expert Barges From Bar to Bar

HOWARD LEVIN, 33, of 98 Prospect Park S., Brooklyn, N. Y., has a job most men would envy. Levin spends his evenings going from bar to bar—and gets paid for it! Not bad, we say! Oh, for the life of a television service technician!

For you see, it's part of his job with DuMont television to check DuMont installations in taverns around town for proper location, and antenna troubles, even though DuMont does not do service work.

Another portion of his labors concerns the customers, themselves, checking to see that they tune in the sets properly, etc. Through his meanderings around the town's fleshpots, Levin has developed quite a philosophy and claims that while bars deserve a lusty assist in pioneering television, video has been one great big shot in the arm for them.

Sportscast Needed

IT TAKES a sports broadcast to get the customers in from the street, says Levin. Football and baseball lead in popularity and then come hockey and boxing. It's a horrible thought, he reports, but video is developing interest all over again in those odd gargoyles who bounce each other around wrestling rings.

Each sport attracts its own type of customer, he asserts, and he's learned to tell hockey night from wrestling just by looking at the audience. Football, baseball, and basketball crowds cheer lustily for their favorites and tense moments on the field create equally tense moments at the bar. "Sometimes, though," grins Levin, "they get so excited, they forget to drink."

Silent Watcher

LEVIN tells with some perplexity of a wrestling fan who appears on grunt-and-groan night, watches silently and then disappears like a homing pigeon, making for the roost.

The fan (addict would be a better term) walks in, eyes fixed on the screen, where two clumsy oafs are busy pounding each other on the jaw, sits down at the bar and says just one word, "beer," without taking his eyes off the screen. After that, whenever he wants a refill, he just pushes the empty glass toward the barkeep.

Funniest thing that ever happened? "That's easy," claims Levin. "One night in a west side tavern, while the bartender and customers were intent on the tele screen, two footpads quietly and efficiently cleared the saloon safe. The bartender's face was about as red as the cherry in the Manhattans he does a good job of making!"

What does Levin do on his night off? Uh, uh—you're wrong! He goes home! "Have to," he says, "before my wife, Roslyn, divorces me!" Besides, he doesn't drink!

TV Cameras to Cover Nine Redskin Games

WHEN the Washington Redskins meet the Chicago Bears in Baltimore today, WMAL and WMAL-TV will begin a series of 13 consecutive Sunday broadcasts and telecasts of top grid coverage. These include nine Redskin games. When the Skins are playing in the West, the station will, of course, broadcast on radio the Redskin game. When the Redskins engage Pittsburgh, Green Bay, Chicago and Boston, WMAL-TV cameras will cover the New York Giants. Of the nine telecast Redskin games, six will be played at Griffith Stadium, one at Baltimore, one at Philadelphia and another at the Polo Grounds.

The entire home and road schedule of the Marshallmen will be reported by Wismer with color by Jim Gibbons.

This is the first time in Washington that consecutive top game scheduling has made consistent TV coverage available. Since coaxial cable service (the lines carrying the television picture) will not be available during the 1948 pro grid season for four of the Skins' road games (from the Midwest and Boston), special arrangements have been made to offer unbroken TV coverage with the Giant games.

The sketch (right) gives some idea how the circuits work when WMAL covers a "remote," and especially Redskin football games.

Simultaneous coverage of pro football by television and radio was developed in Washington by WMAL-TV last year.

How It Works

BRIEFLY, Harry Wismer is heard on both WMAL and WMAL-TV with his play-by-play reports. His voice is piped into both the regular radio channel and the voice lines for television on Channel 7.

The photo above shows the camera, microphone and general radio set-up that Redskin fans in Griffith Stadium will see this year.

The diagram beneath, less the more complicated electronic graphs, will give an idea of how the announcer, Dean Luce, will watch the game on a television set and through headphones, receive his cues to give pre-game, half-time and time-out game color, statistics and commercial film cues. Luce's microphone and monitor set is shown at the left, with the engineer's control group.

The two image-orthicon (high quality lens and long range) cameras are shown in the same outdoor portion of the overhanging coop.

Where Things Start

WHEN Wismer is giving play-by-play action, let us say, and there is a time out called, Wismer may say, for example—"the ball is carried by Smith to the Cardinal 32-yard line, and time is called on the playing field."

This is where things start to happen. On this cue, Jim Gibbons goes to work chatting about the game with color and football dope. At the same cue, Dean Luce speaks into his TV michrophone to describe the picture before him on his TV monitor set for viewers of WMAL-TV.

Meantime, an intricately contrived mobile unit beneath the stadium contains the more delicate picture control equipment, power circuits and intercommunication network headquarters, so that producers, engineers, announcers, all hands are simultaneously advised of what is going on.

From the mobile truck unit the picture and voice circuits move via microwave transmitter and speech lines to studios in the Commonwealth building, thence to the transmitter tower at American University and on to the TV receivers of fans throughout the area. Meantime, the radio report is moving simultaneously to the network.

13 Channels for TV

A total of 13 channels within the 50 to 88 and 174 to 216 megacycle bands have been made available by the Federal Communications Commission exclusively for television use.

Receivers Find Many Uses

TELEVISION receivers find their way into a surprisingly diversified number of places. Among some reported are:

Doctor's and dentist's offices where patients' minds are taken off their ailments by a television receiver in the waiting room.

A currency exchange where a television receiver is used to prevent customers from leaving when the waiting line is long.

A ship where river pilots await assignments.

A trailer with a demountable, easily oriented antenna, and

Executive offices of a grocer supplier where television has been used as a means of entertaining and recapturing disgruntled customers.

The picture above was made about noon before a home game of the Redskins, with equipment in position for TV coverage. The sketch below indicates how the circuits will work while the television cameras follow the pigskin

CBS Chairman Believes:

Video's Chief Potential Lies in 'Informer' Role

By William S. Paley

TELEVISION'S evolution as a great popular form of entertainment seems inevitable. But, coincidentally, television is obliged to develop its rich potentials as a source of public information.

PALEY

Our world is faced with the necessity of making up its mind on perhaps the gravest issues in history. Civilization is confronted by complex questions, the answers to which may bring a brighter future—or possibly none at all.

In the atomic age, vast areas of ignorance and misunderstanding cannot be penetrated by the traditional slower methods of mass enlightenment. As an educational force with a clarity matched only by the speed of its dissemination, television has the opportunity to render its greatest service.

The assumption of such a self-imposed task entails a great responsibility for every broadcaster. His public will increasingly shape its opinions by what is seen and heard on television, and there can be little tolerance for mistakes. The public must be kept fully informed if we are to achieve the still remote blueprints of a democratic peace and equal opportunities for the pursuit of happiness.

Keener Insight

TELEVISION offers keener insight into facts and issues than printed or spoken words alone can provide; it also affords the audience a better evaluation of the people who expound ideas and policies. The knottiest human problems are characteristically of an impersonal nature. Hence, it becomes television's job to relate these problems by graphic means to every member of its audience while, at the same time, binding his destiny closer with that of his neighbor.

A major test of television's effectiveness has come, now that the political parties are presenting the merits of their candidates and platform. Political groups have devoted considerable strategy to preparing visual material and demonstrations suitable for the television camera in the hope of winning the electorate's favor. Television is certain to have a definite effect on the final tallies of ballot box and voting machine.

Television achieves a peculiar and unprecedented intimacy between speaker and listener, between program and audience. The addition of sight to sound introduces, in terms of tomorrow's mass circulation television industry, the challenge of inspection—inspection of entertainers, personalities, salesmen, politicians, special pleaders, savants, products, premises and promises. If tomorrow's politicians' words are honeyed and plausible, we shall know whether his facial expression contradicts them; we shall observe and judge his manners and manner.

Future Tense

MY enthusiasm for television is largely future tense, for no critical-minded broadcaster can be thoroughly satisfied with the current quality of television programs.

The problems of developing this new industry are so vast that I, for one, believe that any prophecy of great things to come should, at this stage of TV development, be tied carefully and closely, for the sake of realism, to a reminder of the unresolved problems.

In an enlightened land, the people can be counted upon to defend the just cause and abhor the lie. As in radio, any television broadcaster who tries to abuse the public faith placed in him will find the audience has a faculty for sensing mistreatment and, without public support, his station must be doomed to failure.

In short, public opinion is a vital force. It deserves and requires the best in television. Nothing less than that will satisfy the American people.

Civic Groups Take Bow in Hecht Telecast

THROUGH television, the Hecht Company is acquainting citizens of the Capital with their local civic organizations.

The program "Civic Washington Speaks" is seen on Station WNBW. The program is seen each Friday, 8:00-8:15 p. m., with announcer Verne Hansen interviewing guests for the week.

HANSEN

The weekly telecast features leaders from local government, citizens groups and civic organizations who discuss and demonstrate the part their organizations play in the life of the community. Leading off on the first program, September 3, was District Commissioner Guy Mason, who discussed the growth of the District of Columbia, using special motion picture films to demonstrate the increasing size of the city.

On the second program, September 10, members of the Silver Spring Board of Trade acquainted televiewers in other parts of Washington with the progress and continued expansion taking place in the outstanding Silver Spring suburban community.

Your Old Set Will Improve With Studios

By Wayne Oliver

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 18 (AP).—Folks who already have television sets and feel they can't afford to shell out for late models right now can cheer up. Their present sets probably will bring in better and better pictures as time goes by.

The improvements will come from better and higher powered transmitters, improved cameras and other equipment, better lighting and increased know-how on the broadcasting end.

Frank Folsom, executive vice president of Radio Corp. of America in charge of the RCA-Victor division, says advances in transmitting equipment "should provide better detail, more contrast and so on."

"There also will be programming improvements as studios improve camera techniques, props and lighting arrangements," he adds.

W. W. Watts, vice president in charge of the RCA-Victor engineering products department, says improved and better located transmitting antennas also will result in better pictures for present sets.

One of the biggest problems in putting the best possible pictures into receiving sets, he says, is educating station technicians in the use of the complicated broadcasting equipment. RCA already has held five seminars on television techniques for engineers from various stations throughout the country.

Watts discloses that one of the things RCA is working on is improved film television technique. Much attention has been devoted in the film industry to making pictures specifically to meet television's limitations. But Watts says it is hoped to improve things from the broadcasting end to get better quality from all telecasts of movies—even oldies made years ago.

College Games Added to Slate

WMAL-TV, which is carrying the Redskin football games Sundays during the fall season, has just added four Saturday collegiate games to its sports schedule, according to General Manager K. H. Berkeley.

Saturday the Navy-California game will be picked up from Baltimore, as will the Navy-Cornell game October 2.

From New York, WMAL-TV will take the Columbia-Penn game October 16 and the Columbia-Navy game November 13.

Plays to Be Telecast

CBS' New York television outlet plans to present scenes from current Broadway shows.

Terrific Impact of TV On Economy Foreseen

By Frank M. Folsom
Executive Vice President, Radio Corporation of America

TELEVISION, as a new industry and as a service with unprecedented force as a selling medium, will have a tremendous impact on the Nation's economy in the years ahead.

Between 1941 and 1947, the electronics business grew from a 300 million dollar size to 800 million. Dramatic as that growth is, it is already overshadowed by the growth of electronics' offspring, television.

In November, 1946, there were about 7000 television receivers in the hands of the public. Today ther are about 450,000, and before this year is over the industry should produce about 850,000 television receivers. As a conservative estimate, we can expect the industry to produce about 1,600,000 receivers in 1949.

In 1946 there were six television stations on the air. Currently there are 31 in operation, and before the year is over we can expect 68. Regional networks are now being built, and along the Eastern seaboard a network links Boston to Richmond. By the end of 1952 or early 1953 we can expect complete coast-to-coast networks to be in operation.

Late in 1946, the 7000 receivers in the hands of the public had a retail value of about $30,000. The retail value of television receivers to be produced during 1948 will be approximately 225 million dollars, and the retail value of receivers produced next year will reach somewhere around 450 million dollars. These figures represent receivers alone. Even larger will be the overall figures for the industry, including station equipment, network facilities and program costs.

Others to Benefit

WERE this growth to be self-contained in the television industry, it would still be impressive in itself; but it will also benefit many other industries. For example, suppliers of basic raw materials, such as iron laminations and glass. If the industry produces only 2,250,000 television receivers in 1948 and 1949, 16,875 tons of iron laminations will be required, while 11,250 tons of glass will be absorbed for the picture tubes needed. There is 10 times as much steel in a chassis base for television as in one for radio, and television calls for many times as much wire per set as radio, and more metal stampings, capacitors, springs and hardware.

Wood, paper, brass, copper, rubber and plastics, as well as iron and steel and glass, are among the basic raw materials used in large quantities by television. There are few fields of industry which, somewhere down the line, do not or will not feel the impact of television production. Its present economic effect is great, and its future economic effect will be tremendous.

Many other industries, aside from television and its suppliers, will benefit from the selling power of television. By the very nature of television to create a demand, through visual demonstrations, of American goods and services, it will exert an increasingly tremendous impact on raising the productive requirements of American industries. On the list of present advertisers on television, which already number over 300, are those who are consistently the Nation's leaders in advertising. The motor and tobacco companies, that big goods processing outfits and drug and cosmetic manufacturers, the dominant department stores in television cities, and the most alert of the other retailers, all have found television effective.

Bigger Than Radio

BECAUSE of rapid expansion, the many new manufacturers and the many other industries supplying television materials, it is difficult to compile accurately the total employment figure for television. Informed observers have predicted television will give employment to a quarter million people and attain a dollar volume of six billion dollars.

These quarter million people will include specialists in many fields. They will be salesmen and entertainers, factory workers and artists—people active directly in television and in the industries suppiying its needs. Surprisingly large numbers of people will derive a good part of their income directly or indirectly from television.

Television is not only great of itself, but great in its capacity to aid and strengthen the entire economic program of the Nation, all the way from producers of basic raw materials through the many manufacturers and advertisers benefiting from it, to the sellers of consumer products and services.

Television The Product Of Evolution

TELEVISION is not the invention of any one man. Its hall of fame lists many names because the medium was evolved, not invented.

Video's evolution began with such nineteenth century scientists as Heinrich Hertz, who observed that electrical impulses could be transmitted without wire, and includes today's Dr. Allen B. DuMont, credited with the commercial development of the cathode-ray tube, the medium of reproduction for television pictures.

One of video's earliest experimenters was Paul Nipkow, German physicist, who invented in 1884 the now obsolete scanning disc technique of televising an image. Though it was cumbersome, his method established the essentials of television and remained the only video system until the development of the cathode-ray technique.

It Needed Radio

BECAUSE Nipkow was ahead of his time, he was unable to create a practical television receiver or transmitter. Television awaited the development of a related science—radio. Radio was a laboratory phenomenon probed by such nineteenth century scientists as Hertz, Lodge and Maxwell, until it fired the imagination of Marconi.

In 1895, Marconi devised a transmitter capable of sending radio impulses several hundred yards. He developed the practical aspects of the bewildering new method of communication so rapidly, that by 1901 he had spanned the Atlantic Ocean by radio.

Another radio immortal is Lee DeForest, Chicago radio physicist, who invented the vacuum tube amplifier in 1906. This invention was to radio and television what the invention of powder was to the science of war.

DeForest showed men how to amplify and regulate electric currents in a vacuum tube, thereby making them powerful enough to be transmitted great distances. A complex adaption of the simple audion is the cathode-ray tube.

Crookes a Pioneer

PIONEER work on the cathode-ray tube was done by Sir William Crookes, English chemist, who died in 1919. His research into effects of electrical discharges through rarefied gases was used by others to develop the kinescope.

Starting in 1931, Dr. DuMont set to work harnessing the cathode-ray tube to the video medium. Bit by bit, a long-life cathode-ray tube was perfected and incorporated into oscillographs. The cathode-ray tube is a specialized vacuum tube which generates, focuses and directs a stream of electrons so that they impinge upon a fluorescent screen.

It was this cathode-ray tube that went into the commercially available television receiver produced by Dr. DuMont in 1939.

Important contributions to the television art and medium were made by many other independent experimenters including Philo T. Farnsworth.

Gene and Ed Can't Agree on the Rent

A BRIGHT new feature on WNBW is "Gene Archer's Music Shoppe," seen on channel four each Tuesday at 6:30 p. m.

Ed McIntyre, pianist, has emerged as a comedian in television. In addition to accompanying Archer, McIntyre plays the part of the owner of the building in which Gene's music shoppe is located. The squabbles between Gene and Ed about raising or lowering the rent, taking inventory, or getting rid of a carload of defective harmonicas, makes for an amusing video show in the early evening.

The program may soon be televised over the East Coast coaxial network which now stretches from Boston to Richmond.

Darkness Not Essential

Experts claim it is not necessary to darken a room to view a television program. Quality sets are designed to operate efficiently, with excellent picture definition, under normal home lighting conditions.

Audience Helps an Orphan Locate Her Only Relative

LORRAINE PROFIT'S search for a photo of her dead father and mother ended last Sunday, in Studio A of WABD, New York—Du Mont.

Twenty-one-year-old Lorraine Profit (known professionally as Lorraine Blake) left last November the New York orphanage that was her home for 20 years. Her father had died several years before in a veterans' hospital. The orphanage knew that he had a brother and a sister, but their efforts to trace them were fruitless.

Lorraine remembered that on her father's last visit to her at the orphanage he had shown her a photograph of himself and her mother. She wanted that photograph and thought that by locating her uncle and aunt she might also locate the photo.

She told her story to Archdale J. Jones and Val Lewis who originate and conduct the "Key to the Missing" program (WTTG, Sundays, 6:30 to 7 p. m.) The studio was bombarded with calls from people watching the show. With the aid of these the uncle, Carl Profit, was located in a matter of minutes.

On the telephone Lorraine's uncle told her: "I am very anxious to have you make your home with us. Your aunt died some time ago. We have a photograph of your mother and father. It is yours, of course." Carl Profit was unable to come to New York because of ill health, but a photograph of him, flashed from Baltimore, was developed before Lorraine's eyes.

Five More This Year

CBS-TV Aiming at 80 Cities

By Herbert V. Akerberg
CBS Vice President in Charge of Station Relations

CBS TELEVISION will be a reality in more than 80 cities and surrounding areas all across the country in the immediate future evolving through the next three years along a specifically projected route as the Nation's largest television network.

This may be a rather startling announcement to those who recall that CBS television—now linking New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston and Washington—was represented at the beginning of the year by one station—WCBS-TV, New York. It didn't just happen by accident.

The story of CBS experimenting, programming and technical developments over the past 17 years has been told many times, but let's look at the picture of CBS network television as it looks right now, and as it will look at the end of the year, the next year and the two years after that.

The CBS telecamera looks in on a cooking lesson

Five More This Year

RIGHT now the CBS Television Network, with headquarters in the Grand Central Terminal Building in New York—a studio plant which will be the largest in the country after reconstruction and expansion now under way—includes WCBS-TV, New York; WCAU-TV, Philadelphia; WMAR-TV, Baltimore, and working agreements with WHAC-TV, Boston, and WMAL-TV, Washington.

At this writing it can be stated that at least five more metropolitan areas will enjoy CBS television before the year is out: Toledo (WSPD-TV), Cleveland (WEWS-TV, Detroit (call letter to be assigned), Atlanta (WAGA-TV) and Los Angeles (KT-TV).

The presence of Los Angeles and Atlanta in the list prompts the question: Is transcontinental television broadcasting here? It is not, although it is on its way.

Until all CBS television stations are linked via coaxial cable or microwave relay in regional and coast-to-coast networks, CBS television will supply both sponsored and sustaining programs on 16mm. film, utilizing Kinescope monitoring and photographing equipment, the latest and best available. In simple language, this means making films right off the tube, as the broadcast appears on the "screen" of the television receiver.

This film service will provide television to communities awaiting coaxial cable or microwave relay systems.

Owners Won't Care

A GOOD deal has been written about coaxial cable and microwave relay. Either system is practical and both can be used in any size network. Which one is used is determined by technical factors. From the viewpoint of the television set owner, it makes no difference.

But to get back to the CBS television network:

In 1949, at least 25 more stations will join the CBS television family; in 1950, some 36 are scheduled to come in; in 1951, about 19 more.

This by no means represents a ceiling on CBS networth expansion. It is what we can now look at in black and white. The great majority of these stations will be television outlets of present CBS AM radio affiliates, with whom negotiations to enter the television network were conducted as long as five years ago.

The question comes up, what kind of television will be available for communities waiting to be linked by cable or microwave? They'll have everything the linked stations have within 24 hours after it first is shown.

For example: Suppose Philadelphia is feeding the network a presidential convention and there's no way of showing it on an isolated station or group of regionally linked stations. The Kinescope technique comes into the breach, and films are flown.

As for regularly scheduled broadcasts, what will happen is this: The entire day's sustaining programs on a network-linked station will be filmed, each day, and flown to the temporarily isolated station or regional network.

No Network Bounds

CBS HAS evolved another use of film for sponsored shows. Suppose, for example, Lipton's Tea is sponsoring an Arthur Godfrey show on television, and it wants it shown on every television station in the country. No problem at all, CBS simply makes the entire show available to every television station—in or out of its network. We have commercial film agreements with practically every television station in the country.

An interesting development in CBS television is its association with great metropolitan newspapers. Cleveland's WEWS-TV is allied with Scripps-Howard, CBS has applied for FCC permission to acquire a 49 per cent interest in the Los Angeles Times television station, and in Washington The Washington Post has made application to purchase 55 per cent of CBS-WTOP.

Our Eastern Seaboard coaxial network, coming through Cleveland, Toledo and Detroit before the end of 1948, will hook up early next year with a regional microwave network connecting Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Dayton and Columbus. The majority of these stations are controlled by the leading newspapers in the communities, including the Louisville Courier-Journal, Cincinnati Times-Star, Dayton News, Columbus Dispatch, Ohio State Journal and Cleveland Press.

CBS has entered television applications for Columbia-owned outlets in Boston, Chicago and San Francisco. WCBS-TV, at New York, headquarters is Columbia-owned.

Football Prospects

READERS would like to know how the CBS cross-country setup will affect the local television picture, aside from the big news events that are bound to pop. Briefly, the prospects are exciting: The Kentucky Derby from Louisville, the auto races from Indianapolis, the National Air Races from Cleveland, the bowl games from various cities.

That's the CBS television network picture at this moment, with construction permits, grants and applications either approved by or on file with the Federal Communications Commission.

Pieces Based on Bridge Book Syndicated

Five articles based on Fred L. Karpin's book, "The Point Count System of Bidding in Contract Bridge," have been syndicated to 500 newspapers by NEA Service.

Karpin conducts a weekly television program, "Winning Bridge Made Easy," on Station WTTG in Washington.

Early Camera Nearly Stopped the Show

In television's early days, before the time of the Image Orthicon pickup tube, cameras tended to distort colors. Red televised as a very pale color and blue as dark. As a result, performers wore bluish lipsticks and great care had to be taken in costuming.

Once a show was nearly stopped because of red's tendency to look very light. The actresses were wearing pink bathing suits!

Built-In Telesets Given Credit in Home Sales

Mrs. Melvyn L. Kraft tunes in her favorite video program on the built-in television set installed in the basement rumpus room of a furnished model home at 1002 Merrimac st., Pinewood subdivision, off New Hampshire ave. extended

By Conrad P. Harness

BUILT-IN television sets have been added to the "plus" features—such as picture windows, dish washers and garbage disposal units—with which builders have been tempting prospective home buyers.

One local firm, Kraft Builders, Inc., has struck pay dirt with the idea. One of the participating members in the "Homes of '48" exhibition of new furnished houses now under way, the firm reports that overflow crowds have visited its project every day to see the "television home."

Several homes have been sold since the exhibit opened last Sunday, Melvin Kraft reported yesterday. He gave much of the credit to his novel television installation.

"Visitors who arrive at night invariably stay for hours to watch the television programs," he added. "The kids are such staunch television fans that their parents can't drag them away. Everyone has a wonderful time."

Kraft has two different types of installations. One is in the basement recreation room of a two-story Colonial residence. The other is built in the living room wall of a Cape Cod 1½-story home. Interior wiring is hidden inside the walls. The conventional roof antenna installation is used.

Kraft reported that reception is good in both the living room and basement.

Future Possibilities

THERE have been no "electronic dream houses" built for sale in this area so far. However, the time may not be far off. Such a home of the future has already been erected in Connecticut.

Of conventional structure, it included these conveniences:

1. Electric eyes with light-sensitive photo-cells which can open garage doors, switch on lights, announce the approach of visitors.
2. Mailbox alarms which go off when postman deposits mail.
3. Television, FM and AM intercommunicating sets.
4. Induction heating which produces a hot current induced directly in utensils or food itself, giving fast and efficient cooking.

The designer of the above house, Dr. O. H. Caldwell, editor of Radio and Television Retailing, lists the following possibilities for the electronic home of the future:

Photo-electric shingles to capture energy from the sun, store it and supply all lighting, cooking and heating needs.

Electrostatic vacuum cleaner with high-voltage plates to attract dust and dirt.

Two types of ionization of air in the home. The "negative" type would stimulate, to pep up an evening party. "Positive" ionization would act as a sedative to make guests sleepy and anxious to go home.

A home radio printing press would deliver printed pages off a teletype machine which could reproduce pictures, headlines, etc.

Phosphorescent wallpaper and carpets would absorb light in the daytime, glow all night dimly to protect toes, shins and tempers.

Radio phone would connect with owners' car and plan, with a wave length for every household.

Radio-set indicator would show the kind of program on different stations, turning itself on automatically to announce important news.

Fantastic? That's what your grandparents would have thought of television.

The Screwballs Are Generous With Notions for Television

By Aline Mosby

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 18.—One of television's troubles comes from people who want to improve video by putting on their famous acts.

To date none of their suggestions has reached the cameras, the television people being firm in turning them down. These brain children are hereby presented on the theory that such labors of mind should not go unsung.

First, there is a lady who knows about birds. Furthermore, she thinks she looks like one. She told one television station she would dress up in feathers and imitate bird calls.

Then there's the guy who wishes to prove, on television, how strong he is. While citizens gape at their living room sets, an assistant would plunk a paving stone on the man's noggin and bong the stone in two with a sledge hammer.

Jim Moran, the famed screwball who hatched an ostrich egg and sold iceboxes to Eskimos, offered television an idea that had staggering possibilities. He wishes to hypnotize by television.

"In five minutes," says Jim, "I could have television watchers falling off bar stools all over town."

While the audience is asleep, Jim hopes to give it a posthypnotic suggestion about the sponsor's product. In other words, when you wake up you have an unconotrollable impulse to rush out to buy Scratchies, the new cereal, etc. He says he could dispose of a surplus crop, such as apples, by hypnotizing people into an appetite for same.

Another idea man noticed that bar customers bet as to whodunit on a television armchair detective show. He suggested to the master of ceremonies, Mike Stokey, that the program put a toteboard on the screen and collect a percentage of the bets from the bars.

One woman couldn't understand why a station didn't want to televise her ladies aid meeting; another wanted to put on a taffy-pull show.

A television program manager was besieged for days by a man with a flea circus. The fleas, he said, walked tightropes and boxed and would be fine video entertainment. We can hardly see the human beings on our television set now, let alone fleas.

An idea for solving the world's ills was offered by a youth who said he was a genius. He said he could straighten out everything if he could just talk to people on television every night.

Lokanatha, the Buddhist from Burma via Brooklyn, who fasted in Valentino's home here, wished to conduct mass services on television. The three television stations, which among them have turned down eleven similar requests for revival meetings, said no.

'Amateur Hour' Makes History

Several "firsts" were established when Old Gold signed with the Du Mont television network to sponsor the "Original Amateur Hour" on a coast-to-coast television network, starting Sunday, September 26, 7 to 8 p. m., Eastern standard time. The contract is for five years.

At the same time Old Gold has contracted to sponsor the "amateur hour" on the American Broadcasting Co.'s full radio network starting Wednesday, September 29, 8 to 9 p. m., Eastern standard time.

It is the first time in video history that a major commercial series has been broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

Also, for the first time in the history of radio and television the same program has been signed by a sponsor to be carried by both media on long-term contracts.

It is the first time that a major television program has been adapted for radio. Usually the reverse is true.

Decade of Telecasts

On June 7, 1948, a full decade will have passed since NBC telecast scenes from a Broadway play —"Susan and God" starring Gertrude Lawrence—from Radio City studios.

AM Circuits On Video May Be Eliminated

AN IMPORTANT factor in the future reduction of price of television units will be the gradual elimination of AM radio circuits within those units because of the growth of FM radio.

Now that FM radio parallels standard broadcast programs without duplication of talent, a device, patented by Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Inc., called the "Inputuner" provides for simplified tuning of all television and radio channels. It provides for uninterrupted tuning from 44 to 216 megacycles and eliminates the troublesome switching in the tuning circuits.

In New York, almost all important broadcasting stations parallel their programs over FM and this situation is rapidly becoming countrywide.

With the continued growth of FM, the Inputuner assumes greater and greater importance. Because of this, it is conceivable that in the future there will be no necessity of including a standard broadcast receiver in production models. With the Inputuner, all important radio programs will be available immediately over FM.

Elimination of the AM radio units will, of course, bring down costs, eliminate steps in the production line and pass on the resultant savings to the ultimate consumer.

Better to Enter TV On the Tandem

IT'S 10 years since Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, noted consulting engineer, gave the following advice to persons thinking of television as a career:

"Don't push and run—walk; and watch where you are going. Speed in rushing into the field will not be nearly so helpful as first knowing where your abilities lie, cultivating those abilities by training in fields similar to television, and then everlastingly sticking to the job of perfecting your talents and their application once you have entered the television field.

"Remember that television success will come rather as the result of a prolonged marathon of effort than from a brief gold-rush of enthusiasm."

Those lines, written for Occupations, the Vocational Guidance Magazine, in April 1938, seem to have application just as pointedly in 1948.

Little Chance to Hide Mishaps on TV Shov

MOTION is what they are after, but commotion is what they sometimes get. Even on the best regulated television shows, not all is necessarily perfect, and the problem is whether the audience should officially be let in on the wide-open secret.

MRS. MARKEL

Hazel Kenyon Markel, who has an interview-type show on WTTG Tuesdays at 7:30 p. m., has come to the conclusion that the audience most certainly sees the little emergencies as they arise and that it is self-delusion to suppose you can cover up by ignoring them.

In fact, the audience is apt to wonder if you are quite bright if a shelf of pottery crashes to the floor in plain sight and sound of everybody, and you ignore it on the screen, she figures.

The 'Cough Button'

THE habit of trying to gloss over unexpected crises in the studio by pretending they never happened, comes from radio practice, suggests Mrs. Markel, who is new to television but does several radio shows a week on WTOP where she is public relations director.

A good many of the stories about people dumping glasses of ice water in their laps during a radio show, etc., are quite true. "However, anything but a vocal error can be covered up on radio," says Mrs. Markel. There is even a "cough button" available to kill the microphone temporarily while gasping, choking or sputtering. But on television, the camera sees all.

"On the stage it's normal procedure to accept whatever happens and incorporate it into the action or dialogue," she points out, "but radio experience makes us forget that."

Harder to Time

TV SHOWS are harder to time than air shows, and performers cannot see the studio clock or even their own watches without being obvious, yet in this circumstance in which they most need guidance from the emcee, they are least able to get it. "In radio the moderator or emcee keeps his eyes glued to a stop watch and signals guests any way he can think of short of putting his hands over their mouth. On TV even the emcee doesn't know what time it is. I am lucky if I get one glimpse of the studio clock during my half-hour show," Mrs. Markel sighs.

Kicking guests under the table doesn't pay even when it's possible, she says, because if people get a signal they do not thoroughly understand they acquire a glazed expression and lose track of what they are saying.

"Only once have I been able to signal a guest," Mrs. Markel claims. "One of my lady guests started to leave prematurely and I was able to put my hand on her arm to detain her."

Even her professional associates on the show, Don Roper, who presumably is alert to any kind of signal thrown him, has to make what he can out of beseeching but ambiguous expressions in the Markel eyes.

"It's very funny and very frustrating," admits Mrs. Markel.

'How Did I Look?'

TV has another frustrating aspect. "We never get to see ourselves on television so we are always collaring people after the show and begging them to criticize so we can improve ourselves," she says. On radio where transcriptions are inexpensive and easy to make, they are able to go in for self-criticism.

"I have a new lipstick called 'Television Red' and I can't wear it because I can't tell in advance how it will look," she explains.

"After a television show is over you wonder how people can possibly get nervous about a radio broadcast," declares Mrs. Markel.

Shows Demand Varied Handling

THERE ARE THREE main types of television programs—studio, film and remote. The first originate in the studio, film programs are projected from a standard motion picture camera, and remote programs are made outside of the studio by a specially trained crew working with a mobile unit.

NBC now has two major studios devoted exclusively to live television shows. These are in the RCA Building, New York.

The newer of them, officially opened for full-time use last April 22, is modern and completely equipped.

In addition, NBC employs several of its larger broadcast studios for pickups of programs which are being simultaneously broadcast and televised.

In studio programs, three or four cameras are used. The director sits in a control booth overlooking the studio on the floor below. He sees the studio action as images from the cameras that are shown on two or more screens in front of him.

Several Views at Once

THE screens are arranged in a row. The one at the left, called the monitor screen, always shows the picture that is being broadcast. The others are preview screens, showing the pictures that the other cameras, not at the time on the air, are registering. Thus the director knows at all times not only what is going out on the air but also what is ready to go out.

Next to the director in the control booth sits the technical director. It is his job to relay the orders of the director to the cameramen and crew on the stage, and to push the buttons on the board in front of him that control the various pictures on the three screens.

There are many different types of studio programs—variety, dramatic, quiz, religious, musical and so forth. The amount of time necessary to rehearse each type varies greatly. Some types of shows have no rehearsals. In general, an hour-long dramatic show requires in the neighborhood of 8 to 10 hours of rehearsal in the studio before the cameras. Before it is rehearsed with cameras, of course, there have been many hours of "dry rehearsals" outside of the studio.

Makeup Is Light

IT IS A GENERAL conception that television actors are required to wear heavier and more extreme makeup than motion picture or stage actors. This is false. Makeup on television is, if anything, less exaggerated than either stage or movie makeup. In the old days of the medium, when the cameras were less sensitive and the lighting inadequate, wierd makeup was necessary to give normal effects. But with modern cameras and lighting, a minimum of makeup is used.

NBC has two mobile units, each a completely equipped studio in itself. These units are capable of making pickups from any location which is either connected to the television transmitter by coaxial cable or is within line-of-sight distance from the transmitter. That is, the program picked up by the mobile unit is sent to the transmitter there to be broadcast.

Every field pickup represents an individual problem for both the program men and the engineers and must be surveyed in advance by the program director and the engineering director. A complete survey, dealing with such problems as lighting, camera positions, transmission facilities and so forth, takes two to three hours.

Location Varies

THE location of the control booth for a mobile pickup varies. The mobile unit trucks have all facilities necessary for use as control booths if necessary, and they often are used in this way. But sometimes it is easier to install the equipment in a special room at the pickup location and use this room as the control booth.

Film programs are to television what recorded programs are to radio. Once made, they can be put on the air with a minimum of equipment, can be used indefinitely and can be syndicated to many stations throughout the coutry.

The airing of a film program is a very simple affair. The lens of the motion picture projector simply focussed on the lens of a regular television camera, and the picture then goes out on the air just as it goes on the screen of a movie house.

Transition Unnoticeable

FILMS can be used either as full programs, or to provide the commercial portions of live studio or remote shows, or to provide special effects for such shows. It is a simple matter for the studio or field director to cue back to the film studio whenever a filmed insert is required during a live program. The transition from live to film and back again is not noticeable to the viewing audience.

One advantage that television has over other methods of film exhibition lies in the fact that motion pictures on television can be shown in negative, rather than positive, form. This means that precious time can be saved in the processing of newsreels for exhibition that would be lost if, as in the case of regular movie showings, the film had to be printed in positive after it has been developed into negative.

TV Queries With Replies

QUESTION—How does television operate?

Answer—An electronic television camera photographs what it "sees" and sends pictures with sounds out on the air. This is then picked up by a television reciver and the same pictures are recreated on the screen of the television set.

Q—What is "video"?

A—This term is sometimes used in place of the word television. Technically, it refers to that portion of the television signal that contains the television picture.

Q—How good is television sound?

A—Television sound is FM (Frequency Modulation). It means virtually static-free reception—startlingly realistic.

Q—How much does it cost to operate a television set?

A—Television sets usually cost less than 1 cent an hour to operate.

Q—How good are television pictures?

A—So bright you can see them with room lights on; so steady they're as good as home movies.

Q—Can I attach my present radio to a television set?

A—No. Radio and television are two entirely different things. They are broadcast at different wave lengths. Separate types of equipment are needed for the transmission and reception of each.

Q—Will the big-time radio stars and programs appear on television?

A—Some of them have, and more of them will. New faces probably will replace some of our favorites, as happened in the change from silent movies to talkies.

Q—Do I actually see the event as it is happening?

A—Yes, usually. In addition to "live" telecasts, films are used to record programs so that they can be presented at hours convenient to you.

Q—What kind of programs can I get on television?

A—There's something for everybody—from quiz programs and football games to such special events as the opening of Congress.

Q—How many stations can I get on a television set?

A—You can pick up all the television stations within receiving range of your home. Generally, you can receive a station 30 to 40 miles from your home, providing you have an efficient receiver and antenna.

Q—Why is the range of a television station less than that of many standard radio stations?

A—Because the electromagnetic waves used in television broadcasting travel in a straight line. When they reach the horizon they continue out into space. They are not "bounced back" by the upper layers of the atmosphere as in the case of standard radio waves.

Q—Must I have a special antenna for a television set?

A—Yes. Attention to the antenna will pay dividends. So will expert installation.

Q—How about color television? What will happen to my set then?

A—Present indications are that color television, at prices and with quality comparable with regular television sets, is still some years away.

A-Bomb Program Alarms Audience

Dr. Roy K. Marshall tries to make science sound simple on his weekly television programs over NBC from Philadelphia, but some in his audience thought he overdid it in a program on atomic energy. A number of alarmed viewers wrote and telephoned the Atomic Energy Commission that he had given away the secret of the atom bomb. Some also said he had exploded an atom bomb on television.

After a review of what Dr. Marshall has said and illustrated on the program, the commission wrote him that he had "in no way violated security" and such information helped the public understand atomic energy.

Thus Dr. Marshall became a sort of "Orson Welles of television"—although with a program on atomic energy rather than an imaginary invasion from Mars.

Television Seen Aiding Public Enlightenment

David Sarnoff, president and chairman of the board of the Radio Corp. of America, recently pointed out that television opens an era of more enlightened public opinion.

"The people," he declared, "will be more adequately informed on issues confronting the country. They will see their legislators in action. The logic of an argument is vastly more effective when it is presented by words and pictures than by words alone."

AFM Ban Lifted

In 1945 the American Federation of Musicians, which had previously allowed the performance of its members before television cameras, invoked a ban against such appearances. For the next three years all music on television was recorded music. The ban was lifted March 16, 1948.

Sullivan Revue Gets a Sponsor

The June Taylor Chorus, recruited from the ranks of 52nd Street's beauty-and-talent packed entertainment world, is seen every Sunday night on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town." It claims to be television's first permanent chorus line. Joe Howard, venerable song writer and showman, is in center

THE hit revue, "Toast of the Town," CBS-TV, will be sponsored by the Emerson Radio & Phonograph Corp. beginning tonight, 9-10 o'clock EST (WMAL-TV). The series has the largest audience in all television today, according to the New York Pulse Tele-report for August and according to the Hooper Teleratings in August.

Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, the New York Yankees' Joe DiMaggio and other celebrities in the studio audience will be picked up.

The first sponsored broadcast will be marked by the return of two hit acts: Comedian Benny Rubin, and Dewey Marchand and his troupe of Negro actors from Harlem.

Other acts will be Louis Jordan and his band; Mellie Arnaut and Brothers, bird impersonators and acrobats; the Yoemen Brothers and Frances, a singing group with accordion and clarinet accompaniment, and a ballerina appearing with the June Taylor chorus, the first "permanent chorus line in television."

Ed Sullivan, newspaper columnist, will continue as master of ceremonies.

Ray Bloch conducts the program's 15-piece orchestra. The program director is Roland (Bill) Gillett. Marlo Lewis is coproducer with Ed Sullivan.

BLOCH AND SULLIVAN

Medicine Taught by Television

THE LARGEST medical classroom in the world was made possible by television for the American Medical Association's Ninety-seventh Convention in Chicago.

For five days, Northwestern University brought medical education, through television, to the 12,000 physicians and surgeons attending the convention. Not only these men, but also students in the Northwestern medical school, were served through the video setup, the first major demonstration of television as a medical educational medium.

Cooperating with the university in the June program of surgical procedures and clinical demonstrations were E. R. Squibb & Sons, the RCA Victor Division of the Radio Corp. of America, Passavant Hospital, a Northwestern affiliate, and the A.M.A.

Special Wave Length

THE HOSPITAL'S surgical amphitheaters and other facilities were used exclusively throughout the five days of broadcasts, which were beamed from the transmitter atop Passavant on a special wave length to convention rooms on Navy Pier, in the Sheraton Hotel, and to classrooms of the medical school in the Montgomery Ward Building and in Passavan itself. The special wave length prohibited reception on television sets in homes and clubs.

A staff numbering more than 90 was involved in the television presentation: 16 engineers, 4 supervisors, 40 doctors, 12 nurses, 6 interns, and 4 hospital residents. Sixty RCA Victor television receivers were used in the program, all but one of them with 15 by 20-inch screens. Each accommodated an audience of 100 doctors. One special screen, 6 by 8 feet was installed on the pier. This brought the programs to about 400 doctors at a time.

Four supersensitive RCA Image Orthicon cameras were used, one above each of the two operating tables, the third for panorama purposes, and the fourth for lectures and demonstrations. A 16mm television projector and a slide projector also were employed in correlated demonstrations held both before and after television of surgical procedures. A control panel was situated centrally on the Passavant surgical amphitheater floor, allowing the demonstrating surgeon to interrupt the narrator's description and provide comment of his own as he operated.

The video camera reproduced not only clinical material in the fields of internal medicine, orthopedics, cancer, dermatology, endocrinology and neurology, but also photographed intricate surgery such a Caesarian section, the delicate "blue baby" operation and early skin grafting in severe burns, as well as hand and chest surgery.

Leaders Comment

ENABLING thousands to see procedures in the small surgical area during an operation, television was found to offer an educational advantage never before possible in usual teaching techniques, which permit the presence at the surgery table of only a limited number of observers, Northwestern reported.

Commenting on the experiment, Richard D. Vanderwarker, director of Passavant Hospital, said: "One of the important aspects of television as a teaching medium is the space and expense it will save in the hospitals of the future.

"Medical students will study surgery from a video screen in the same classroom in which they study other subjects," he predicted. "The traditional operating room galleries will be eliminated and the space used to better advantage."

Of television and its contribution to medical education, Dr. J. Roscoe Miller, dean of the Northwestern University medical school, declared: "A revolution in teaching methods is in sight. No longer will the physician and student be limited by too great separation from the subject, as they are now by observing from surgical amphitheater galleries. "With television, all students see exactly what the demonstrating surgeon wishes them to see. Nor is there any practical limit to the number of students who may benefit from each demonstration. The skills of the greatest teachers will be on view to vastly greater numbers of students. This is only one of the many potentialities of television in improving the teaching of medicine."

With the television camera focused directly and at close range on the surgical work which is the center of activity in this operating room at Passavant Hospital, Chicago, details of this and other operations were demonstrated for 12,000 doctors attending the 1948 convention of the AMA

Video Fans Can Expect Full Program of Sports

THE SPORTS fan with a television receiver today has his pick of the major sporting events, and as television spreads its network westward to meet the links coming East and up from the South, sports fans all over the country will be able to view sports classics wherever they originate.

Television's first commercial year, 1947, was a banner one for the sporting element. Television receiver owners along the Eastern Seaboard were grandstanders at the Dodgers-Yankees World Series, and ringsiders at the Louis-Walcott fight, though sitting miles away from the events. Television also provided complete sports coverage in local service areas.

One of last season's local sporting events that went national in its coverage was the football game between Army and Notre Dame at South Bend. Notre Dame Stadium can crowd in some 56,000 persons, only a handful of the many who clamored for tickets, but more than 175,000 were able to witness the classic by television.

Because of the intense interest centered on the game, RCA arranged for the placing of numerous television receivers at focal points on the campus.

Receivers were set up in the University Theater, gymnasium, infirmary, convent, Navy drill hall, Notre Dame field house, and other central locations, enabling some 5000 persons immediately outside the stadium to watch the game. A receiver was also placed in the stadium office to enable the business manager, gate keepers, and other stadium personnel, ordinarily unable to see the games to witness the classic.

In addition, more than a million sports enthusiasts along the Eastern Seaboard saw televised films of the game which were telecast from NBC's New York television station and relayed to outlets in New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Schenectady.

Fears that television may develop a new clique of living-room sports enthusiasts should be dispelled by the increasing attendance at sporting events according to network spokesmen, only does television whet the appetite of the fan and increase his desire to go out to the park and the arena to see the event and his favorite stars in person; it also recruits to the ranks of sports enthusiasts and borderline fans and the uninitiated who formerly believed they had no desire to root from the bleachers or balcony seat.

Many new fans, women especially, are getting their first real sampling of sports via television and learning what all the shouting is about. They too, with the advantages of their "grandstand seats" and closeup pictures of the best players in their fields in action, are getting an education in sports. And increasing number of them are coming out to the parks for the first time.

The adage that people only enjoy what they know and understand explains television's value to the sports gate, for the fan who has a television receiver in his home receives, via pictures and announcer, an education in sports that sends him out to the park as an expert who can understand, interpret, and thoroughly enjoy the event he is witnessing.

7-City Midwest Chain End East's Monopoly

The East's monopoly on network television ended this week as the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. completed tests on its seven-city Midwest hookup, which goes into operation immediately.

Two of the major broadcasting companies, NBC and ABC, start operations over the new facilities Monday. CBS, Dumont and Mutual plan to use them later in Midwest network operations. The A. T. & T. Bell system facilities connect St. Louis, Chicago, Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Buffalo.

Burns and Allen May Go on TV

George Burns, in the East on vacation, says he and his wife Gracie Allen have no immediate plans for a television show. But Burns says that if they do, it will be a show designed especially for television and not a telecast of their radio show. He thinks television is a separate medium in its own right that requires different treatment from either radio or the movies.

George and Gracie played vaudeville for seven years before becoming radio stars, but he doesn't think vaudeville will last on television. He gives this illustration to back up his belief: "In vaudeville, Gracie and I used the same act successfully for seven years but we played it at different theaters throughout the country. In television that act would be good for 17 minutes and no more—you'd spend your life savings in 17 minutes."

Actresses Got First Boost in Television

When RCA Victor's television barnstorming units present programs in nontelevision cities, they try to find excellent local talent. This has proved the launching of many television careers.

In fact, television has launched many careers in other entertainment fields. Greer Garson was found on British Broadcasting Co. television and Dorothy Hart ("Naked City"), Louise Horton ("Voice of the Turtle") and Bambi Linn (many Broadway productions) all were well known first in television.

How Video Is Put On Your Screen

A BOX SEAT at the ball park, a ring-side view at a boxing bout, a visit to the Capitol for a session of Congress—all are at one's command by the twist of the station selector switch on a television receiver.

The miracle of electronics makes it possible to be an eyewitness to distant events at the instant they occur, and with the immediacy that can be provided only by electrical waves that travel with the speed of light.

The essentials of how this is done are set forth in relatively simple terms by D. F. Schmit of Radio Corporation of America.

Television, or video signals, as they are known technically, which carry the picture information to the public, Schmit explains, are born within a television camera. The camera is composed of a television pickup tube, an optical system consisting of four lenses, and a viewfinder and focusing mechanism. The supersensitive image orthicon camera widely used today can operate in all weather conditions and its extreme sensitivity makes possible round-the-clock news coverage and pick-ups of outdoor sports events and special programs from theater, school and concert hall.

Focus Function

THE LENS system of the television pick-up camera resembles types used in conventional motion picture cameras. The function of the camera lens is to focus the light reflected from the scene to be televised on the photo-sensitive face of the electron tube known as the image orthicon. This tube translates the variations of light intensities into electric currents of varying magnitude. It is these fluctuating impulses, the video signals, which carry the picture information.

More specifically, this is how the video signals are produced.

As the light coming through the camera lens is focused on the photo-sensitive surface, or photocathode, electrons are given off from each pin-point area in proportion to the intensity of the light striking that particular area. These electrons strike a target located immediately behind the photocathode, and leave on the target a pattern of varying electrical charges which correspond to the pattern of light coming from the televised scene.

By means of a sweeping beam or pencil of electrons, which is shot from an electron gun located in the neck of the tube the target is scanned in a series of parallel lines, depositing at each point on the back of the target enough electrons to neutralize the charges.

The excess of electrons—those not deposited—return to the base of the tube. It is this returning beam, with information imposed on it by the varying losses of electrons, which is sent through a series of high-intensity amplifiers within the tube, and then carried outside the tube through the external pins at the base of the unit.

Sent to Transmitter

THIS video information from the pickup tube in the camera goes through a series of amplification, is monitored, and is then sent to the television transmitter, located either in an adjoining room or at some distance from the studio.

The transmitter is essentially two separate units, consisting of a sound transmitter and the picture transmitter. They operate as one unit, and radiate a composite signal on the very high-frequency channels, the 54-216 megacycle band.

The transmitter signals are fed to a special transmitting antenna called the super-turnstile, which has the special qualities of greatly increasing the radiated power and polarizing the outgoing waves in the horizontal plane. Used with a 5000-watt transmitter, the super-turnstile is thus able to radiate television signals with an effective power of about 20,000 watts, or enough to blanket New York City and its suburbs over a radius of at least 40 miles.

Video signals sent out by the television transmitter are complex in nature, carrying both picture and sound information in addition to special keying impulses, known as synchronization signals. The function of these signals is to keep the electron beam in the picture tube of the home television receiver in step with the scanning beam in the pick-up tube of the camera.

Signals Amplified

WHEN the transmitted television waves reach the home receiver, the speech and video signals are amplified and shunted into the necessary circuits. Sound goes into the audio amplifiers and speaker, video to the circuits which actuate and control the picture tube.

In the television receiver there is a funnel-shaped picture tube, the kinescope. This unravels the complex signals producing the television picture.

The neck of the kinescope has an electron gun similar to the one in the pickup tube. A stream of electrons shot from this gun bombards the face of the kinescope, which is coated with a luminescent compound possessing the property of emitting light when bombarded by electrons.

The intensity of the emitted light varies with the intensity of the impinging electron beam. Because the strength of the beam as it impinges at any point on the phosphor surface corresponds to the light intensity at the corresponding point on the light-sensitive plate of the camera tube, the resulting pattern of light and shadow on the picture tube reproduces the televised scene.

Multi Aerial Difficulties Now Allayed

ONE of television's most vexing problems—how to make physical arrangements for receptions of telecasts in multiple-family dwellings—apparently has been solved by the perfecting of master antennas for installation on apartment roofs.

In the hodge-podge development of video's earlier days, it was necessary for each tenant to place at least one antenna and run cables along the outside of the building to his suite.

Apartment owners objected in many cases to this practice as television grew in popularity and a large proportion of flat-dwellers wished to make similar provision for reception of pictures from the air.

Unsatisfactory Setup

NOT only was the location of a forest of antennas and connecting paraphernalia atop ornate apartments unsightly and a possible hazard to passers-by, but the individual installations were unsatisfactory to those sitting before the television screens.

Good reception requires a strong signal from the picture transmitter, and this necessitates connection to a correctly placed antenna. Antennas inadequately aligned with the transmitter or placed so as to offer interference to one resulted in poor performance for all.

The solution makes not only for far better reception, but meets the objections of apartment landlords. Since no city at present is permitted more than seven tele channels, only seven antennas would be needed, with one more to receive broadcasts of local FM stations.

Individual apartments are connected to the antennas by means of low-loss transmission line borne through conduits to the various suites, and each suite is equipped with a connection box similar to an ordinary wall outlet.

Orientation Important

THE antennas are oriented at the time of installation to give the best reception from each station in the vicinity. This may necessitate the slow rotation of each antenna through the 360 degrees of a circle. If satisfactory reception does not result, another spot on the roof must be chosen.

Because the telecast signal is considerably weakened between the antenna and individual receivers by electrical factors, it will be necessary in the cases of most apartments to connect each suite with a master amplifier.

The maximum number of receivers which can be connected to a distribution system is unlimited, since additional amplifiers can be added whenever needed.

It is foreseen that in future apartment building it will be standard practice to equip each suite for television reception, since this would be the most economical method.

First Metal Tube Now in Production

THE FIRST successful television receiving tube made of metal is being manufactured on a continous production basis by the Tel-O-Tube Corp. of America.

The firm, which has been making 10-inch and 15-inch all-glass tubes since early this year, has been experimenting with metal tubes for several months and is now in production on them at the rate of 100 a day.

Metal tubes have several advantages over those made entirely of glass, according to Samuel Kagan, president of Tel-O-Tube, but previous attempts to manufacture them in quantity have met with small success because of the difficulty of joining glass to metal to form an air-tight seal. Tel-O-Tube engineers have developed a permanent bond.

The metal tube will help relieve the shortage of large screen picture tubes which has threatened to curtail production of receiving sets in the face of rapidly growing demand. Only two companies—Corning and Libbey—make the glass blanks which are used in all-glass tubes, and they have been unable to supply the demand.

The major part of the outer shell or "envelope" of the new tube is a cone of spun chrome-steel alloy. Only the image screen and the neck or stem which houses the cathode-ray gun assembly are glass.

Advantages claimed for the metal tube include light weight—about one-sixth that of an all-glass tube of the same size; better shielding for the removal of ambient light; greater safety—the tube will not shatter if broken, and a larger and better scanning surface.

Lighting is of the greatest importance in television. There are batteries of lights everywhere in television studios. They are used for getting various effects in a telecast. Touring television students examining one of these batteries from a catwalk high above the studio floor here. A technician explains their operation and for what specific purpose they are employed

Large Screen Scores With Video Fans

IN DESIGNING a line of post-war television receivers, DuMont followed two basic ideas: receivers were to be equipped with large screens, and were to be of the direct-view type in which the television picture is seen on the picture tube itself and does not need various lens arrangements to throw a larger picture on the screen.

With this in mind, DuMont established 12 inches as the minimum diameter of the picture tube for the Dumont receiver. A tube of that size gives a picture of 72 square inches.

In establishing a 12-inch tube as the minimum, DuMont knew it would be sacrificing some quick sales. Surveys showed that the public was rapidly becoming television-minded. Many people had read about television; others had seen it demonstrated. Almost any type of receiver placed on the market would find eager buyers.

Although there were bigger profits to be made in the small screen field, DuMont now feels that experience has proved the wisdom of their large screen policy. Many of the people who bought the small screen receivers are now expressing their dissatisfaction by buying enlargers intended to increase the picture size to comfortable proportions. One prominent manufacturer has discontinued manufacture of the 7-inch picture tube which only gives a 22 square inch picture.

Since all television reception is originally direct-view in that the electronic energy is converted back to the original image by the cathode-ray tube, the very heart of the television receiver, the use of mirrors, magnifiers, and other enlarging devices tends to detract from the clarity and brightness of the picture.

While DuMont feels that it will ultimately be possible to develop projection sets which give pictures as good or practically as good as direct-view sets, there are still some problems to be solved.

1929 Demonstration

Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin demonstrated his all-electric television receiver using the Kinescope picture tube (which he developed) on November 18, 1929.

Barbara Marshall, vivacious little singer, scored an immediate success on "Musical Almanac." Television critics called her debut a "boon to video programming"

Video Unit May Be Focal Point of Room

IN THE colonial American home, the huge open fireplace was the center of attraction—the family gathering place where news, information, and entertainment were dispensed. Today, in modern America, the television receiver is talking on something of the function of the fireplace and is therefore developing as a decorative item of importance in the art of room arrangement.

This is the opinion of RCA Victor's stylists and designers—the men who create the company's various home television receivers.

Today's television receiver, like yesterday's fireplace, has become the most "looked-at" item in the living room, they point out, and it warrants the housewife's most careful selection to see that it blends with and becomes a part of her home's interior decoration.

If your living room is in period or traditional styling, you may select your television receiver from similar styles with the certainty that it will blend well with your setting, for designs of Chippendale, Hepplewhite, Duncan Phyfe, and other traditionals can be used together in good taste. Designers caution against placing a receiver of popular style in a traditional setting, because they believe the single unit would stand apart from other furnishings in the room and detract from the classical atmosphere.

The converse, however, is not true. If your room is done in popular, the addition of a traditional television receiver will add a richness and fullness to the setting, especially when the receiver is of like wood and finish.

Decide on Size

HAVING selected the design of the television receiver, the housewife must decide upon the size of cabinet that best suits her room. A small receiver is lost in a big room, and a large receiver is out of place in a small room. Generally speaking, the shopping housewife should be armed with the dimensions of the living room space she has selected for the receiver, so that she will have some idea as to the size of the receiver she is seeking. If her room is tiny, her answer may be a table model—or she may want to highlight a large room with a large console combination. Knowing the overall room dimensions will aid invaluably in the selection of the receiver.

Selection of the receiver accomplished, the next important step in decoration is the placing of the set in the room. The instrument will be the center of interest in the home, and, therefore, should be placed where it can be easily operated, and in a setting that provides ample and comfortable viewing space.

The receiver should be part of an arrangement with other related furniture pieces, not a solitary object against a wall or in a corner. Chairs, sofas, floor lamps, and tables should be grouped with the receiver to make a comfortable, natural ensemble, much in the way that the old wooden benches and rocking chairs were placed permanently around the colonial fireplace. Stylists believe a member of the family should be able to walk into the setting, tune in the receiver, take the nearest seat, and be within comfortable viewing distance of the screen—all this without walking around chairs, pushing aside tables, ducking under lamps.

IT IS important, when arranging the receiver, to consider the distance between the television screen and the seats that will be used by observers. If the television set is of the direct view type, with a 10-inch picture tube, the best viewing area is between 5 and 10 feet from the screen. If the set is the larger projection type, viewers should be from 6 to 15 feet away.

It is advisable to keep some room lights on when the television set is in operation, and to keep the screen no brighter than is required for good reception. The use of room lights in conjunction with the receiver tends to provide a pleasanter atmosphere and more comfortable viewing. A bright viewing screen in a pitch black room makes for a stark contrast that may have a tiring effect on the eyes. It is well to remember that today's technically improved receivers need not be viewed in darkness.

For the woman who favors a more elaborate installation and wants to completely personalize her television receiver, there is a trend toward building the receiver into the wall of the room, with the controls completely concealed and the screen decorated in harmony with the motif of the room setting. RCA Victor's "Clubman" unit, designed for this type of installation, made its commercial debut last year in the Television Lounge of New York's Sherry Netherland Hotel and has since been built into the walls of living rooms, dens, and rumpus rooms of a number of homes throughout the country.

Sports Event Is Toughest On Director

COVERING a sports event is one of the toughest assignments a television "remote" director can draw. He not only must have the skill required to handle the instruments of his trade, the television cameras, but he needs a very extensive knowledge of the particular sport that he is bringing to the video audience.

At least two, and often three or four cameras are used in picking up any sport. The director, perched in a little control room at the stadium or arena, must keep precise tabs on each of his cameras, for he is the man who decides what will be seen on the video screens. That's simple enough for a sport such as tennis or boxing, when all the action is concentrated in the small court or ring. When it comes to football or baseball, however, the going gets rough.

Any Monday-morning quarterback knows that a system of following the action by trying to follow the football seldom helps much for anyone but a gridiron expert. In these days of increasingly complicated spins, fakes and reverses, often the man you think is packing the pigskin has practically nothing to do with the play at all.

That's vexing enough for the average fan, who confuses nobody but himself, but several million people are depending on that television director to be focused on what is really going on.

All Over the Lot

EVEN more difficult than football is baseball. A grid tilt is restricted to some extent, but not so with the national game. Baseball has a habit of spreading all over the lot as soon as a ball is hit.

If the batter poles a long one out to right field, for instance, the television director is faced with the choice of following the ball as it goes to the outfield, thereby losing track of what is going on on the base paths, or training his cameras on the infield and forgetting what happens to the long fly.

The technique usually followed is to keep one camera on the ball for a brief moment after it is hit, and then to bring into play the other camera, which has been covering the base runners. Then back to No. 1 as the ball either drops to the ground or is snagged by a fielder.

Clearly this necessitates a good deal of plain old baseball savvy. It's tense, nerve-tingling work. On NBC's telecasts of the Giants' home day games, the director, Bill Graden, and his 12-man crew of cameramen, engineers and announcers are kept always on the jump.

Even when the pace isn't rapid they have no time to relax. A baseball game goes along in fits and starts, and one of the director's worries is to keep the television picture moving at a reasonable speed when action on the field has come to a halt.

Amusing Telefare

TV BASEBALL men keep their eyes peeled for anything that will make for amusing or interesting telefare. Sometimes they train their cameras on a couple of drunks beating each other over the head in the stands. That always livens up an otherwise dull stretch in a ball game.

That can be a ticklish point, however, for while it is true that fans surrender their right of privacy to a certain extent when they go to a ball park, the law is a little vague on the subject. So, although it may be perfectly legal to televise a fight that has broken out in the stands, directors don't linger on it too long. Too much emphasis might constitute an invasion of a right which the brawlers might remember the next day.

From this television antenna, on top of the Empire State Building, New York City, NBC sends out programs. The ring at the top broadcasts the sound on ultra-short waves, while the four arms send the pictures. The range limit is the point from which the antenna can be seen from the horizon, in this case 44 miles. However, greater range can be reached through relay stations, plus greater power for ultra-short wave broadcasting

Vanity—Thy Name Is What?

You Should See Males Slap On the Pancake!

BOB HANNUM, makeup director for television station WPIX (New York), said today that men are taking to makeup like ducks to water.

You see, men, like women, need makeup before the television camera. Otherwise neither sex would look human.

But you'd think men would slink into the studio scared to death of being rouged, powdered and painted. Oh, no.

"You should see the men slap on the pancake," Hannum said. "They really go for it.

"The girls, of course, are used to improving on nature and would just as soon use one kind of grease paint as another. It's the men who are having a field day."

Hannum, who dolls up at least 25 vain males a day for video, first gives them a good heavy makeup to hide their incipient beards.

For those with grey eyebrows he prescribes eyebrow pencil to give them eye allure. And he tells the men with not-so-clearly-defined lips they need lipstick so audiences can see their mouth.

Does he have to hog-tie them to make them take his advice? "Never," Hannum said.

They submit happily to being splattered.

Profile Conscious

AND don't think, girls, those big muscle boys aren't profile conscious. Hannum said they are always offering advice as to which side of their nose photographs best but on television it doesn't matter.

"The cameras cover a wide range because the individuals are always in motion," he said, "so the subject gets televised from every angle."

The boys who are pot-bellied and fair-skinned really take a beating. You can't do much for them. In the new camera medium, Hannum said, the men televise at least 10 pounds heavier and fair skin usually appears splotchy; it takes a lot of makeup to even out the color.

But the biggest headache is getting the gents to relax. Hannum said they are so vain they try to sit, walk and talk differently on video, usually looking so stiff and self-conscious it's impossible to televise them.

They've gotten around that somewhat by placing cigarettes and coffee at strategic spots in the camera area. By using one or both the boys are apt to forget themselves and start acting natural.

WHEN men ask how to prepare themselves for a television debut, Hannum tells them: "Shave right before the performance, comb your hair just as you always do, and don't wear black and white (it can cause a camera disturbance). Instead, wear two contrasting colors that will look like black and white on the screen."

The most telegenic man in television today, Hannum believes, is President Truman.

"He televises better than he actually looks," he said.

Set Shortage Is National Phenomenon

THE shortage of television sets available in Washington is part of a Nation-wide scarcity and is not expected to improve for some time, according to distributors of the major brands.

The enthusiasm for television in established TV markets, plus the drain on available sets being made by newly created markets, is complicating a situation already made serious enough by the difficulty in getting tubes for the sets.

With few factories able to provide the glass tubes, and material for filaments also scarce, there has even been a "black market" in tubes, according to one distributor.

Lower Bracket Affected

THE greatest demand and consequent shortage has been in the lower priced sets.

Irvin Dalo, sales manager for Southern Wholesalers, which distributes RCA sets, says there has been an increase in buying within the past few weeks, and he doubts if the factory can keep pace with the peak buying. In addition to trying to get the manufacturer to increase allotment for this area, Dalo has been picking up a few sets from markets where a scarcity of good programming has dampened the ardor of purchasers.

Joseph Zamoiski, who handles distribution for Philco sets here, predicts that the necessity for sidetracking sets for the seven new markets to be opened to TV in the next six months will keep the sets in short supply for six or seven months.

Truck Strike a Factor

BERNARD SALISBURY, sales manager for Emerson in Washington, explains that his problem has been further complicated by the trucking strike in New York, which held up sets which otherwise could have been shipped. Salisbury attributes some of the heavy demand lately to the fact that most sets have gone up in price and the remaining ones are expected to.

J. W. Belt, radio sales manager here for General Electric, says he has recently received a large shipment. However, some dealers who used to buy one or two sets at a time now buy 5, 10 or 25. Belt estimates he is doing three times his normal business in the table-model sets.

New Forest Growth

New York's roof-tops are displaying a growing forest of dipole television antennas. Two riders on the upper deck of a Fifth Avenue bus were observed craning their necks the other day to see who could count the most of them.

High Flying Video Really Gets Hot

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18 (AP).—Temperatures at 25,000 feet seldom climb above zero, but even so high-flying stratovision engines need special equipment to keep cool. Stratovision is an experimental method of sending television over long distance by airplane relay.

When the 5½ tons of electronic equipment aboard the plane is operating, so much heat is generated that cabin temperatures rise to 132 degrees Fahrenheit. With the flying air-conditioning system in operation, however, the cabin temperature is held down to a comfortable 70.

Engineers of the Glenn L. Martin Co. and the Western Electric Corp. are going ahead on joint plans to perfect the broadcasting of frequency modulation and television signals from a height of 25,000 feet. They need lighter equipment and a plane more economical to operate than the B-29 Boeing Superfortress now in use. B. E. Carroll, project officer of the Martin company, says a modified version of the Martin 202 may be the answer.

In recent tests with the B-29, signals were relayed over an area embracing nine States stretching from Port Huron, Mich., to the Atlantic Coast.

Video Can Also Wear a Sailor's Suit

THE hour-long demonstration of television's possible use to the Navy staged August 29 when scenes of a mock battle were transmitted from the U. S. S. Leyte 30 miles off the coast, is kind of parallel to a two-hour demonstration of airborne television given March 21, 1946 at the United States Naval Air Station at Anacostia.

Although both demonstrations were intended primarily for the benefit of military observers, they were open to the public. But what a difference in the public! The program from the Leyte was available to anybody with access to a TV set anywhere on the East Coast (and is now available on film for TV stations beyond the reach of NBC network operations.) The airborne demonstration was staged "publicly" after wartime restrictions were removed, for about 300 especially rounded-up spectators representing the press, radio and military groups.

"Block" and "Ring," as the two airborne systems were designated during the war, were stripped of their shrouds of secrecy before a group of highly impressed but at the same time bored civilian viewers, and the military men.

Tedious Viewing

ESSENTIALLY aerial photography, the demonstration made tedious viewing despite a quick moment of drama when one camera picked up a fire in a haystack.

But as a practical tool in time of war or peace, it was clearly remarkable.

Wartime uses predicted by the armed services for these flying transmitters include: observation of gunfire and reconnaissance, "eyes" in remote-controlled aircraft and surface craft, transmission of messages, maps and charts between ships and aircraft, observation of dangerous operations from a remote position, guidance of flying torpedoes, aerial bombs, etc., directing explosive-laden gliders, remote reading of meters during aircraft tests, and getting "eyewitness" information under conditions of space, speed or peril which would preclude other means.

Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, whose RCA laboratories worked with the Navy to develop airborne television, foresees innumerable peacetime possibilities including news coverage of unparalleled scope, reporting terrain and airport activity to incoming planes, keeping police traffic headquarters posted on changing conditions, increasing safety for hazardous scientific exploration and experiment.

Kamikazes Began It

AIRBORNE television had its inception as early as 1934 in the RCA laboratories when Dr. V. E. Zworykin heard that the Japanese were training suicide pilots. To provide mechanical eyes for flying torpedoes, Zworykin worked out a system of radio controls with an iconoscope or television camera.

By the end of the war RCA and the Navy had produced an airborne transmitter weighing only 50 pounds, which could be considered expensible, if necessary.

'The Battered Bride'

Today television features many of the Nation's foremost entertainers among its artists and serves as the stepping-stone to stardom for many. There was a time, however, when anyone available would be pressed into service in the studios.

For example, once a flustered amateur announcer, before the television cameras for the first time, described the next selection as being from "Smetana's famous opera, 'The Battered Bride.'"

At the 'Gate'

Promoters Say They're Being Hurt

and before television—all of those seats were gobbled up by a breathless public within half an hour after the windows opened.

NBC estimated the Louis-Walcott television audience at ten million. Even if that estimate was optimistic, that drop in general admission demand seems more than a mere coincidence.

A PHILADELPHIA promoter, name of Herman Taylor, had what he considered a disquieting experience with a championship match there last June. Taylor put on a windup with Lightweight Champ Ike Williams defending his crown against Beau Jack.

With the fight televised in Philadelphia (and that fact widely advertised by the brewery sponsoring the telecast) the gate receipts were a big disappointment to the promoter. And the general admission sale the night of the fight was less than 2,000.

Taylor related, sadly, "I expected a profit in the neighborhood of $50,000 but lost between $5,000 and $10,000. There's no longer any question about whether television cuts into a fight gate. It does—every time."

He added, "Never will I permit another of my fights to be televised unless the sponsor insures me against loss."

'Oughta Be a Law'

The District of Columbia Boxing Commission already envisions a serious decline in boxing receipts. It plans to ask Congress to draft a law that will enable the commission to receive 10 per cent of television fees.

Chairman Harvey L. Miller stated a belief that television will affect attendance adversely and thus cut the commission's revenue. He also foresees the day when fights may be held in special television studios.

Others in the sports field carefully are keeping one eye on the gate receipts and the other on television. Bert Bell, commissioner of the National Professional Football League, is on record as anticipating a ban on the televising of league contests.

"On cold and rainy days," Bell said, "people naturally will prefer sitting in warm rooms. Bad weather will hurt more and more as television grows."

Just where the television set owner comes in isn't quite clear. Doubtless, many bought their sets primarily to view the sporting events they may be deprived of one day. Certainly, much of the advertising has been slanted toward the sports-minded. Right now most of the set owners seem to feel that they are entitled to have the big events for free. And they are plenty miffed when some astute sports promoter doesn't provide them.

into thousands of living rooms. The telewriter's limitations are the same as the playwright's, but his script is good for no succession of performances. The monster must have new scripts at a frightening rate.

That all this growing dramatic television activity is being welcomed by the theater and its people goes without saying. The invaluable ANTA, though stymied by lack of funds, is being a clearing house in this, both to radio producers and its acting and writing associates.

Much to the fore, too, is good old NBC, whose TV web will soon have four big-time acting shows. Besides the Kraft hour on Wednesday evenings (WNBW, channel 4, 9 p. m.), NBC will have a weekly half-hour by Chevrolet beginning the 27th, a full hour for Philco, teamed with Actors Equity, beginning October 3, and the Theater Guild's second season to be announced shortly. Several more are in the works.

Teledramas

ON CBS, the Ford Theater will air monthly teledramas from Hollywood beginning October 17 and ABC will have a Sunday night series starting with tonight's "The Thousand Dollar Bill," starring David Wayne, on WMAL-TV, channel 7.

And this is, to be sure, only the third year of big-time television.

As the omniscient Variety has observed, it took commercial radio 10 years to develop its first full-hour, sponsored dramatic series, the Lux Radio Theater. Private enterprise has indeed been helping baby to walk, even though the writers may not always get their due for the big words they're teaching baby to say.

comedy film. A kinescope film (taken from the television tube) of the mock battle staged aboard the USS Leyte three weeks ago, will be aired. The first ever made from a carrier at sea, the telecast was watched in the NBC studios by a number of top-ranking naval officers who have since predicted that TV may play an important part in future naval warfare. A newsreel will follow the Leyte presentation.

WTTG On At 3

WTTG (channel 5) will come on the air at 3 p. m. with a representative sampling of its normal evening programs. Using Telescriptions (DuMont's version of the NBC kinescope pictures) WTTG will show recent productions of "Court of Current Issues" (this one on child discipline), "Key to the Missing" which comes on at 4, "Photographic Horizons" at 4:30, "The Alan Dale Show" at 5 and "Swinging into Sports" with Sarah Palfrey Cooke at 5:15.

Normal evening programming begins on two of the stations at 5:30 and on the third at 6.

In the event that there is a hot and histrionic hearing on Capitol Hill Monday morning, that will be substituted for the film shows originally planned. But in any case there will be some kind of interesting television entertainment available all day beginning at 10 in the morning, especially for your convenience in inspecting television sets at your dealers. Oh, sure, if you've already got a set you can peek, too.

WTTG Now Carrying All Colt Grid Games

Dumont's WTTG, Washington video station, is currently screening all games played by the Baltimore Colts of the All-America Conference.

The Colts' next home game is against Brooklyn on September 26. Bailey Goss, Baltimore sports announcer, is handling the games for WTTG.

plains, "they spend all day with a huge and talented technical crew to get 22 takes, out of which 18 will be entirely unusable. We just hope to get in a kindly light for part of the TV show."

In spite of that, Cooke has no difficulty getting speakers to appear on his television version of "People's Platform." "They just can't believe they're unphotogenic," he figures.

"It's funny," he says, "but they are willing to go on TV and play to a maximum of 500,000 people, although they sometimes refuse to go on the radio "People's Platform" which can be heard by one to four million people." (Cooke's radio and television versions of "People's Platform" are entirely separate, using different subjects and different speakers. Both are for CBS but the video show is not seen in Washington.)

Signaling Systems

THE ultimate system for signaling participant on TV that they are running over time or should butt in with a comment hasn't been worked out yet, but Cooke agrees you may as well speak up and be done with it when the situation gets confused. However, he once spent 15 minutes looking as if rigor mortis had set in one hand, lest the audience think CBS couldn't build a set that would stand by itself.

Estimating that he spends fully 10 times as long arranging a TV show as he does a radio show he calls television "a grateful medium which shows up everything you do and everything you don't do. It's the good thing about it and it's the curse."

Getting the participants relaxed enough to gesture naturally on the show is one of the major, albeit lighter, problems of the TV medium.

Just when you think you have them settled something happens, says Cooke. "One of the cameras which has been sitting on its haunches like a cat suddenly rises up and comes at the speaker, who naturally cringes and shrinks. Or a prop man for a neighboring set goes by carrying the Mayflower." These things are mildly disturbing.

Frames Without Lens

THE one "cosmetic" touch Cooke indulges in almost threw a lady participant into hysterics. To minimize the length of his face, Cooke wears glass frames although the lenses must be removed to prevent reflections from the lights. Just when Cooke had his guest calmed down despite the uproar and confusion in the studio, he put his fingers through what the lady had thought were glasses. "Convinced she was among insane asylum inmates, she went quietly to pieces."

Four-Day Seminar On Video Draws 40 Top Engineers

Forty of the Nation's leading technical experts exchanged ideas with the RCA television staff recently when a four-day seminar was held in Camden, N. J.

Thinking and planning for the future, the engineers discussed such matters as television station sites, installation layouts, propagation factors, transmitting equipment and antennas, color television and other problems confronting the industry. A visit to the television receiver assembly plant and a trip through the transmitter manufacturing plant and antenna testing site were conducted between seminar sessions.

On the final day, members of the group visited the RCA laboratories in Princeton, N. J.. A number of engineers from Washington attended.

Ten Cents a Look

Shortly after NBC installed its first television antenna atop the Empire State Building, telescope pitchmen on 42 st., showed close-ups of the aerial at 10 cents a look.

Tallest Transmitter

NBC and RCA selected the Empire State Building, world's tallest skyscraper, as site for a television transmitter in 1931. WNBT still operates from that spot.

Here Are Some Modeling 'Musts'

body. You'll look slimmer, neater, more graceful. Bend your wrists if you think of it.

If you stand during your bit on TV, keep your shoulders squared to the camera, but tilt your hips slightly. If you put one foot a bit ahead of the other, your hips will tilt automatically. This gives the delightful illusion of slim hips, especially if you keep those shoulders squared to the camera so that they look broader. Don't forget. Tilt!

Keep your feet close together. With feet apart you "broaden your base," a trick actors use to make them look heavier. Your hips look broader when your feet are apart, and your legs look fatter. Nuff said?

With feet close together and one slightly in front of the other, you are not only slim through the hips and neat around the feet, but you are ready to make a graceful turn if it is required of you. On the stage or the modeling platform, you may take a wide swinging turn—very effective to show off a full skirt. It's accomplished much the way you take a waltz turn.

But on TV, you will cover the tiny screen like a flurry of skirt (and hips) if you don't move in a small area. So try to move like the TV models do. With the left foot several inches ahead of the right, pivot around to the right

To turn in a small space, put one foot ahead of the other (knees overlapping slightly) and pivot on both toes without taking a step. You will finish in just the reverse of your starting position without leaving the spot you are on.

To turn back to the camera, move your rear foot a few inches ahead of the other, and complete the pivot turn. Easy does it; even the models lose their balance sometimes. Need I say that you must keep the hips tucked under for best results when you turn your back to the camera?

IF YOU get any choice in this—not that you are apt to do much walking in an interview—don't walk directly toward or directly across the camera. The models move at a slant with a "brush across" step, that brings them forward and across at the same time.

This step is hard to describe, but easy to do. Try walking ten steps north, facing west when you do it. Take a side step with your right foot aand then cross over with your left. This will ultimately bring you both sideways and forward. Note that at no time do you come directly at or across the camera, yet you are able to keep your smiling face—not to mention squared shoulders and tilted hips—in the camera throughout.

Glide when you walk. Move slowly, or else you'll bounce. Amateurs tend to move much too quickly on TV. Make whatever gestures you wish, slowly and deliberately. Avoid hesitant or abrupt motions.

When the time comes for you to speak, Miss Bell suggests you keep your mouth slightly pouted and shape your words well. Desirable as a smile is, avoid it when you are speaking; it makes you look strained.

All set? Chin up, tummy in, hips tilted a bit sideways? Remember that even experienced TV performers don't always know when the camera is on them, so mind your TV manners as long as you are on the set.

SONIA STEIN.

Connecticut towns come under study of student investigators

SOMETHING NEW WAS ADDED to the education of engineering students at Columbia University this summer.

In a unique session, the first of its kind in the country, 312 students, studying chemical, electrical, civil, industrial and mechanical engineering, went into three Connecticut towns—Thomaston, Litchfield and Torrington—and took them apart.

The idea, devised by the faculty of the School of Engineering, is part of the University's plan to make its engineering students aware of their responsibilities for the social and economic consequences of their professional activities.

Conducted House to House Surveys

In teams of about 100 each, students between their sophomore and junior years, went into the towns and did almost everything from riding garbage trucks to study garbage disposal methods, to making house to house surveys to determine the sources and disposal of family incomes.

One of the students, who left his ivory tower of pure theory for a down-to-earth look at a city's technological development and to study its social, economic and industrial life, was Jim Wilson, 21, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., a former naval aviation gunner. He is studying electrical engineering. Some of his activities on the survey are shown on this page.

The towns surveyed by Jim and fellow students were willing guinea pigs for the experiment. This winter, when the information has been correlated, it will be turned over, free of charge, to the towns.

Even though he is studying electrical engineering, work with a surveyor's transit was part of Wilson's training.

To collect information for survey, Wilson and another student visited an airplane parts manufacturing plant.

Local farm conditions and politics were discussed with Howard Bissell, farmer and First Selectman of Litchfield.

At blackboard, Wilson worked out engineering problem for students at Camp Columbia, Lakeside, Conn.

Work with a Connecticut Light and Power Co. line crew, doing repair job was a part of the five-week survey.

After each day's work, Wilson and other students returned to Camp Columbia, correlated findings. THE END.

Norman Vincent Peale

"... Change your thoughts and you change your world..."

MORE PERSONS are familiar with the crisp voice of urban Dr. Norman Vincent Peale than probably any clergyman in the country. In devoutly evangelical Marble Collegiate Church on New York's fashionable Fifth Avenue, he presides over an unique blend of down-to-earth gospel and modern science that gives religion a new and vigorous meaning to the thousands who jam the church every Sunday to hear his sermon, or to the mentally disturbed who daily visit his psycho-religious clinic.

A prolific writer as well as a moving speaker, Dr. Peale's audience is by no means limited to personal contact. His Saturday radio lectures, Art of Living, broadcast over NBC consistently command a high Hooper rating. His most recent book, A Guide to Confident Living, currently is on most best-seller lists.

"Change your thoughts," counsels Dr. Peale, "and you change your world." So important is this belief to the impressive 50-year-old clergyman that he devotes an entire chapter—the final one—to its exploration, which Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, calls both a summary and a challenge.

Dr. Peale offers both a new and an old solution to personal problems. Old teachings of the Bible are put into modern psychiatric form and applied to various human ills like an inferiority complex, a sense of guilt and defeatism which, he finds, sap a person's confidence. Dr. Peale doesn't exhort his readers to substitute confident faith for negative self-destroying thoughts, but instead demonstrates how to do it, particularly in the chapters on marital happiness and on meeting sorrow.

Author, lecturer, pastor . . .

Like many present-day pastors, Dr. Peale frequently deals with public affairs in his sermons and addresses. He has hailed the United Nations Charter, warned against totalitarianism either of the Right or Left, and condemned a pessimistic attitude toward the atomic bomb and development of atomic energy. His views on the New Deal, labor and communism, and his affiliation with several secular bodies have occasioned sharp criticism from some quarters and drawn warm praise from others.

A popular speaker, Dr. Peale combines a rousing sense of humor, unusual dramatic ability, and a practical business-like approach with a spiritual fervor which makes him particularly effective with an audience. After a recent talk before the Sales Executive Club of New York, he was described by some of its members as "America's most sales-minded clergyman."

In his writings and in his talks, Dr. Peale's basic theme generally is "Change your thoughts and you change your world."

"The pity," comments Dr. Peale, "is that a lot of people go through life blundering, failing, struggling along, never quite obtaining or achieving, when all can be different if they will learn and practice the simple principles of Christianity. Then, things, instead of being subtracted from them, will be added unto them. Nothing can break them down; nothing can destroy the peace, happiness and usefulness of their lives."

Lead formarion of U. S. Air Force jet planes—F-80 Shooting Stars—wings over Scottish coast on recent history-making flight from Michigan to Germany.

Jet Planes Make History

Hot pilots, hot planes find Atlantic flight a cinch

BY SAM BOAL

THE JET PILOTS, 16 of them in their special uniforms with scarlet neckerchiefs flapping in the wind, climbed into the cockpits of their tiny planes. They adjusted parachutes, pawed their "Mae Wests," switched on their radios, checked the controls, pulled on their crash helmets.

All were tense, perhaps a little tired. A lot of training, briefing and planning was behind them, there in the Michigan afternoon.

The voice of Lieut. Col. Dave Schilling — "The Chief"—in the lead F-80 grated over the radio.

"Okay, fellas," he said, "let's do it."

Flying history was about to be made: for the first time American jet planes were to try to fly across the North Atlantic. No one really knew if it could be done. The Army thought it could be; so did the Air Force. The 16 pilots had to think it could be done. But nobody knew for sure.

Now, a jet engine does not start as a conventional (pistons and gasoline) engine does. It bursts, it explodes into life. One instant it is dead; the next instant a huge, 30-yard yellowish-red flame crashes out of the jet exhaust with a terrific, long who-o-osh. The plane moves instantly. It taxis to the take-off strip. The pilot revs it up to full power, points it down the runway and it takes off.

You hear only part of the noise a jet plane makes, and the first time you hear it, it's literally incredible. The high, snarling screech is like no sound ever before heard by man. Added to this is the booming roar of the gasses bursting from the huge exhaust vent in the rear of the plane. But that part of the jet engine's noise you can not hear is the part which shatters and terrifies.

Some of this noise lies in the super-sonic zone of sound, which means that it is too high to register on the human ear. Since you can not hear it, you feel it. It throbs around you, whipping the air in waves, eerie, baleful, dreadful. Even jet ground crews, who should be used to the sound, cover their ears and scurry for shelter when a jet takes off. The firey blast from the plane can knock a man down at 150 feet, could roast him alive at 25.

But the 16 pilots who took off on their perilous, 5,000-mile journey did not hear the snarl of their motors. Flying in a jet plane is strangely silent; most of the screeching noise is left behind. The wind whistles over the plastic canopy. There is no propeller noise, no motor noise, none of that sleepy droning air travellers associate with flying.

Piloting a jet plane is quiet, remote, aloof, as aloof from the sounds of normal flight as the jet—six or seven miles up—is aloof from the earth.

The flight ahead of the 16 pilots was to take place in hops each about 700 miles long. An F-80—popularly called a Shooting Star—is designed as a fast, interceptor fighter, not as a long-range plane. Even with extra fuel tanks the maximum range is not much more than 700 miles.

The only way to describe the problems of jet flying is to say that the problems of standard flight are intensified in jets. This is partly because of the speed, partly because of the nature of the jet engine. A jet engine is fueled not by gasoline but by kerosene, and it eats it up with phenomenal hunger, which limits its range. There is a definite limit to the number of extra gallons you can squeeze aboard. Too much load and it can't take off. That is why the jets made their trip in hops which were awkward and sometimes dangerous.

The first hop was from Michigan to Maine which brought up no grave problems because the flight was over land generously sprinkled with airfields. The only real factors were distance and air navigation.

Sam Boal was PARADE's representative on the history-making flight he describes in this article. In commemorating Air Force Day, which was observed yesterday, PARADE presents this story as a description of one of the most significant achievements of the Air Force this year.

Reporter Sam Boal on jet flight.

These are the pilots of the 16 F-80 "Shooting Star" jet planes of the 56th Fighter Group, photographed before their recent ocean flight. Average age is 27 years.

The Shooting Stars took off from Selfridge Field, Mich., to begin 5,000-mile flight including stops in Maine, Labrador, Greenland, Iceland, Scotland, England, Germany.

At an English base near London, Air Marshal Sir James Robb, R.A.F. (left), greeted Lt. Col. David C. Schilling, who led the history-making jets on their dangerous flight.

F-80s arrived at their German base after covering 5,000 miles in 11 hours' flying time and claiming record of being the first jets to make an East-West Atlantic crossing.

Jets cross the ocean without mishap...

AT THE SPEED with which a Shooting Star travels (it can do 600 m.p.h., but the 16 pilots were doing 450 for fuel economy) flying in formation is almost impossible. Consequently each pilot was on his own. But the first hop was really a breeze.

The next hop, from Maine to Labrador, presented no special problem, although part of the flight was over desolate, lonely wilderness. Everyone made it.

At Labrador, we ran into six British jet pilots who were bringing their De Haviland Vampires to this country to participate in air shows. After exchanging jet gossip and some understandable bragging, the American fliers asked the Englishmen about the rugged landing coming up at Greenland—the one on which they had been so methodically instructed.

"Rough," said the Englishmen. "Jolly rough."

It was rough. A jet plane can not land any way but the way it flies: fast. A jet needs much more visibility because it is moving — possibly toward trouble—so much faster than a conventionally-powered plane. It needs a long, safe runway. Its brakes aren't as efficient, pound for pound of aircraft, as those on transports. It was the same old story. What these jets were trying to do was something they were most specifically not designed to do.

The landing strip on Greenland was one of the worst in the whole North Atlantic. It was hacked out of wilderness and rock in the early days of the war and, although the Army engineers who built it did the best they could with what they had, it was still a highly intricate landing spot. The approach was through a long, winding fjord. Slower planes could maneuver through the twistings and turnings without too much trouble, but the fast, little jets would have to dart like swallows around mountain corners. At the end of the fjord lay a small bay, dotted with icebergs gleaming blue in the bright Artic sunlight. And on the right of the bay, beginning exactly at the water's edge, was the landing strip.

It would be necessary to put the little ships down on the runway just as close to the water as possible —which meant feet, not yards. The strip was too short, but to compensate for this the engineers had constructed it on a slight upgrade which would have a braking effect on the planes.

But none of these pilots had ever before landed on an upgrade. They were used to precisely level fields, and it was on these fields they had developed their landing techniques.

Experience Did the Trick

ALL THE PILOTS were worried. Who wouldn't be? But worried or not, those hundreds of hours of flying behind them did the trick. Everyone of the 16 planes made the landing without serious mishap. A few of the boys had a little trouble, but no one and nothing got hurt.

The next leg to Iceland, over the bare, endless ice cap, presented no landing problem at the other end. The Iceland field couldn't be better. But the mental hazard of flying a one-motor plane over a seemingly interminable glacier was a considerable one.

Finally, after a little bad weather, the pilots took off, flying low over the icebergs and through the winding fjord. Then up they went, turning east, climbing 33,000 feet up into the silent stratosphere.

Except that the next hop from Iceland to nothern Scotland was entirely over water, no particular problems were encountered. The pilots were nearing the end of their journey. The really dangerous stage of the flight was behind them. They took off with noticeably lighter hearts.

Scotland to England was a snap, and their next leg—the last one—to Germany, was over country most of the boys had seen before from the cockpits of their Mustangs during World War II.

They had been assigned to Germany for maneuvers with American heavy bombers, and once there the boys went on what amounted to combat status.

The pilots themselves considered the trip to be a success. What the high brass in the Pentagon Building thought has not yet been made public. But the boys had done what they were told to do. Moreover, they were the first ones to do it. They had flown over 5,000 miles in a little under 11 hours. It had taken them almost as many days to put in that flying time, but then, they were attempting to do what no one had done before in aircraft quite unsuitable for the task. The flight proved the pilots were good. So were their planes. Nobody could ask for more.

The flight also had another effect which, one may be sure, was not lost on the policy-makers in Washington. The high whine of those jet planes over Soviet-controlled territory in Germany would be bound to have an effect; the drone of all those Forts and Super-forts had already had one. The two sounds when heard together—the jet screech and the bomber's buzzing—would certainly be heard a long distance away. Certainly as far as Moscow. THE END.

NOW-for the first time ever- you can get all the G-E fluorescent lamps you want

HOORAY! At last you can fill those empty sockets, replace blackened or burned-out lamps, go ahead with lighting modernization. For the first time since General Electric introduced the fluorescent lamp 10 years ago, G-E fluorescent lamps are available in quantity—everywhere!

We've been working at top speed, expanding production to catch up with the demand for the world's newest kind of light.

And now there is an ample supply of popular types and sizes. (Only slimline and circline fluorescent lamps are still scarce.)

So why not see your G-E lamp supplier today? He's waiting with a great big smile . . . and an armful of those G-E lamps—the lamps most people want most!

Here Come the Pros

It's a business—and a rough one to be sure—for the boys who play football for pay

BY FRANK DE BLOIS

FOR NEARLY TWENTY YEARS, college gridiron fans have looked upon professional football in much the same manner as a church ladies' aid society might view a group of gas-house workers who had suddenly interrupted their annual picnic.

The pro game, many of the wearers of the old school tie believe, somehow just doesn't belong.

Despite the cool reception accorded it in some of the nation's higher halls of learning, professional football has become a million-dollar sport. Last year the 18 teams in the game's two major leagues played before four million people and this year's prospects seem even brighter. But it has been a long, hard struggle to the top.

The first game of professional football in the U. S. was played in 1895 at Latrobe, Pa., between the neighboring towns of Latrobe and Jeannette. It was won by Latrobe, 12 to 0, and—according to historians of the sport—the game lay dormant after this singularly unspectacular contest until 1902, when Connie Mack organized the Philadelphia Athletics professional football team from a nucleus supplied by baseball players employed on his Athletics of the diamond. Mack claimed the world's professional championship after his team defeated Pittsburgh whose fullback was Christy Mathewson.

The American Professional Football Association was formed in 1920, and two years later its name was changed to the National Football League. In 1925 the new league received its first big bonanza when a franchise was granted to the New York Giants, and Red Grange, the greatest college football star of his era, signed to play with the Chicago Bears. In 1944, football's second big league—the All-America Football Conference—was formed.

Among those who know their football, many prefer the fast, high-scoring pro game to the slower college sport. The professionals believe in wide-open attack and usually build their teams around a star forward passer like Washington's Sammy Baugh, Chicago's Sid Luckman or Cleveland's Otto Graham. In contrast, 90 per cent of college football is concentrated on ground plays.

Both college and professional football have had their bright particular heroes. Although neither Red Grange nor Tom Harmon ever attained the heights as a pro he had scaled in college, many stars have surpassed their college records when they began to play for pay. Among these were Baugh, Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers, and Ken Strong, who starred for several teams.

The devotion of professional fans to a player is illuminated by an incident that took place during a game between the Staten Island Stapletons, for whom Strong starred in the early 1930s, and the New York Giants in the tiny Staten Island stadium where the spectators almost overflowed onto the field.

Spectator to the Rescue

ON THIS OCCASION Strong was attempting to step out of bounds with the ball when he was hit by Ray Flaherty, then a Giant end, who unaccountably began to throttle the pride of the Stapletons.

"Leggo," gargled Strong.

"Then stop slugging me with your free hand," retorted Flaherty, grimly tightening his grip."

Non-plussed, panting and pop-eyed with pain, Strong looked up to discover that a kindly-looking but determined old lady in the stands was cracking his opponent over the head with her folded umbrella.

Bob Crosby, rehearsing here with Dinah Shore, began his career as a singer, later led a Dixieland jazz band. Now he has own show on CBS.

The Other Crosby

Easy-going Brother Bob wants to be known as a man who gets along without any help.

BOB CROSBY BEGAN his professional life as a singer at a dance marathon in his native Spokane—and was something less than a roaring sensation. He tripped over the mike wires on his way to the stand, garbled the lines of his first three songs and puzzled his audience by standing as rigid as a totem pole with his hands clamped to his sides.

"I had to," he recalls, "I had forgotten my suspenders."

Today, Bing Crosby's kid brother has progressed to a point where even Bing recognizes him as a blood relation. At 34, the younger Crosby is a big boy now. He's a family man with three children and a home in California, he runs his own radio show (CBS, Monday through Friday, 7:30 p.m., E.D.S.T.), his recordings are almost as popular as Bing's, his income runs well into six figures a year and, according to his press agent,

Far from the old haunts in New Orleans where Bob's first band got its start, his "Club 15" group now rehearses in plush Hollywood setting.

Like Brother Bing, Bob is a believer in a large family. His now numbers five and includes that rarity in a Crosby home, a girl. Left to right: Bob; Cathleen, 8; Christopher, 5; wife June; and Robert, 3. Crosbys live in large home "with a large mortgage" near Bel Air, Cal.

he even reads the classics. "Unfortunately," he occasionally laments, "I'm still just Bing Crosby's brother to millions."

"Few people know it," he said recently, "but actually Bing never even got me a job, although I guess he was indirectly responsible for my landing with Anson Weeks in 1933, because Anson knew that Bing had a brother who also sang, so he sent for me. I was picking cucumbers in Spokane when I got the call."

Bob lasted three days with Weeks, who sent him back home for more practice. The following year he was rehired by Weeks and later transferred to Tommy Dorsey's band at Glen Island, N. Y. By this time he was being billed as Bing Crosby's brother, a sobriquet which did him no harm at the box office.

"Indirectly," he recalls, "Bing helped me all right. But I never went to him for help. Why, I never even saw him for nearly 15 years. He was 12 years older than me, you know, and when we were kids I used to think he was my father.

"Then, when I was singing with Dorsey, we played Hollywood and I went around one night to see Bing. 'How are you, son?' he said when he opened the door, 'how're the folks?' That was all he said to me for a week. That boy's real casual."

In 1936, Bob was singing at the Paramount Theater in New York when he was accosted by eleven unkempt musicians who asked him to lead their band for them. He agreed, and "Bob Crosby and the Bobcats" were born the next day at 4 a.m.

The Bobcats played the old hot jazz of New Orleans and included in their number some of the best white musicians of the times. "They're all busted up now," Bob says. "Irving Fazzola, our clarinet, is back in New Orleans. Bob Haggert, the bass, is writing commercials, and Eddie Miller, sax, is playing for 20th Century Fox. Billy Butterfield, our old trumpet, is playing down at Nick's in New York's Greenwich Village."

"Real Swell for People Who Dance"

CROSBY'S NEW BAND—"it's really Jerry Gray's band"—says Bob—is a lot different from the Bobcats. "We play it sweet now, not square, but just real sweet for people who dance."

The persistence in comparing him to Bing still annoys Bob. "You know," he says, "for 12 years I tried to disassociate myself from Bing. Instead of singing, I tried to be a band leader. Then nobody could say that Bing was a better band leader than me because he didn't lead a band at all. But now I'm singing again—and I'm going to keep doing it. After all, the only real difference between Bing and me is a few million dollars and a full head of hair—and I'm the guy with the hair."

"I'll tell you," Bob says, "on my tombstone I want them to write: 'Here lies Bob Crosby who once stood on his own feet.'"

Bob's arranger, and "Club 15" leader is Jerry Gray. Their show is aired five nights a week.

In sand-trap, Bob swings mean iron. He golfs in low 80s, plays fast set of tennis, squash.

At race track, Bob, his wife and Bing pose for one of their rare shots together. THE END.

"Stay in the lane," a basic traffic safety rule, is illustrated in spectacular fashion by a canine performer trained by Policeman Ernest E. Pressley of Charlotte, N. C.

Capering canines help traffic cop teach children how to be careful

KIDS AND DOGS have a natural affinity for each other, and a traffic cop who loves both has turned this mutual attraction to good account. As a result, thousands of youngsters in the South now know as much about traffic safety as they do about the three R's.

Ernest E. Pressley, a veteran Charlotte, N. C., traffic officer, and his seven trained dogs make safety education literally a circus. His canine stars demonstrate traffic safety rules at free shows staged for school children. On a "street corner" marked off on the school playground, the dogs wait for traffic signals, simulate erring jaywalkers or push baby carriages along pedestrian lanes.

Pressley is on leave from the police department, and the "circus" is sponsored by the North Carolina State Automobile Association. His Junior Traffic Safety Club has more than 70,000 members in the state, which proves that, in North North Carolina, safety rates high.

Rush for the show is on as children arrive in school buses for performance in Ashboro, N. C. School and police authorities cooperate with Pressley in "booking" his show.

In this tableau, the dogs mimic actions of humans, proceed to show onlookers how to behave in traffic.

High dive is a feature of show. Pressley first thought of circus idea while recuperating from a heart ailment.

After show, Pressley urges youngsters to join safety club. To enroll, they must score 100 on test. THE END.

Traffic safety lessons are more readily accepted by spectators when painlessly served as entertainment.

Dogs demonstrate how "mother" should wheel carriage in safety zone. Circus was started with one dog.

Cheese tart shells filled with coral shrimp and pale green limas in savory sauce.

Shrimp is Sure to Please When it's in Tasty Shells

IF YOU FOLLOW THIS RECIPE exactly you'll have one of the prettiest dishes you ever served—and one of the most delicious. Remember it the next time you are planning a company luncheon or Sunday night supper. And keep it in mind whenever you are at a loss as to what to do with left-overs. For example, if you have enough ham to make a cup or so, diced, and enough cooked vegetables to fill two cups, add them to the savory sauce and serve the mixture in the cheese tart shells. Left-over chicken, with carrots and celery, is a fine combination, too, or a mixture of flaked cooked fish, green beans and corn. Just inventory your refrigerator, and then go ahead and create your own masterpiece!

As for that company luncheon or supper, let's go ahead and plan the rest of the menu. Suppose we begin with chilled, diced melon sprinkled with lime juice. Next, our recipe for today, plus a crisp salad, black olives and gherkins. For dessert, ice cream, cookies made with cake mix, and finally coffee or tea.

CREAMED SHRIMP AND LIMA BEANS IN CHEESE TART SHELLS

⅓ cup butter or margarine
6 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon marjoram
1 teaspoon paprika
3 cups milk
2 cups cooked lima beans
2 5½-oz. cans shrimp
Salt and pepper
6 Cheese Tart Shells*

Melt butter or margarine; blend in flour, marjoram and paprika. Add milk; stir until thickened. Cover and cook over hot water 10 minutes. Add lima beans and shrimp. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve in tart shells. Yield: 6 servings.

Cheese Tart Shells

Prepare one package pie crust mix as directed on package. Roll out in oblong. Sprinkle ½-cup grated American cheddar cheese over surface. Fold in thirds. Roll out ⅛-inch thick. Press into six, tart-shell pans. Prick surface with fork. Bake in hot oven, 425° F., 10 to 12 minutes. Remove from pans.

HOUSEHOLD MITTS of a thousand uses are designed to provide the proper protection whether the task is handling frozen food, roasting, canning, sterilizing baby's bottles or heater tending. Available in various colors and patterns, the mitts are washable, heat and steam resistant, and equipped with convenient hang loops. Each mitt is interchangeable for left or right hand and protects the wrist, too.

ALL-PLASTIC TRUMPET has tonal quality so true that it's difficult to distinguish from standard brass instrument. While not intended to seriously compete with latter, its low cost puts it within reach of every child-learner and should permit the broadening of school music programs.

ELBOW JOINT IN THE HANDLE gives this mop unique advantages. It allows it to be maneuvered to reach under radiators and beds, eliminates necessity of bending, crouching or twisting the body. In straight position, the mop extends 55 inches, so that moldings and ceilings are easy to reach.

Check these other conveniences now on market

FOR OUTDOORSMEN, a new kind of streamlined, circular tent has been devised. Made of nylon throughout, it is both water-and-wind and bug-and-snake proof. All one piece, including the flooring, it has a perimeter of 25 feet, 8 inches, sleeps two comfortably and still has room for duffel. Its self-supporting framework is collapsible, lightweight, pronged aluminum and needs no tree to hold it up or pegs to keep it down. Ventilation is provided through flap-covered nylon mesh windows and an entrance flap that can be zipped open and closed from inside or out. The whole tent rolls up into a carrying bag 36 inches long and weighing 9½ pounds.

AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC RANGE has individually lighted, push-button controls. "Talking colors" light the transparent push-buttons so the home-maker can identify at a glance the heat position of the four cooking units and the oven. The push-button control panel is located so that lighted buttons are fully visible above the utensils in use on the range's surface.

HOME DISPENSER for paper cups is a bathroom convenience designed to eliminate the family glass which stands unprotected on the washstand and is a possible health hazard as well as an eyesore. Affixed without screws to any wall, it offers a fresh paper cup for every drink at a total cost of just a fraction of a penny per cup.

MATCH YOUR WITS WITH TEEN-AGERS Every Monday at 8:30 P.M., E.D.S.T., voluble Ben Grauer and an erudite panel of five teen-agers sit down under the glaring lights of an NBC television studio to explore facts about the United States. The youngsters on the program, "Americana," do pretty well in supplying correct answers to Grauer's questions. Here are ten rather average puzzlers. How well can you do? Eight correct is excellent, five average.

1 A widely-used expression is "Like Grant took Richmond." What's wrong with this expression?

2 The Liberty Bell in Philadelphia cracked in July, 1835. For whom was it being tolled?

3 How did Theodore Roosevelt's Progressive Party in 1912 get its name, the "Bull Moose?"

4 In Baseball, why is the National League referred to as the senior league, while the American League is called the junior circuit?

5 There are many local areas in the United States known by famous names. Where would you look for the locality known as Nob Hill?

6 In the famous American painting, "The Spirit of '76," how many persons do you see?

7 Connecticut is generally known as the "Nutmeg State." How do you think it got its name?

8 What entertainer popularized "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight?"

9 Who, in early U. S. history, were described as "Minutemen," and why were they so called?

10 Is it permissible, under any condition, to fly another ensign above the American flag?

QUIZ ANSWERS

1. It is grammatically incorrect, and the implication that Richmond was easily taken is false. 2. Chief Justice Marshall who died two days earlier in Philadelphia. 3. In answer to a question, "How do you feel?", T.R. said, "Like a bull moose." 4. The National League was formed in 1876, the American in 1901. 5. In San Francisco. 6. There are more than the apparent four. In the background stands a regiment of men. 7. In early colonial days, the Yankees of Connecticut were accused of making wooden nutmegs and selling them as the real thing. 8. Marie Dressler. 9. A group of Revolutionary patriots ready to fight on a "minute's notice." 10. Yes. The church pennant of the Navy. THE END.

HOW TO # LEARN TO LIVE AGAIN

FOREWORD: This is an outspoken attempt to discuss, with complete frankness, a condition that has become one of the world's most widespread human maladies . . . constipation. A delicate subject at best, it has been under medical and scientific scrutiny for years. We believe we owe it to those who suffer from it, to publish these pertinent facts.

UNION PHARMACEUTICAL CO., INC.

• • • •

The pace of modern living has been blamed for many things. And those who have blamed it have been very often right.

Our lives today have become so intricate, so complicated with daily problems our grandparents never knew existed, that it is little wonder so many long for the "good old days"—when life was simple, and hustle-and-bustle unknown.

We have even envied the caveman—who took life and death as he found it, ate his food raw, and, as the saying goes, "got plenty of roughage" in his diet.

Doctors know that the whole digestive system is strongly influenced by proper food, regularity and rest.

Their ideal "prescription" for maintaining natural elimination is: (a) Eat a balanced diet at regular hours; (b) Drink plenty of water daily; (c) Get at least 8 hours sleep; (d) Take regular exercise; (e) Always obey the urge to eliminate waste; (f) Don't worry or fret over problems you cannot immediately solve.

Few of us, indeed, obey these health commandments. Worst of all, we let worry get the better of us almost daily.

Thus, it is said, civilization has been the underlying cause of most constipation – because today's scanty, hurriedly eaten meals do not supply the bulk necessary to proper elimination, and physical exercise is limited to an occasional dip in the ocean or a weekly round of golf.

Hence: Constipation!

• • • •

Actually, there are several types of constipation, springing from a variety of causes. Two basic types are common:

1. The organic type, requiring skilled medical care.
2. The "functional" type, requiring wise mechanical correction.

The first type, obviously, is a doctor's problem. No mere "laxative" is enough to be of lasting benefit here.

But the second type, functional in nature, in which the intestines fail to do their work properly, can often be justly blamed on the nerve-wracking life we lead.

The end of each day leaves us so tense, so nervously exhausted, that every muscle feels tight — INCLUDING THE INTESTINAL MUSCLES. IN FACT, IT HAS BEEN SAID, THE WHOLE HUMAN DIGESTIVE SYSTEM CAN BE ALMOST LITERALLY "TIED IN A KNOT" BY SHEER NERVOUS TENSION.

• • • •

Stop and think, for a moment, how you spend an average day.

Instead of obeying the common sense health commandments of the medical profession, here is what happens:

You rise in the morning; often startled out of a sound sleep by the alarm-clock or a sudden knock on your door.

You rush to dress. You gulp breakfast, or all too often skip it. You rush for a train or bus, or to get the children off to school. Then the office, or a mad race against time – housecleaning, shopping, cooking, washing, a thousand-and-one daily tasks no caveman nor grandparent was ever faced with. Lunch? You hadn't time; or at best you "grabbed a sandwich."

If you were lucky, you read or lay down for half-an-hour in the afternoon. Then comes the wind-up of the daylight hours. Children home. Trains to catch or meet. Dinner to prepare. Dishes to wash. And hurry—you're playing bridge this evening.

Finally you fall into bed – knowing that tomorrow you will repeat the same frantic pattern. Strain, pressure, rush, hurry. Every muscle straining to go faster, faster.

That's the answer to the second type of constipation. Sheer nerve-ridden muscular tension that prevents the intestines from properly doing their work.

This "rush and hurry" habit slows the intestines to a walk.

No wonder 4 out of 5 suffer from constipation.

• • • •

But this muscular tension is only the beginning. You can rush and hurry for years, and except for the occasional type of sluggishness, feel no real ill effect.

But sooner or later, you begin to realize that your intestinal elimination is getting more and more out of whack.

You're just rushed, you think—that's all. You haven't taken the time to attend to this function. Wastes remain too long in the lower intestinal tract. Something must be done about it – fast.

So, to get quick action, you take the kind of harsh, drug-type laxative that "works fast." And you get two kinds of results.

You get the fast action, of course.

But the faster you get it, the more likely you are to start a chain of circumstances that in time can make you a chronic sufferer.

For the faster many of these drugs act, the more probable it is that they contain harsh chemicals, scratchy particles, or violent purges which may (a) bring on a digestive disturbance; (b) irritate an already over-sensitive intestinal tract; (c) cause a further slackening of intestinal activity.

It is self-evident that by doing this same thing, again and again, first at occasional intervals and then with increasing frequency, one can bring on a chronic condition calling for long and expensive medical treatment.

• • • •

This is not to imply that all laxatives cause this unfortunate result. There are many products available through your doctor or druggist, which do not have all of these drawbacks.

But it is a fact that many of the pills, liquids and salts in common use today contain irritating, griping, violent-acting ingredients—designed for fast one-time action—which if persisted in will form the vicious circle of dosage and more dosage.

No harsh "laxative," in the ordinary sense of the word, can overcome this chronic condition nor break this vicious circle.

The opposite kind of product—which acts without griping, irritation, scratching or violent purging—is called for in cases like these.

• • • •

What is this opposite kind of product?

Let's review the requirements and see.

Obviously, it must contain no ingredient that can unduly aggravate the already over-sensitive intestinal muscular condition.

—Therefore, it should contain no harsh chemicals, purgatives, seeds or scratchy roughage.

Obviously, it must encourage the muscles of the intestinal tract to do their work in their own natural way, thus helping to reestablish the functional rhythm which every normal human being should have.

—Therefore, it should afford some means of gently and mechanically urging the intestinal muscles to self-regulated action.

Obviously, it must not interfere with absorption of essential body elements which normally are retained in the intestines.

—Therefore (unlike improperly taken mineral oils) it should allow complete absorption of the essential Vitamin A.

Obviously, it must contain a bland mass bulkage which will not interfere with the resumption of the normal intestinal rhythm, and which will give the expulsion muscles at the end of the intestinal tract something to work on.

—Therefore, it should expand, on contact with water and the digestive juices, into a smooth mass called "softage" that glides easily along the intestinal wall.

This "opposite" type of product must be pleasant, efficient and economical to take. It must produce no violence, pain, or embarrassing urgency. And it must be sufficiently positive in action to relieve constipation promptly—not with "laxative" speed but within 24 hours or less.

This type of product is both safe and effective in helping to correct constipation.

All of these requirements are met by Saraka, recommended and prescribed by thousands of physicians for the past 15 years.

• • • •

It is proper, of course, to class Saraka in the so-called laxative field. But, Saraka does not (in the accepted sense) give the laxative type of results.

On the contrary, Saraka is the direct opposite of the harsher types of laxatives designed to quickly overcome a temporary condition—preparations whose habitual use can so aggravate this condition that "the remedy is worse than the ill." Saraka starts immediately to aid in the restoration of the functional rhythm to which the intestines were accustomed, before the fast pace of modern living threw them off the track.

Here are the facts about Saraka:

1. It forms bland, gliding "softage," 20 times its original bulk, which with gentle persistence allows the weakened, irritated or tensed-up intestines to get back to work as soon as they are able to do so.
2. It works so pleasantly that you forget you have taken anything at all—no griping, no urgency.
3. It acts with satisfying thoroughness; you feel the pleasant relief that comes with regular elimination.
4. It leaves no exhausting after-effect.
5. It usually acts with greater promptness than products that depend solely on bulk, mass or roughage for effect.
6. Because of its expansion and efficiency, it is amazingly economical to use.

This last point deserves special mention. A single teaspoonful of Saraka expands to many times its original size. This is due to one of its vegetable ingredients called bassorin. Bassorin has three times the expansion power of plantago (psyllium seed); ten times that of agar; and twenty times that of bran. Bassorin, together with a vegetable intestinal urger called frangula, produces the "bulk plus motility," or mass plus gentle urging, for which Saraka is famous. Together, these two ingredients bring to bear on the intestines a balanced combination which results in more normal, more natural, more regular elimination.

• • • •

We need not point out the sense of well-being, of mental satisfaction, of aliveness and health, which this regularity brings about in you.

This feeling "sticks out all over you"; makes you feel as though you look better too. A haggard, dragged-out appearance is regarded as the by-product of harsh types of laxatives. Saraka's by-product is the feeling of contentment that comes from satisfactory elimination.

We believe that constipation sufferers will welcome this information. Some, of course, should consult a physician. However, if you find in Saraka the relief you have longed for, we are willing to risk the criticisms of those who might protest that to discuss such a subject in print is unseemly.

Report to Berlin: German student-teacher Fraulein Gudrun Hylla (right) studies American children at New York's Bank Street School. She will teach German children democracy.

Teacher From Berlin

A visiting German finds that American democracy is rooted in the healthy independence of our children

THREE YEARS AGO, for the second time in this century, a ruthless, goose-stepping Germany was pounded into submission at the cost of a long and bloody war. It must not happen again.

To a large degree, the Nazis of World War II were the children who grew up in the wake of World War I. If civilization is to be spared a new crop of young Nazis, the new generation of Germans will have to be led away from the Teutonic admiration of Kaisers and Hitlers, into the ways of tolerance and democracy. What Germans, particularly those who will train Germany's children, think about democracy will determine what kind of a Germany we will have.

One of those who will importantly influence young Germany is a 34 year old Berlin student-teacher, Fraulein Gudrun Hylla, now in the United States on a special, one-year visa to study child education in a democracy.

Selected through the U. S. Military Government in Germany, and provided with travel funds by the American Association of University Women, the comely, serious-minded fraulein is observing American children on a $40-a-month scholarship at New York City's noted Bank Street School in polyglot Greenwich Village.

Can American ideas be transplanted to Germany? Miss Hylla admits it will be difficult. The only American children present-day Germans have seen are the families of G.I.s and civilian officials. When the first, well-fed American children arrived in gaunt, bomb-wrecked Berlin, the reception was cold. German hausfrauen, already convinced that the American G.I. is a loud-mouthed, insensitive millionaire, watched stonily as uninhibited American youngsters capered through the railroad station, shouting, laughing and jumping up to their fathers.

Germans were Shocked

GERMANS, trained to cringe before superiors and to demand docile and strict obedience from subordinates, were shocked. "How undisciplined," they muttered. "No wonder Americans are a wild lot!" The Nazis, they thought, were right.

Fraulein Hylla, who met Americans in America 12 years ago when her father was a visiting professor at Columbia University, will try to correct the impression when she goes back to Germany next year.

"Those Berlin housewives do not understand," says Fraulein Hylla soberly. "Our German children do not know independence. Like so many of their fathers, they are accustomed to taking orders. American children seem undisciplined. Actually, it is that American parents do not demand subordination. This seldom happens in Germany."

Respect for rights of individuals

SINCE ARRIVING from Bremerhaven aboard the the former Liberty ship Marine Marlin, along with displaced persons from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Lithuania, Finland and Germany, Fraulein Hylla is re-seeing a world that, for Germans, was blacked out by Hitler.

Rooming on Riverside Drive in New York with Dr. Agnes Snyder, an American teacher who served last year in Germany and who made arrangements for the German teacher to come over here, she is putting in 16 to 18 hours a day visiting play schools, day schools, Parent-Teachers Associations and taking notes on the methods of the Bank Street School. During the summer, she has taken further studies at Columbia University, attended the week-long convention of the International Association for Childhood Education in St. Louis, Mo., the state-wide A.C.E. meeting in Utica, N. Y., and visited pre-war friends in Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Your children are, indeed, much more active than German children," she says. "I even go so far as to say that I almost never have seen American children just sitting — a common sight in Germany today. In schools, your children paint more than German children do. They do much more block-building with big blocks, using the whole body with the most vigorous movements.

"I seldom find children absorbed in tiny playthings. They prefer big playthings, a typical American characteristic perhaps. Bicycles, push-carts, and wheel barrows are favored.

"I am especially impressed by the wide use made by teachers of current events. Newspapers and magazines are read in classrooms; events of the day are freely discussed; opinions are asked for. Imagine this happening in Hitler Germany! Even now, it is difficult. The newspapers are scarce, and magazines are precious to adults.

"This may account for the free and easy attitude towards the grown-ups' world. American children talk in a much-easier-going way, and more independently of adults. They are very generous, and make friends so easily. I believe the American children have great confidence in grown-ups; indeed, they believe them.

"While visiting a sixth grade in a public school, I found myself alone with the children when the teacher had to attend a conference. The children quickly gathered around me and offered to show me around while they talked of their work in the group, their duties, and their daily life. They were unafraid.

Children Want to Be Independent

ALL THESE FACTORS make your children self-confident, not self-assertive, as some Europeans have declared. Your children want to be independent. Quite unconsciously, they are demanding the rights and enjoying the liberties of freedom in a democracy. Dictators cannot rise from such an environment. That is what the German children, and the German people, must learn. That is what I must teach."

The German girl is amazed at the casual generosity of a land of plenty. In upstate New York, two girls whom she met at a child forum took a long look at her, and remarked matter-of-factly, "You must need some clothes," then insisted on giving her two dresses and a coat.

An eager student in a democracy, German teacher Hylla strolls through New York's Rockefeller Center on way to child-training forum.

Game at Brooklyn's Ebbets Field introduced Fraulein Hylla to American outlet for emotion. "What forceful language!", she said.

is answer to Hitler . . .

In St. Louis, someone who noticed she was bare-headed anonymously mailed her a feathered toque. In Harlem, New York's sprawling, poverty-stricken Negro section, where she talked with a group of five-year-olds in the Utopia School, the children wanted to know where she had come from. When she said "Germany," they nodded gravely and in a chorus announced, "Oh yes, we are collecting to send clothes to German children."

She finds that the Americans with whom she talks no longer speak of Europe as a faraway continent, separated from the United States by thousands of miles of ocean. European countries are clearly defined, geographically and politically. Conversations are no longer fragmentary. People want to talk about the world, and with incisive opinions.

"Even though one senses," she says, "the slight uneasiness in adults' minds—a faint reflection of the insecurity we feel in Germany—the faces of the children here shine with vitality and pleasure. Negro children, children from China and the Indies, sharp and keen-looking little Italians, rose-cheeked, blond types with blue eyes who might be Scandinavians, black-eyed and curly-haired Jewish youngsters — they all are, or quickly become, assimilated in America."

In trying to understand us (in Berlin, her family was a close friend of Kaethe Kollwitz, the anti-Nazi woman artist who died recently), she is avidly reading our newspapers, went to see the movie "Gentleman's Agreement" with its discussion of anti-Semitism, which she thinks is too mild. "It is so soft and, after all, we Germans saw men and women murdered for their beliefs." She frowns on the popularity of toy guns. In Germany, she says, teachers are making a determined effort to take warlike toys away from children.

She likes better the popularity of creative games using clay, paper, wood and sand. "On the whole, children here have much more opportunity to use raw materials," she says wryly.

When she returns home, Fraulein Hylla will take back a scarred china dog. "Exactly the thing to match Berlin," she says. Berlin, like the world, can't afford more Hitlers. THE END

says Don Ameche

Famous Motion Picture Star and President of the Los Angeles Dons, All-America Football Conference.

"Back in Wisconsin where I come from," says Don Ameche, "folks are good judges of fine beer. And they ought to be, for Milwaukee is the brewing capital of the world, home of America's finest beer. So, with our choice of the choicest, when I tell you that Blatz is Milwaukee's finest beer, you can believe me. I lived in Milwaukee and I ought to know."

"Out here in Hollywood," Don Ameche says, "I always keep Blatz in the refrigerator... so I can treat my friends to true Milwaukee hospitality—and the refreshing flavor of America's finest beer!"

"Three Musketeers" Offers Thrills, Color

Lana Turner, Gene Kelly play leads in newest version

WHEN ALEXANDER DUMAS wrote "The Three Musketeers," his rollicking 17th century adventure story, he made an impetuous young blade named D'Artagnan its central figure and hero. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has revamped author Dumas a bit. In its brand new, two-million-dollar Technicolor version of the classic, Lana Turner gets top billing and D'Artagnan, played by Gene Kelly, comes in second.

The role of the glamorous adventuress, Lady DeWinter, is one more step up the dramatic ladder for Miss Turner, who acts well and looks better in some breathtaking costumes. She originally had turned down the part as too unsympathetic. Her later decision to play it was wise.

"Musketeers" is no newcomer to the screen. Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., was starred in a silent version in 1921; Walter Abel played the lead in a talking production in 1936 and, three years later, Don Ameche and the Ritz Brothers turned out a comic version.

The latest presentation claims distinction by reason of its close adherence to the Dumas script and its distinctive cast—Miss Turner, Mr. Kelly, June Allyson, Van Heflin, Angela Lansbury, Frank Morgan, Vincent Price, Keenan Wynn and others. The film took about 14 months to make, but many, many months of painstaking research preceded that. More than 1,135 opulent costumes were designed. Seventeenth-century rooms, furniture, dishes, glassware, muskets and carriages were recreated by skilled craftsmen. The 1948 Musketeers even got plastic armor suits weighing but ten pounds apiece.

Done in the Fairbanks Manner

As D'Artagnan, Gene Kelly is often reminiscent of Douglas Fairbanks in the lithe, graceful manner in which he rides, fights, leaps over bannisters to elude pursuers. Doubtless, his dance training is responsible in great part for his effortless timing.

For those who like historical romance, with added color and action, "The Three Musketeers" is a treat.

His dancing skill serves nimble-footed Gene Kelly well: role of D'Artagnan called for him to leap and bound through duels and fights in the true Douglas Fairbanks tradition.

D'Artagnan undertakes to trick the beautiful but wicked Lady DeWinter into revealing her tie with Richelieu.

Through Constance, Queen's seamstress (June Allyson), D'Artagnan meets Queen (Angela Lansbury), aids her.

Secret wedding climaxes love of D'Artagnan for Constance. He sends her away to avoid Richelieu's revenge.

After English invasion of France, Lady DeWinter goes abroad, is jailed with Constance as keeper. Both die.

Richelieu is forced to grant freedom to D'Artagnan and his friends when they show proof of his villainy. THE END.

Which of these Best-Sellers do you want

for just a 3¢ stamp WITH DOLLAR BOOK CLUB MEMBERSHIP

BY joining the Dollar Book Club, you may have your choice of any one of the books described here for just a 3-cent stamp! And—as a further demonstration of Dollar Book Club values—you may choose as many more as you wish for your current selections at only $1.00 each. These best-selling books are typical of the selections received by members. You save 60% to 75% from the retail prices of the same books in the publishers' editions. Choose now the book you want for 3¢, also your first $1.00 selection and mail the coupon below.

THE GOLDEN HAWK by Frank Yerby

HERE's even more color, sweep and excitement than The Foxes of Harrow—the tale of a bold buccaneer and the wild-cat beauty who fought and loved him! Exotic passion in the pirate-infested, gold-laden Caribbean Sea of the 17th Century.

YANKEE PASHA by Edison Marshall

FROM the harbors of Salem to the harems of Tartary, this fighting Yankee sought his kidnapped bride—and found a new kind of love. Which would you choose—a lovely Puritan, or a harem spitfire? Here's a magnificent, swashbuckling story!

THE QUEEN'S PHYSICIAN by Edgar Maass

WHAT did the bewitching queen really want—the Doctor's cure . . . or the Doctor? Here is true history as lively and exciting as Forever Amber—moving across the glittering, intrigue-ridden royal court of 18th century Denmark.

COLORADO by Louis Bromfield

THE unforgettable love story of beautiful Mlle. da Ponte, otherwise known as Bridget Moore, told against the background of Colorado's frontier days. Filled with excitement and color and fascinating people—it's Louis Bromfield's newest best-seller.

ANNIE JORDAN by Mary Brinker Post

THE heart-warming story of a girl who learned at an early age that nothing in life comes easy, especially to a humble girl in love with the handsome son of a prominent family. How this red-head fought her way to happiness makes a delightful novel.

THE BISHOP'S MANTLE by Agnes Turnbull

THE distinguished best-seller that takes you behind the scenes of a great fashionable city church and into the life of its brilliant and handsome young minister, who was a target for every lonely woman and every mother with a marriageable daughter!

HEY, MALE PEOPLE! RAK FOUND OUT YOU'RE STILL AROUND! HE'S COMING HERE ON THE DOUBLE! I'M SORRY LIKE SIXTY!

IN THAT CASE, LET'S STEP OUT AND GREET THE HAPPINESS BOY!

I THOUGHT SO! FANCY! YOU'VE BEEN HIDING THEM!

WRONG STEER, RAK! WE FOUND THESE QUARTERS AND HOLED IN!

...SO YOU COULD SNEAK OVER TO SEE FANCY!

WE STAYED TO RUSTLE A STAKE BEFORE WE HIT THE BEACH OR THE JUNGLE!

WELL, GET GOING NOW BEFORE I KNOCK YOU DOWN AGAIN!

DID YOU BRING YOUR GANG THIS TIME BECAUSE YOU KNEW MY ARMS WOULDN'T BE FULL OF BEACH GEAR?

THROW THESE TRAMPS--

MOGIS! MOGIS!

I'M COMIN' IN THAT JUNGLE AFTER YOU, YOU SNEAKIN' DOGS!

IT TAKES GUTS TO WALK INTO THE BRUSH ALONE LIKE THAT! WHO WAS THE STICKER MEANT TO HIT—AND WHAT ARE MOGIS?

THE MOGIS ARE NATIVES RAK HAS BEEN FEUDING WITH—AND THE SWORD WAS THROWN AS A WARNING—THEY DON'T MISS!

WELL, I GUESS THAT'S NONE OF OUR BUSINESS—SO HAP AND I MIGHT AS WELL SHOVE OFF...

I DON'T LIKE TO BE A BIG SIS, BUT I WILL BREATHE A LOT EASIER IF YOU CAN STICK AROUND AWHILE...

IT'S COMFORTING TO A GIRL TO BE ABLE TO LEAN ON A MAN WHO HAS BEEN THROUGH THE MILL—LIKE YOU, HAPPY BOY!
